ANOTHER COMEBACK EFFORT FALLS SHORT

Luke Musgrave is toppled by Pittsburgh defenders in another game where the Packers attempted a comeback only to have it fall short. At 3-6, the next game against the Chargers could be the defining moment for the 2023-24 season.

Green Bay's late push to win the game came up short, as quarterback Jordan Love was intercepted by Pittsburgh Steelers' defensive back Damontae Kazee to give the Steelers a 23-19 victory in Pittsburgh on Nov. 12.

Down four with 59 seconds to go in the game, Love and the Packers' offense marched down the field on the back of a 46-yard completion to Jayden Reed, an eight-yard rush from Love and an 11-yard reception from A.J. Dillon. With three seconds left in the game from the Steelers' 16-yard line, Love dropped back and forced a throw to Christian Watson resulting in the game-sealing interception.

"Last play of the game, I tried to take a shot to the end zone and dialed up a play that we work all of the time in practice," said Love, on the last play of the game. "We were just trying to get a shot right in line to Christian and the DB was able to jump in front of the route and make a pick."

Even though the team lost, Love continued to show traits of why Green Bay selected him in the first round of the 2020 NFL Draft. The Utah State alum completed 21-of-40 pass attempts for 289 yards and two touchdowns. Running backs Aaron Jones and Dillon split 22 carries, with Jones rushing for 35 yards and Dillon rushing for 70. Jones added another 19 yards through the air on four receptions.

Reed was the biggest benefactor of Love's day, as he caught five passes for 84 yards and one touchdown. Romeo Doubs was the recipient of Love's other touchdown, as he finished the game with three catches for 31 yards and one touchdown.

With defensive starters Jaire Alexander and Quay Walker out for the

T.J. Watt made NFL history Nov. 12 against the Green Bay Packers, surpassing older brother J.J. Watt for second all-time for most career sacks in the first 100 games of a career. He sacked Jordan Love in the second quarter to top his brother's mark. T.J. game with injuries, Green Bay held Steelers' quarterback Kenny Pickett to just 126 yards and no touchdowns. It was the run defense that struggled though, as both Steelers running backs, Najee Harris and Jaylen Warren, found the end zone. In total, Pittsburgh rushed for 205, with Warren recording 101 and Harris recording 82.

Much like the interception to end the game, earlier in the fourth quarter, Green Bay, down 23-19, faced a second-and-nine from the Steelers' 14-yard line. Love dropped back to pass and lofted a pass down the left sideline intended for Watson. The ball was tipped by a Steelers defender before being intercepted by defensive back Keanu Neal.

"It is very frustrating," said Love, on the continued turnovers late in fourth quarters this year. "We have been put in this situation a lot of times, and we have not found a way to win it. So yeah, it is frustrating, but we just have to find a way - dig deeper. But it comes down to so many different plays throughout the course of the game that if we can execute better and take advantage of some of those situations, I don't think we will put ourselves into this situation at the end of the game."

The game plan late could have been different though as Pittsburgh blocked an extra point following Reed's touchdown. Assuming Anders Carlson makes that extra point, Green Bay is probably playing for the tie and kicking a game-tying field goal as time expired, as opposed to forcing a pass to the end zone.

With the Chicago Bears beating the Carolina Panthers on Nov. 9, the Bears moved a half of a game back of Green Bay with a 3-7 record. On top of that, Green Bay is currently slotted in for the sixth draft selection in the 2024 NFL Draft and the New York Times Playoff Simulator currently gives the Packers a 9% chance to make the postseason.

NOTEBOOK

Packers will have opportunities to score on Chargers

By JACOB WESTENDORF
Green & Gold Express

Packers' offense vs. Chargers' defense

Green Bay did not win Sunday against the Steelers, but it'd be hard to come away from that game feeling anything other than encouraged on the offense.

Sure, they left points on the field. Yes, they might have missed a play here or there. The reality is, the Steelers have a pretty good defense, and the Packers nearly piled up 400 yards of offense against them.

AJ Dillon looked as good as he has all year, including breaking off a 40-yard run where he ran through a couple of arm tackles on his way down the sideline.

Aaron Jones is coming off a poor performance, but typically he does not have two bad games in a row.

The story, however, is Green Bay's passing game. Jordan Love had 288 yards passing on the day.

He threw a 36-yard touchdown to Jayden Reed, which may have been his best play of the season.

The Packers hit explosive plays against a defense that has made a living suffocating opposing offenses in 2023. They protected well against Alex Highsmith and TJ Watt as well.

The duo they'll face this week, while not as dynamic, will be Joey Bosa and Khalil Mack.

That's a formidable group, and both of them are capable of changing a game.

Apart from their pass rushers, the Chargers have one of the best safeties in all of football, Derwin James, roaming in their secondary.

The biggest caveat in James' career has been whether he's been healthy. He is healthy now and capable of making plays at all three levels of the field. The Packers are going to have to account for him to ensure he doesn't ruin the game. Asante Samuel Jr. has some sticky hands as well.

Despite all this star power, the Chargers' defense appears to be more bark than bite. They just gave up 41 points to the Detroit Lions. They give up an average of 21.8 points per game, which is good for 21st in the NFL.

Running back AJ Dillon broke free for a 40-yard run against the Steelers' defense on Nov. 12. Dillon had nine carries for 70 yards and caught one of three targets for 11 yards during the team's 23-19 loss to Pittsburgh.

GREG MELLIS | GREEN & GOLD EXPRESS

Considering their head coach, Brandon Staley, is a defensive-minded coach, they should be better than that.

They haven't proven to be, so the Packers should have some opportunities to make plays.

Packers' defense vs. Chargers' offense

The Chargers' offense comes to town after having a huge day against the Detroit Lions. They protected Justin Herbert, and he rewarded them with a big game. Herbert was brilliant against the Lions, throwing four touchdown passes.

Keenan Allen is still effective when he's healthy, and he proved that Sunday, tormenting the Lions for 175 yards through the air, including the game-tying touchdown.

Austin Ekeler is a nice player out of the backfield, but the run game is more of an afterthought for the Chargers. Ekeler is best used as a receiver out of the backfield.

That probably bodes well for the Packers considering the run defense that we've come to expect showed up again Sunday. The Steelers are not a good running team and still were able to pile up more than 180 yards between their two backs. They averaged more than five yards per carry.

The Packers' defense has been much better when they stop the run as opposed to when they don't.

The Chargers, however, don't appear to have much interest in running the ball, so the Packers should be able to focus on the pass game.

That, of course, is easier said than done.

Herbert is far and away the best quarterback the Packers have faced this season. They'll need to figure out some answers.

The secondary is likely the biggest concern going into this week. Jaire Alexander's status remains uncertain after he missed Sunday's game with a shoulder injury.

Carrington Valentine has had a strong two games since being inserted into the starting lineup for Rasul Douglas. He'll be joined by Corey Ballentine on the outside if Alexander can't go. Ballentine had a nice game against the Steelers as well.

The Chargers are going to be able to score points. It'll just be a matter of whether Green Bay can slow them down and keep up with their offense.

Special teams

The Packers' kicking game, which was strong through the early portion of the season, is starting to wobble.

Anders Carlson has missed a kick in every game since the bye week if not for a mulligan he received against Minnesota. He had an extra point blocked against Pittsburgh, which had a massive impact on the game.

Carlson's season as a whole still fits under encouraging, but the weather is starting to turn as the calendar gets closer to December. Kicking is only going to get more difficult, and the Packers have to hope Carlson is going to get straightened out.

Keisean Nixon had his best game of the season Sunday against the Steelers.

He had more than 120 yards as a kickoff returner and added a 12-yard punt return to his day as well.

The offense could use Nixon's burst as they continue to try and find their way.

The Chargers were ranked seventh on Rick Gosselin's special teams rankings from a season ago.

They're a good group, and they will exploit the Packers if they continue to make the same mistakes they have throughout the season.

Coming out of the halftime break, Keisean Nixon delivered a return of 49 yards, giving the Packers fantastic field position across midfield. It took a 4th-and-6 attempt to move the chains the first time on the series, but Jordan Love hit Aaron Jones for enough yardage to get the first down. Jones picked up another conversion with a 12-yard catch on 3rd-and-3. The Packers had to settle for a field goal, but that cut Pittsburgh's lead down to one point.

HISTORY: This is a matchup that has not happened often. The two teams have only met 12 times, and the Packers have won 10 of those games.

The Chargers won the most recent meeting in 2019 but had not beaten the Packers since 1984 prior to that.

Perhaps the most famous game between the two teams in recent memory was Aaron Rodgers and Rivers dueling in San Diego in 2011. The Packers won 45-38. Each quarterback threw four touchdown passes, but Rivers had two interceptions returned for touchdowns, which proved to be the difference on a day where defense was optional.

COACHES: Packers, Matt LaFleur (fifth season, 49-25). Chargers, Brandon Staley (third season 23-20)

KEYS TO THE GAME

Herbert will be biggest QB challenge for Packers

By JACOB WESTENDORF

Green & Gold Express

The Green Bay Packers are coming off their best performance of the season in the passing game. Jordan Love piled up 288 yards through the air against a stingy Pittsburgh Steelers defense.

Unfortunately, the big mistakes that have plagued the Packers all season long reared their ugly head again. Love turned the ball over twice deep in the red zone, Anders Carlson had an extra point blocked, and De'Vondre Campbell dropped what could have been a pick six.

Those mistakes added up. The Steelers took advantage of them and beat Green Bay 23-19.

The Packers are 3-6, which is identical to their record at this time a year ago.

Much like this time a year ago, the Packers are facing a tough opponent at Lambeau Field. Last year, that was the Dallas Cowboys.

This year, it'll be the Los Angeles Chargers.

The Packers' season is likely on the brink this week. If they're going to get back on the winning side of things, here are the keys to protecting their home field.

Offensive tackles

vs. Joey Bosa and Khalil Mack

The Packers are familiar with Khalil Mack's work. He used to torment Green Bay when he was in Chicago. He made his Bears debut in the 2018 season opener. Mack nearly won that game by himself that night. He stripped DeShone Kizer when the Packers were in Bears territory to save three points.

Later he would intercept a Kizer pass that was returned for a touchdown. Instead, his performance became a mere footnote as Aaron Rodgers staged a 20-point comeback in the second half to help the Packers win 24-23.

Mack isn't the same player he was in Chicago, but he's still an effective pass rusher.

Green Bay Packers' quarterback Jordan Love is looking for answers as the Packers lost their sixth game of the season to the Pittsburgh Steelers on Nov. 12. Despite a better-than-average performance for most of the contest, Love's two interceptions at the end of the game spelled defeat once again.

GREG MELLIS | GREEN & GOLD EXPRESS

Joey Bosa is one of the better pass rushers in football as well. The Packers are in the midst of a tough stretch of opposing pass rushers.

They did a good job against the Steelers' tandem of Alex Highsmith and TJ Watt. Watt sacked Love once but wasn't the disruptive force he typically is. Highsmith did not record a sack either.

The Packers' offense, by extension, had one of its best games of the season. Love was effective through the air. He had explosive plays to Dontayvion Wicks, Luke Musgrave, Christian Watson and Jayden Reed.

He'll be looking to build on that performance this week. That'll be tough to do if Bosa and Mack are consistently in his lap.

Rasheed Walker started at left tackle last week with Yosh Nijman battling a back injury. It'll be interesting to see who starts Sunday if Nijman is healthier than he was a week ago.

Packers' secondary vs. Justin Herbert

The Packers' defense has done a good job at keeping opposing teams out of the end zone over the last month. The most amount of points they've allowed since the 34 against Detroit in late September is 24, to the Minnesota Vikings.

They have been fortunate, however, in the quarterbacks they've faced.

The best one they've faced in that stretch, and perhaps all season, is Kirk Cousins. Cousins left that game early with an Achilles injury that ended his season.

Other than Cousins, the Packers have faced Jimmy Garoppolo, Russell Wilson, Brett Rypien and Kenny Pickett.

Wilson has had good seasons in the past but has struggled since getting to Denver. Of the others, one was benched (Garoppolo) and one was released after the game (Rypien).

Justin Herbert is a different animal. When discussing the league's best quarterbacks, he's on the short list.

A microcosm of Herbert's career took place Sunday against Detroit.

Herbert was brilliant, leading the offense to 38 points including a game-tying touchdown pass.

It didn't matter because the Chargers' defense allowed the Lions to kick a field goal as time expired and allowed 41 points on the day.

For comparison's sake, the Packers have scored 39 points in their last two games. The Chargers scored 38 on Sunday.

The Packers likely are not equipped to keep up with Herbert in a shootout, but they may not have a choice.

Jaire Alexander missed Sunday's game with a shoulder injury. His status will be unclear for Sunday.

Corey Ballentine had some nice moments Sunday, but he's spent most of the season on the practice squad.

Carrington Valentine has also been solid but will have the ups-and-downs of a normal rookie season as well.

There's a difference between facing the journeymen the Packers have faced recently and taking on the league's elite.

Sunday will be the ladder. The Packers will need their inexperienced secondary to be up to the challenge.

Luke Musgrave vs. Chargers' defense

Luke Musgrave is starting to come on a little bit. Against the Rams, he had two big catches — including his first career touchdown.

Sunday against the Steelers, he had two catches for 64 yards, including a 36-yard reception down the seam.

Those are the types of big plays the Packers envisioned when they picked Musgrave in the second round of the 2022 draft.

Musgrave will have his opportunity again Sunday. The Chargers did just hold fellow rookie Sam LaPorta in check but gave up a big touchdown to Brock Wright down the middle of the field.

That's where Musgrave's big plays have come the last two weeks. Green Bay has given Musgrave more opportunities in the middle of the field, and they'll need to continue that. If they do, more big plays could follow.

In a game against Herbert, the offense needs to make big plays.

Preston Smith (91) gathers a head of steam as he runs for Steelers' quarterback Kenny Pickett on Nov. 12. Pickett completed 14 of 23 for 126 yards. He was sacked one time.

Lack of weapons expose glaring hole

Green Bay has only scored 19 offensive touchdowns through 10 weeks

By LUKE REIMER
Green & Gold Express

The lack of first half scoring from the Packers this year has been talked about ad nauseam, but looking at the bigger picture, Green Bay has only scored 19 offensive touchdowns this year, averaging just over two per game.

Green Bay has scored over 19 points just four times and haven't scored over 20 points since a Week 2 loss to the Atlanta Falcons. While many want to blame that on either Jordan Love's inconsistency, or Matt LaFleur's play-calling, which both have merit, that may ultimately be a result of the lack of talent Green Bay sports on the offensive side of the ball.

Guys like Romeo Doubs, Aaron Jones, Jayden Reed and Luke Musgrave are talented football players, but how many of those players are really "difference makers?" While yes, this point can be argued as outside of Davante Adams, teams from years-past have also had a lack of talent, but with Aaron Rodgers at quarterback, those inadequacies were covered up very easily.

That brings us to this year. It is obvious that Love is not Rodgers and if he can develop, probably won't be Rodgers for a very long time yet. To aid in that development, there needs to be stars around Love. Remember when the Eagles got A.J. Brown to help Jalen Hurts, or when the Dolphins got Tyreek Hill to help Tua Tagovailoa or even when the Bills got Stefon Diggs to help Josh Allen? It seems like that is going to have to be the recipe here for Green Bay as it looks to the future.

As has been the "Green Bay" way in the past though, it is hard to expect that the front office makes a big time trade or a splash in free agency. That leaves Doubs, Reed, Musgrave and Christian Watson to try to play outside their realm right now.

"When you get in position to score touchdowns, you have to convert," said Packers head coach Matt LaFleur, after Green Bay's loss to the Steelers. "Those are missed opportunities in my mind."

That has been the narrative for the Packers all season — those missed opportunities. While yes, with a young team like this, those things happen, but at this point in the season, the "young" excuse has to be retired.

It is really easy to say that having more talent will result in more points, but does having someone like Adams, Tee Higgins, or even George Pickens remedy some of those missed opportunities? Probably and that has been a problem with Green Bay for many years. The team misses out on the difference maker and that is a reason for only winning two Super Bowls with Rodgers and Brett Favre.

Love himself has to be better, and it is reasonable to think that he will be in the future, but at some point he is going to need someone else to make the play. For example, Musgrave continues to use ability to get open, but stumbles after the catch and is tackled short of the goal line. Green Bay then gets stuffed and is forced to settle for a field goal. That is a difference of four points and as everyone who watches football knows, four points forces the other team to score a touchdown to keep up.

Another example is that Green Bay loves to take one-on-one shots to the end zone to allow its pass-catcher to make a play on the ball. While it has resulted in a few touchdowns, more often than not this year, that has resulted in an interception or an incompleteness. That wasn't the case when Adams was the intended target on similar plays.

It is too late to make trades in the NFL now and it has become obvious that this is a rebuilding or transition year for Green Bay, but if the players surrounding Love are not addressed in the off season, next year could be another year of stagnant offense from the Packers.

Wicks working to clean up details

By JACOB WESTENDORF
Green & Gold Express

Wide receiver Dontayvion Wicks was selected by the Packers in the fifth round of the 2023 NFL Draft. Wicks attended Plaquemine High School in Plaquemine, Louisiana. He played wide receiver and quarterback in high school. He committed to the University of Virginia to play college football.

What's your background as a quarterback?

My first year in high school when I joined the team, I played QB behind my brother (Trey LeBlanc), so that was a thing. And then I moved to receiver like a year in. So I started on the high school team my 10th grade year. I wasn't playing, I was just backing my brother up; I was like the third-string QB. And then my 11th grade year, one of the receivers got hurt and they moved me. My brother was throwing it to me every time, so I just stayed with it. But I have some background at quarterback, I played a couple games at quarterback. My senior year, I played receiver and quarterback.

Did coaches know you could throw or just did they throw it at you in practice or what?

Nah, we've been doing things, stuff like that, plays, just trying stuff out, and I guess it was the game to call it. We were all confident in it. They asked me if I was ready to throw, and I was ready. So we went with it.

How do you feel like first eight games have gone for you personally?

I mean, losing always makes everything feel different, but I feel good with where I'm at. I've got to clean up a couple things in the game, but I think I'm doing a good job. I can definitely clean up some stuff and be better, but so far I think when my name is called and I step in, I have that confidence to make plays. We do it in practice, so having that confidence in your preparation in practice and trusting that only helps me out on game day.

Are you guys talking about early game struggles?

Yeah, all the time, we're talking about that. As a whole offense, we all know we're letting the team down. We're not complementing the defense or the special teams the way we're supposed to. So, we all got to do something as a whole — individually and as a whole offensive group. We've got to come together, connect more, do more. We've just got to do more.

I think it falls on the players, because we're the ones out there playing. So, as we go, the game goes. And I think the receivers have a big part in that. Whether it's blocking for the running backs or fighting for extra yards. I think it's on us, and I think we can help out a lot just by cleaning up the small details. As a whole offense, we've got a lot of details we miss out on. Just small details that hurt us at the end of the game.

There might be plays early that hurt us at the end of the game. So just cleaning up the details and doing our 1/11th.

Dontayvion Wicks begins to make his move after catching a pass from Jordan Love in the Packers game against the Minnesota Vikings. Wicks caught two passes that day and another four a week later against the Rams. He said he and the rest of the offense need to clean up the details to better complement the defense and special teams.

Matthews, Kampman to be inducted into Packers Hall of Fame

The Green Bay Packers Hall of Fame Inc. will induct former Packers Clay Matthews and Aaron Kampman at the 53rd Hall of Fame Induction Banquet, announced Packers Hall of Fame Inc. President Don Sipes. The banquet is scheduled to be held Aug. 29, 2024, in the Lambeau Field Atrium.

Matthews, a linebacker, was selected by the Packers in the first round (26th overall) of the 2009 NFL Draft out of the University of Southern California. Matthews played 10 seasons in Green Bay, appearing in 143 games with 137 starts. He ranks No. 1 on the Packers' all-time list (since 1982) with 83.5 career sacks, including 10 sacks in 2009, which tops the franchise record books for the most sacks in a rookie campaign. He earned six Pro Bowl selections during his Packers career, tied with Reggie White for the second-most selections by a defensive player in team history. His 80 sacks from 2009-17 ranked No. 5 in the NFL over that span. Matthews was named first-team All-Pro by The Associated Press in 2010, the first Green Bay linebacker to earn that honor in more than 20 years.

The same season, he helped lead the Packers to a victory in Super Bowl XLV. His 11 sacks in 15 career playoff games are the most in franchise postseason history (since 1982) and are tied for No. 6 in NFL playoff history. Matthews finished his career playing one season (2019) with the Los Angeles Rams.

Defensive end Kampman was selected by the Packers in the fifth round (156th overall) of the 2002 NFL Draft out of the University of Iowa. He played eight seasons in Green Bay, appearing in 112 games with 104 starts.

In 2006, he ranked No. 2 in the NFL with 15.5 sacks, the third-highest single-season total in team history. That year, he also posted 113 tackles, a franchise record for a Packers defensive lineman.

Kampman started 89 of 90 games from 2006-08, missing only the 2007 regular-season finale when several starters rested for the playoffs. During that span, he ranked No. 3 in the league with 37 sacks. With 54 sacks during his Packers career, he ranks No. 5 overall in team history.
