County Board meets in newly remodeled, expanded chambers

The Oconto County Board meets Jan. 20 in its redesigned and expanded chambers after meeting in alternate sites since spring 2020. The redesign allows greater distancing between supervisors and the public. At the head of the room are, from left, County Clerk Kim Pytleski, County Board Chairman Paul Bednarik, Corporation Counsel Beth Ellingson and County Administrator Erik Pritzl.

“Welcome home,” Oconto County Board Chairman Paul Bednarik said Jan. 20 as the board met in its chambers at the courthouse for the first time since early 2020.

Concerns about the spread of coronavirus led county officials to abandon the tightly packed room, where supervisors and members of the public sat side by side. Most of the 31-member board’s meetings have been held up the street in the cavernous fellowship hall of Holy Trinity Catholic Church.

Because of ongoing concerns about social distancing, the board approved plans to remodel the room to provide greater space between people sitting at desks or the gallery.

In September, supervisors approved a $138,919 contract with IEI General Contractors of De Pere to complete the project, which involved knocking down walls to incorporate the space from a couple of adjacent conference rooms and installing desks that provide at least 5 feet between the supervisors.

The remodel also includes a $62,532 upgrade of the boardroom’s video, audio and electronic control systems. Camera Corner of Green Bay was awarded that contract, and the work is expected to be done before the board’s next meeting Feb. 24, Bednarik said.

All of the work is being paid through the county’s share of federal American Rescue Plan Act funding.

The chairman thanked county Maintenance Engineer Scott Krueger, Supervisor Doug McMahon and his public property committee, County Clerk Kim Pytleski and Deputy Clerk Kathy Goldschmidt for their work on the project.

Former human services director honored

Reimer worked for Oconto County for almost 33 years

By WARREN BLUHM
Editor-in-chief

Mike Reimer says it was “a blessing” to have served Oconto County for nearly 33 years.

Reimer, who retired Jan. 14, was director of health and human services for the last five of those years. He was feted and presented with a certificate of appreciation at the Jan. 20 meeting of the Oconto County Board.

Supervisor Alan Sleeter, who chairs the board’s health and human services committee, said Reimer was instrumental in a lot of change and initiative in the HHS Department over the years, including establishment of the Aging and Disability Resource Center system. As director, he guided the department’s response to the July 2019 windstorm that did significant damage to forests in northern Oconto County, as well as the pandemic of 2020 and 2021.

Reimer told supervisors he

wanted to share the same message as other retiring department heads over the years: “Leave the department heads alone, and let them do what they need to do.”

The working relationship among the county’s department heads is unique, he said.

“What you’ve built here is really a gem,” Reimer said. “We have a mission to take care of 38,000 people in this oddly shaped geographic area that we have. It has a little zig-zag to it, and that zig-zag, I think, adds a lot.”

The sprawling county has a healthy mix of terrain, occupations and people, but that diversity also provides challenges to department heads, he said, with regional hubs in Green Bay, Marinette, Antigo and Shawano — all in other counties.

“We’re kind of alone in the middle here, and we’ve had to do a lot of things for ourselves,” Reimer said. “The health and human services department has to have the moxie to do things without having providers to refer to. All the department heads have to do kind of innovative things.”

Reimer said he wished the county board well and encouraged supervisors to mentor the eight to 10 new members who will be joining the board after the April election.

“We need cooperation,” he said. “Conflict is fine, but divisiveness will hurt us. We need to all work together, all of us, to make this thing work.”

Jody Armagost, the department’s deputy director, thanked Reimer “for his support, dedication and leadership he’s given all of us. We’ve really faced some challenges through these five years and I think he met them head-on and done a good job in overcoming them.”

Reimer’s successor, Scott Schackelford, added his thanks for laying the foundation and groundwork for the department’s success.

“They’re phenomenal — the staff. I’ve been able to attend a few meetings in my first week here,” Schackelford said. “The culture is excellent in health and human services, and we have a bright future.”

SAVVY SENIOR

How to convince an elderly parent to stop driving

Dear Savvy Senior,

What is the best way to deal with older drivers who probably shouldn't be driving anymore? My dad, who's 86, is bound and determined to keep driving as long as he's alive.

Backseat Daughter
Dear Backseat,

For many families, talking to an elderly parent about giving up the car keys can be a very difficult and sensitive topic. While there's no one way to handle this issue, here are a few suggestions that can help you evaluate your dad's driving and ease him out from behind the wheel when the time is right.

To get a clear picture of your dad's driving abilities — a good first step, if you haven't already done so — is to take a ride with him and watch for problem areas. For example: Does he have difficulty seeing, backing up or changing lanes? Does he react slowly, get confused easily or make poor driving decisions? Does he drive at inappropriate speeds, tailgate or drift between lanes? Also, has your dad had any fender benders or tickets lately, or have you noticed any dents or scrapes on his vehicle? These, too, are red flags.

If you need some help and your dad is willing, consider hiring a driver rehabilitation specialist who's trained to evaluate elderly drivers and provide safety suggestions. This type of assessment typically costs between $200 and $400. To locate a professional in your area, visit AOTA.org/older-driver or ADED.net.

After your assessment, if you think it's still safe for your dad to drive, see if he would be willing to take an older driver refresher course.

These courses will show him how aging affects driving skills and offers tips and adjustments to help keep him safe. Taking a class may also earn your dad a discount on his auto insurance. To locate a class, contact your local AAA (AAA.com) or AARP (AARPdriversafety.org, 888-227-7669). Most courses cost around $20 to $30 and can be taken online.

If, however, your assessment shows that your dad really does need to stop driving, you need to have a talk with him, but don't get carried away. If you begin with a dramatic outburst like "Dad, you're going to kill someone!" you're likely to trigger resistance. Start by simply expressing your concern for his safety.

For more tips on how to talk to your dad about this and evaluate his driving skills, the Hartford Financial Services Group and MIT AgeLab offers a variety of resources to assist you. Visit TheHartford.com/lifetime and click on "Publications" on the menu bar, then on the "We Need to Talk" guidebook.

If your dad refuses to quit, you have several options. One possible solution is to suggest a visit to his doctor who can give him a medical evaluation and, if warranted, "prescribe" that he stops driving.

Older people will often listen to their doctors before they will listen to their own family members.

If he still refuses, contact your local Department of Motor Vehicles to see if they can help, or call in an attorney to discuss with your dad the potential financial and legal consequences of a crash or injury. If all else fails, you may just have to take away his keys.

Once your dad stops driving, he's going to need other ways to get around, so help him create a list of names and phone numbers of family, friends and local transportation services that he can call on.

To find out what transportation services are available in your dad's area, contact Rides in Sight (RidesInSight.org, 855-607-4337) and the Eldercare Locator (800-677-1116), which will direct you to his area agency on aging for assistance.

Noriega-Avila still without public defender

Defendant asks for lower bond to allow him to work to pay for an attorney but is denied

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

It took years for the long arm of the law to catch up with Pedro Noriega-Avila, but it appears it may take a long while for justice to be served, as well.

It was reported Jan. 20 in Shawano-Menominee County Circuit Court that Noriega-Avila, 39, of Pulaski, is still lacking representation from the Wisconsin Public Defender's Office after more than five months in the Shawano County Jail despite meeting the qualifications to have a public defender. A preliminary hearing, originally scheduled for Aug. 13, 2021, has been pushed back multiple times while waiting for Noriega-Avila to have legal representation.

Judge William Kussel Jr. scheduled another status conference for 8:30 a.m. Feb. 17 where proceedings can continue if Noriega-Avila has an attorney by then. Kussel noted that, as of Dec. 17, the public defender's office had contacted 683 attorneys, but none of them had agreed to represent the defendant.

Noriega-Avila faces one count of first-degree child sexual assault of a child under age 13, two counts of sexual assault with someone under age 16 and two counts of incest with a child by a stepparent. The case is from 2016, but he was a fugitive until he was caught in April 2021 by the U.S. Border Patrol trying to go to Mexico.

PEDRO

Noriega-Avila remains in jail on a $500,000 cash bond. He asked Kussel, speaking through an interpreter, if the bond could be reduced so that he could get a job to afford to hire an attorney, since he was unable to get one in a timely fashion through the public defender's office.

"Since they haven't been able to get me an attorney, what I would like to do is be able to get out so that I can work and hire my own attorney," Noriega-Avila said.

Kussel denied the request after hearing from the prosecutor and the victim that there were strong objections to the request. Among the objections was the fact that Noriega-Avila had already fled the state and attempted to flee the country once.

Noriega-Avila had made a bond modification request in December, which was also denied.

"He has not stated whether anything had changed in the intervening 28 days that would represent a significant change in circumstance," said Assistant District Attorney Joseph Kaupie.

Noriega-Avila faces a maximum of 40 years in prison and $100,000 fine for each of the incest and the latter two sexual assault counts. For the child sexual assault in 2010, he faces up to 60 years in prison.

The criminal complaint states that Noriega-Avila allegedly went into his stepdaughter's room between September 2009 and June 2010 and assaulted her. It goes on to say that additional incidents occurred in 2014 and 2015. Noriega-Avila married the victim's mother on July 9, 2010.

Kaupie noted that the potential sentence, totaling 220 years if the maximum is imposed and the sentences are to be served consecutively, indicate Noriega-Avila could flee again if he were allowed out of jail on a lower bond amount.

"A complaint and warrant was issued in June 2016, and we weren't able to bring that defendant before the court because he ran," Kaupie said. "The state is extremely concerned that any modification to the bond will allow this defendant to once again flee, and we will be waiting years before he can be extradited back to Wisconsin. There's no reason to change the bond given the very serious nature of each of the charges."

The victim also made a statement asking for the bond to remain the same.

"I don't think it's a good idea," she said. "Lowering the bond where he wants to come out and work is not a good idea because he could again run away."

Noriega-Avila rebutted that he had no intention of fleeing again and even said he would consent to wearing an electronic monitoring bracelet.

"I don't know if the court could use a bracelet or anything else that the judge would feel appropriate, but I have no intention at all of leaving or fleeing from this," Noriega-Avila said. "I only want to get this case resolved."

Kussel was unconvinced that Noriega-Avila's desire to resolve the case quickly was enough to warrant lowering the bond.

"The charges that the defendant is facing are very serious," Kussel said. "He has a great exposure if convicted. He faces 220 years of incarceration as well as large amounts of fines and costs. He has fled in the past that required actions to bring him back before the state."

Nature center fundraising for new tractor

Tractor to be used for operations, maintenance

By LUKE REIMER
Reporter

Officials within the Navarino Nature Center are looking to purchase a new tractor to help run operations.

Navarino Nature Center director and naturalist Tim Ewing said that there is a big need for the tractor.

"We have existed for a little over 30 years and have a partnership with the DNR," said Ewing. "Over the years, we have been able to use their tractor for a number of things, including wagon rides and trail maintenance."

He said that with a surge in people attending the Senior Safaris program, trolley rides and wagon rides for the public, there has become a need for the center to have its own tractor.

"We are at a point of time where the DNR's tractor is not available to us all of the time," said Ewing. "We have been having to rely on volunteers to use their vehicles."

The new machine would allow more frequent trail maintenance, which would be more inviting to visitors, he added.

"The DNR has 15,000 acres here," said Ewing. "It has 100 miles of trails. They typically mow all the trails only once a year. So, right around the nature center we have been trying to maintain the trails the best that we can. A tractor would help to assure us that these trails are the best that they can be."

Come winter time, he said that the tractor would be used to help remove snow, which the Shawano County Highway Department does now.

"They have been wonderful to work with," said Ewing. "There have been times when I have had to plow, because they need to get the highways plowed. We are kind of far down on the scale there."

As the nature center is looking for tractors, Ewing said that the one that they are looking at is priced at $75,000.

"Right now with our fundraiser, we are at about $26,000 towards the tractor," said Ewing. "We are about a third of the way here."

He added that they have also explored different grants to supplement donations.

"That is a large item, so they are harder to come by," said Ewing.

Ewing said that most of the fundraising has been through word of mouth and through programs involving trolleys.

"Right now, we are able to run some programs like cross-country skiing, snowshoeing and torchlight events," said Ewing.

If people want to help raise funds for the tractor, they can either call the nature center at 715-758-6999, donate online through the website <https://www.navarino.org>, or send donations in the mail.

Because of its location, the nature center plays a role in many different counties, including Brown, Shawano, Outagamie and Waupaca counties.

"The way that we look at it, the nature center is kind of the gatekeeper to this wildlife area," Ewing said. "There have been a lot of people in the last two years who have found about us as they look to get outside. We are just trying to give people the assistance they need to fulfill these needs."

Judge denies McCandless lower bond amount

Menasha woman charged with attempted homicide in incident where husband was shot

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

Tina L. McCandless, 48, of Menasha, was denied a request to reduce her bond from $500,000 to $100,000 during an adjourned initial appearance on Jan. 19 in Shawano-Menominee County Circuit Court.

McCandless has been charged with attempted first-degree homicide and first-degree recklessly endangerment in connection with a Jan. 4 incident at her husband's home on Dent Creek Road in the Town of Morris.

McCandless was without an attorney as she made the request. According to Judge William Kussel Jr., McCandless meets the requirements for a public defender, but there is a shortage of attorneys available to take on a case involving attempted homicide.

"That's not unusual," Kussel said. "There's a large need and not that many attorneys."

TINA MCCANDLESS

McCandless, appearing via Zoom from the Shawano County Jail, asked for the $100,000 signature bond so that she could be out of jail to undergo heart surgery and recover at home. She told the court that her pacemaker was "messed up" in the scuffle with her husband, so the surgery was necessary.

Kussel said that McCandless needs to make jail staff aware of her condition, and that the request needs to come through the jail in order to make accommodations. He said he would not change the bond amount at the hearing.

According to the criminal complaint, officers were called to Mark A. McCandless' home early Jan. 4 on a report that shots had been fired and an individual was wounded in the leg. The responding officer found the couple across from each other with a .22 caliber pistol on a living room table.

Mark McCandless said they had gone out for drinks, and then Tina McCandless left to go back to Menasha, where she was staying with family. Later he woke up to find her allegedly holding the pistol, and she told him to put his wedding ring back on. When he declined because the marriage is over, she allegedly fired off a round, according to the complaint.

The court document stated she then chased him through the house, occasionally firing the pistol, and one of the bullets struck him in the calf. At one point, he grabbed for the weapon and they struggled, and he was able to restrain her long enough to call police, according to the complaint.

The gun was registered in Mark McCandless' name, according to the complaint, and at first Tina McCandless claimed self-defense, telling the investigator that he had the gun and it went off as they struggled, but the location of the spent casings — officers found more than a half-dozen rounds scattered around the house — appears to point to his version of events.

Online court documents show that the couple filed for divorce at the end of October, and a stipulated divorce hearing is scheduled for March 15. The complaint indicates that Tina McCandless had just found out her estranged husband had begun dating another woman.

The adjourned initial appearance was rescheduled for 1:30 p.m. on Feb. 22 in the hopes that Tina McCandless will have an attorney by then, but if one is hired before then, it's possible the hearing could be rescheduled to an earlier time, Kussel said.

Lena claims 3 M&O conference duals

By MORGAN RODE

Sports Editor

The Lena and Suring/Gillett wrestling teams each won dual matches during a Marinette & Oconto Conference multi-dual on Jan. 21 in Lena.

Lena won three duals, while Suring/Gillett claimed two wins.

Lena

Lena earned dual wins over Crivitz (19-18), Oneida Nation (30-6) and Suring/Gillett (28-18) on the night, while falling to Coleman (63-9).

Lena opened the night wrestling Crivitz, with the Wildcats falling behind 18-0 after dropping the first three weight classes.

Dylan Urbanek picked up a forfeit win at 285 pounds to get Lena on the scoreboard. Dylan Comins then took the mat at 106 pounds and earned a first-period pin.

After four double forfeits, Lena's Sam Marquardt earned a forfeit win at 138 pounds before three more double forfeits ended the dual.

With the teams deadlocked at 18, tiebreaker criteria f (the least among of forfeits) was used to determine a winner. Crivitz forfeited two weight classes to Lena's one.

Lena then matched up with Coleman, which claimed the conference title. Two Wildcats, Comins and Josh Kristof, emerged with wins.

Comins won a 6-1 decision at 106 pounds for his second win on the night. Kristof broke a 2-2 tie in the second period with a takedown and hung on in the third set for a 4-2 decision win at 170 pounds.

No matches took place in the dual between Lena and Oneida Nation. Urbanek (285), Comins (106), Marquardt (138), Kristof (170) and Franky Umentum (182) all won by forfeit for Lena, with Oneida Nation's one wrestler also receiving a forfeit win.

Lena squared off with Suring/Gillett to cap the night.

Urbanek received a forfeit win at 285 pounds for the only points in the first four weight classes.

Comins bumped up to 113 pounds and earned a first-period pin to cap his perfect night of wrestling.

"My takedowns. I felt pretty good on my feet," said Comins on what he did well.

Comins, a state qualifier last winter, was ranked third at 106 pounds in Division 3 of the most recent individual rankings by wiwrestling.com.

After Lena forfeited the 138 weight class, Marquardt was able to earn a 10-1 major decision win at 145 pounds. It turned out to be the final match of the night, as the next four weight classes were all forfeited. Kristof (170) and Umentum (182) had Lena's two forfeit wins.

With limited roster numbers, Lena wrestlers know that being competitive in duals isn't always possible. With that in mind, the team has been striving to keep improving each day and keep preparing for the postseason.

"We're definitely working on our bottom work so we don't get turned or anything and conditioning so we can last a six-minute match, plus overtime if we need it," said Marquardt, who is ranked seventh at 138 pounds by wiwrestling.com. "And we definitely work on our feet a lot too for take-downs."

Comins said that "staying positive about everything and keeping each other up when we lose a match" is another thing the team has focused on.

Suring/Gillett

Along with its setback to Lena, Suring/Gillett earned dual wins over Crivitz (25-24) and Oneida Nation (30-0), while falling to Coleman (79-0).

The co-op's night started against Coleman. Suring/Gillett forfeited nine of the 14 weight classes, losing two matches by pin, one by technical fall, one by major decision and one decision in the other matches.

Suring/Gillett bounced back with a win over Crivitz. Like Lena, Suring/Gillett won the dual on tiebreaker f.

Crivitz had an 18-0 lead after three forfeit wins, but the co-op got four forfeit wins to emerge victorious. Riley Denowski (113), Mason Micokey (138), Keegan Rattin (145) and Trent Van Den Elzen (152) picked up the forfeit wins. Crivitz had a win by pin at 160 pounds to tie the match.

In its loss to Lena, Micokey (138), Van Den Elzen (152) and Carter Whisman (160) had forfeit wins.

Micokey earned a first-period pin at 138 pounds in lone matchup in the Suring/Gillett, Oneida Nation dual. Denowski (113), Rattin (145), Van Den Elzen (152) and Whisman (160) earned forfeit wins.

Van Den Elzen is the team's lone ranked wrestler, coming in eighth at 152 pounds in the most recent wiwrestling.com rankings.

"The team really helped me to get up to where I got in the rankings. I want to help the team back and just keep working with them," said Van Den Elzen.

Precautions should be taken with winter activity

With the first indications of winter arriving in northeast and central Wisconsin, many people will be excited about the winter activities that will follow. To help keep the season safe and fun, there are a few considerations to keep in mind.

"When the snow sticks to the ground, people may be eager to get back to favorite activities like skiing, snowboarding or skating," said Dr. Patrick Terry, family medicine physician at ThedaCare Physicians-Oshkosh. "Make sure you're in appropriate physical condition for your activity. Warm up beforehand, and use properly fitting gear and safety equipment."

The American Academy of Orthopedic Surgeons says nearly 200,000 people were treated in 2018 for winter sports-related injuries, including fractures, sprains and dislocations. Cold muscles and tendons are more vulnerable to injury, and many injuries occur when people are fatigued.

"Many of these injuries occur at the end of the day when people are just getting in one last run, for example," Terry said. "It's important to stay alert and stop for breaks when you feel yourself getting tired — and certainly don't continue your activity if you're in pain."

Kids especially may be eager to hit the nearest sledding hill as soon as the snow sticks to the ground. The National Safety Council says more than 20,000 children are treated each year for sledding injuries, often because of falls from the sled or because the sled hits a stationary object. Skull fractures are unfortunately a common injury.

"Always supervise children who are sledding, especially those under age 10," Terry said. "Wearing a helmet is a best practice, and no one should ride the sled head first — the feet should always be pointing downhill."

Sleds should be in good condition, without cracks or sharp edges, and using a sled with brakes and steering is the best plan. Sled hills should be spacious and free from obstacles, including having a wide space at the bottom for safe stops.

As with any outdoor activity in winter, people should dress properly for the cold when walking in winter.

"It's great to stay active even in the winter months," Terry said. "Just be prepared for winter temperatures by wearing several layers of lightweight clothing, with an outer layer that is water resistant and blocks the wind."

Footwear with rubber or neoprene soles provide the best traction on potentially slippery surfaces. Additionally, the footwear you choose should provide good ankle support as well as keep your feet warm and dry.

When you navigate icy areas, keep your center of gravity over your feet and take smaller, shuffling steps, which can help your stability.

If you're walking across roadways, remember that vehicles will take longer to stop in poor conditions.

"Be aware of your surroundings, both in terms of vehicle traffic and the conditions of the roadway or sidewalk," Terry said. "Ice is often hidden under snow and can create the potential for dangerous slips and falls."

People also should protect themselves from frostbite during any winter activity by wearing hats and/or earmuffs and gloves, and taking a break from the cold whenever they're outdoors for an extended period of time.

"Older adults, infants and those with medical conditions such as diabetes are at greater risk of frostbite as their bodies may have a harder time producing heat or responding properly to the cold," Terry noted.

Signs of superficial frostbite can include, at first, cold skin and a prickling feeling. Then, there can be numbness; skin that looks red, white, bluish-white, grayish-yellow, purplish, brown or ashen, depending on the severity of the condition and usual skin color; hard or waxy-looking skin; clumsiness due to joint and muscle stiffness; and blistering after rewarming, in severe cases.

"In more progressive cases of frostbite, you might experience a feeling of warming," Terry said. "It's important to be aware of how the skin is feeling and ensure extremities are properly protected against the cold."

Each year, people suffer heart attacks while snow shoveling and snowblowing. High levels of exertion coupled with cold temperatures and a sedentary or inactive lifestyle can put people at risk.

"Cold temperatures can increase your heart rate and your blood pressure," Terry said. "Even in healthy people, this creates a greater risk of heart attack."

People who are not normally very active especially should take precautions when shoveling, including stretching and warming up before shoveling, using a smaller shovel or shoveling smaller loads, and pushing snow rather than lifting it.

Snowblowing may seem safer, but the equipment is heavy and pushing it can cause injury or overexertion as well.

"Certainly, do not shovel or snowblow without your provider's approval if you have had any history of cardiovascular disease," Terry said. "It's far better to hire someone to clear your driveway than to end up in the emergency room, or worse."

Terry wants to encourage people to make the most of winter, while staying safe.

"The winters can be long in Wisconsin," said Terry. "That doesn't mean we must hibernate indoors for months. There are wonderful activities to take part in — skiing, snowboarding, snowshoeing or just enjoying a walk in a park or around your neighborhood. All of these are great exercises that help our bodies adapt to cold weather. If we follow safety precautions, we can enjoy the beauty that winter provides."

"It's important to stay alert and stop for breaks when you feel yourself getting tired — and certainly don't continue your activity if you're in pain."

Wildlife bridges not popular with DNR

Crossing structures can reduce crashes by as much as 80% in some areas of the country

By NATHAN DENZIN

The Badger Project

Deer cause more than 16,000 car crashes in Wisconsin every year, leading to millions of dollars in damage, and even a few lives lost.

Yet the state has no wildlife crossing structures big enough for deer, which are seen as effective in other states. The Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources says they're not feasible.

Vehicles collide with deer somewhere in Wisconsin an average of about 45 times a day, according to records from the DNR. An average deer crash costs about $4,800, according to American Family Insurance. That puts the estimated total bill for deer crashes in Wisconsin at more than $75 million per year.

On top of the monetary damage, deer crashes kill an average of about eight people in Wisconsin every year, according to the Wisconsin Department of Transportation.

Some states around the country, such as Utah, Nevada and California, have embraced wildlife crossing structures to help reduce the problem. These are tunnels or bridges designed to move wildlife safely through roadways. Crossing structures can reduce crashes by as much as 80-90 percent in some areas, according to the Center for Large Landscape Conservation, a Montana group with a goal to unite American landscapes.

"The fact is that wildlife-vehicle collisions are expensive a lot of times, especially with these medium-to-larger size animals," said Daniel Olson, Wildlife Migration Initiative Coordinator at the Utah Division of Wildlife Resources. "It doesn't take avoiding very many crashes for (crossing structures) to pay for themselves, because the damage and injuries are so high for those types of events."

Just as in Wisconsin, Utah's deer population causes the majority of wildlife crashes, but the dominant species in Utah are mule deer, a migratory species. They account for about 10,000 crashes a year, according to Olson.

Utah has been constructing wildlife crossing structures since the 1970s, but the state has recently moved to build more. There are currently more than 50 in the state.

A crossing structure in Portage was built to allow wildlife access without requiring them to cross busy roads.

WISCONSIN DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION

Fencing has to be installed along roadways for miles in either direction to ensure wildlife is properly funneled through the structure. Without it, animals would just shift the collision problem down the road, Olson said.

"We typically see a huge reduction in vehicle collisions when we use wildlife crossing structures, plus exclusionary fencing for the animals to cross," Olson said. "Those are a really effective combo."

In Wisconsin, the DOT has installed many wildlife crossings throughout the state for smaller animals like turtles, and deer are able to use the wildlife shelves or walkways built under waterway bridges, said Kristin McHugh, a spokesperson for the DOT.

The DNR has decided larger wildlife crossings wouldn't be effective in "significantly" reducing deer collisions, said Scott Roepke, a Wisconsin DNR area wildlife supervisor in La Crosse.

Unlike mule deer out west, white-tailed deer in Wisconsin are not very migratory. So building costly crossing structures in the state would have minimal impact, Roepke said. While Utah is able to track migration patterns and create models to predict where mule deer will cross, Wisconsin doesn't necessarily have that opportunity.

The Wisconsin DOT does use fencing to try and funnel deer under bridges and away from high-traffic areas, according to the agency's public affairs office.

Roepke's district office in La Crosse is considering installing an elk crossing near Black River Falls and has submitted a project plan to their superiors, but no decisions have been made.

Also, the recently-passed federal infrastructure bill allocates $350 million to states specifically for the construction of wildlife crossings.

While the impact of wildlife crossings for drivers can be beneficial, the structures can also help restore the historic migration patterns of local wildlife in some places.

When animals eventually figure out how to use a crossing structure, they use it a lot. A 2013 study in Utah showed that mule deer used crossing structures in the state a total of 31,000 times over five years.

"What that tells me is animals that were restricted now have access to a vastly bigger slice of habitat because we put that crossing in," said Matt Howard, natural resource manager at the Utah Department of Transportation. "It will help build healthier herds and populations going into the future."

Despite seeing local reductions in wildlife-vehicle crashes around crossing structures, Utah hasn't seen much change in crash trends throughout the state.

"Because (Utah) is growing so fast, the problem areas just shift — once we solve a problem in one area, a new one will pop up," Olson said.

The number of crashes in Utah compared to 10 years ago has stayed relatively stable despite a fast-growing population because of the mitigation efforts, Olson added. On top of that, these structures can take years to plan and millions of dollars to construct — an average culvert or bridge takes five years to plan and as much as $7 million to build, Howard said.

"If you want to see a crossing structure up five or 10 years from now, the work starts today," he said.

Gaslighting replaced by threats in Washington

There are some people who once achieved fame, went into obscurity for a while and then made a comeback worthy of worldwide applause. Then there are some people who did the first two things, attempted the third thing and got crickets chirping as the reaction, instead.

That, in a nutshell, describes Newt Gingrich, the former U.S. House Speaker who went on Fox News' Sunday Morning Futures and predicted that the members of the Jan. 6 special committee will be put in jail if the Republicans take back the majority. Saying that they've "run amok," and behaving like the "British monarchy" as they go about "running over people's civil liberties," Gingrich predicted that the GOP will flip the tables and turn the "wolves" into "sheep."

While you've got to love the imagery Gingrich invokes, the Jan. 6 committee does not approach the same level of the McCarthyism from the 1950s, when mere associations with certain people that the "state" did not approve of got folks blacklisted. It might not accomplish much in terms of furthering this country along and evolving it into a better society, but that tends to be the hallmark of the federal government in many of its programs. So why single this one out and proclaim it as pure evil?

Once upon a time, politicians

found gaslighting to be an incredibly powerful tool at their disposal, making the voters question their own sanity by using their own twisted logic to show why their point of view is valid and anyone else's is sheer lunacy. Gingrich is now bypassing the "you're nuts" approach and just proclaiming that someone who believes a different point of view is a criminal and should be locked up.

If that method actually worked, plenty of folks in the U.S. Capitol would be behind bars. Take the late Sen. Ted Kennedy, a Democrat who drove his car into the water in 1967 and killed a passenger. He received a suspended sentence for his actions, which involved someone's death, and remained in Congress for decades to come. David Durenberger, a Republican senator denounced for unethical financial transactions, pleaded guilty to misuse of public funds in 1995 and only got probation.

It's hard to take anyone who has served the federal government seriously when he or she vows to lock up his or her own people. Some folks who served in Washington, D.C., did wind up locked away for their criminal acts, but let's face it. The consistency of the feds locking away criminals and malcontents is Swiss cheese, at best. To jump up and proudly proclaim that the forces involved with the Jan. 6 committee will join the chain gangs in white-collar prisons is preposterous.

Also, it's hard to take Gingrich seriously as a "lawyer," so to speak, as he was in Congress when the impeachment proceedings against President Bill Clinton took place and failed to get a conviction. Granted, it proves the point that politicians make really horrible investigators and lawyers in general, and that the Jan. 6 committee is probably going to spin its wheels indefinitely. But his vague talk does not produce a shred of proof that Congress has turned into a body that says "Off with your head" and asks questions later.

Gingrich's comments are being rebuked by members of Congress, Democrat and Republican alike. Republican Rep. Liz Cheney, who sits on the Jan. 6 committee, said on Twitter that Gingrich's prediction shows "This is what it looks like when the rule of law unravels," while Rep. Elaine Luria told CNN "that is why the work we're doing is absolutely so important on the committee, is to make sure that we uphold the foundations of our democracy."

I don't have much faith in the committee producing anything in stone that will determine what caused people to lose their marbles and attack the U.S. Capitol last year, given the current political climate. Democrats are calling it an attack on our country akin to Sept. 11, 2001, and the bombing of Pearl Harbor, while Republicans are claiming that even calling it an attack is a stretch. With this type of schism in the debate, we may never learn the full truth.

However, Gingrich's threat of jail does bring America's whole freedom of speech mantra under fire. Proclaiming a belief and looking for proof that it's true is not a criminal act. On the flip side, Gingrich's attitude that the committee members should be locked up is also not a criminal act, even though his claim lacks proof to be believable.

The chant of locking up Democrats is nothing new to Republicans, as we all remember that they wanted Hillary Clinton locked up for certain emails that were part of her stint as Secretary of State, but if Gingrich was expecting Americans to hoot and holler while providing a standing ovation, he might want to step back out of the spotlight and let the current politicians make fools of themselves on their own without help from him.

Finnegan Lake fishing derby to return

The Finnegan Lake Walleye Club plans to hold its annual fishing derby Feb. 26 in the Oconto County Fair main pavilion at Zippel Park in Gillett. The club will again be registering fish from area lakes at derby headquarters in Zippel Park. Prizes are offered for the largest northern, walleye, bass, crappie, perch and bluegill. Fish registration ends at 3 p.m., and prizes will be awarded at 3:30 p.m.

In addition, general raffle tickets are being sold by club members and are available at many businesses in and around Gillett and the Oconto County area. This year's general raffle will offer $5,000 in cash prizes to include $1,000 cash for first place, $750 cash as the second-place prize, $500 cash for third place, $250 cash for fourth place and $100 cash each for fifth place through 19th place. This year the 20th- through 39th-place winners will each receive $50. Drawing for these prizes will take place at 4:30 p.m., and ticket holders need not be present to win. Bucket raffles will be available in the heated pavilion throughout the day, and impulse raffles and live auctions will begin at noon.

A variety of food and beverages will be available all day.

The Finnegan Lake Walleye Club is a nonprofit organization devoted to stewardship of Finnegan Lake and the boat landing area. Past projects have included cleanup of the lake shoreline, repair and maintenance of the dock and boat landing, improvement of the parking area to include picnic tables and grills, construction of fish cribs and treatment of invasive lake weeds. Every year the club sponsors scholarships at Gillett, Suring and Oconto Falls high schools.

Garden and landscape challenges workshop announced

As people prepare to manage their gardens and landscapes in the 2022 growing season, there are a few challenges to be prepared for. The Coleman branch of the Marinette County Consolidated Library System and UW-Madison, Division of Extension, are sponsoring a free workshop to help local homeowners and gardeners prepare for these challenges.

The event is scheduled for 9:30 a.m. Feb. 9 in the Coleman Library meeting room, 123 W. Main St., Coleman.

There are several potential issues that gardeners might face this year. Fertilizer products are likely to be much more expensive and may be in shorter supply. Fruit trees may require extra care, as many had little or no fruit after the frosts and freezes of late May 2021. The area may not have a full complement of planting supplies available, especially certain types of seeds and plants. Certain insect and disease issues are sure to be present, as well.

None of these challenges is insurmountable, but they do require gardeners to think ahead a bit, plan on doing some extra work (at least for the fruit trees) and be ready to change plans or consider alternative options. Scott Reuss, agriculture/horticulture Extension agent for Marinette and Oconto counties, plans to review these challenges during this free, live workshop. He will also discuss any other topics attendees have, and there will be time for other questions.

For information, contact Tina Brand or other library staff at the main desk by calling 920-897-2400. For agriculture or horticulture questions, contact Reuss at 715-732-7510 or scott.reuss@wisc.edu.

WHO PASSED AWAY 14 YEARS AGO
JANUARY 29TH, 2008

*To be called Father is a wonderful thing,
To be called Dad can make one's heart sing.
But to be called Friend is awesome it's true,
To be called all of these, was certainly you.*

*One can't measure life, by days or by years
Nor sorrow and joy, by smiles or tears.
It's what's, in your heart, that others will see,
And yours was filled With love,
All would agree.*

*You were so giving, unselfish indeed.
Always willing to help, with anyone's need.
Your hand stretched out - Warm smile on your face.
Your spirit filled with God's loving grace.*

*There was always time for anyone who asked, Always there to tend to anyone's task. We'd talk to you on the phone each day.
Always attentive to what we had to say.*

We knew on that day, we had to let you go. It's the depth of the heart ache we didn't know. A part of our heart has shrivelled and died. And a river of tears we all have cried;

*As time goes on and days come and go,
Keep in your heart and always know Your family will love you forever.
God bless you always, we'll forget you never.*

GREG MELLIS | NEW MEDIA

Packers' approach needs to change

The Green Bay Packers season unexpectedly came to close after blowing a late lead against the San Francisco 49ers during an NFC Divisional Round playoff game on Jan. 22 at Lambeau Field in Green Bay.

MORGAN RODE

Aaron Rodgers will be lining up behind center next season.

"Certainly we want him back here," said coach Matt LaFleur of Rodgers after the season-ending loss. "I think we would be crazy not to want him back here."

"This guy does so much for our football team," LaFleur added. "Not only what you guys see on Sundays or every gameday, but what he does in that locker room, how he leads. I know what he puts into this thing, and I am extremely disappointed that we couldn't get over the hump. Not only for him but for everyone in that locker room."

While LaFleur said he wanted Rodgers back, and honestly would be pretty crazy to say otherwise, that doesn't mean the front office does, or even can based on the serious salary cap issues facing the team.

If you ask me, now would actually be the perfect time to move on from Rodgers.

That thinking starts by looking at the Packers' level of success with Rodgers leading the way. The regular season number speak for themselves, with Rodgers putting up MVP-like number every season and leading the team to many NFC North titles.

The success level of Rodgers and the team drops significantly in the playoffs though. Of course, there's all the losses in the NFC Championship Game, with the team's last win in that game coming when the team won the Super Bowl. There's been times where Rodgers has played well and the team has still lost those games, but since the Super Bowl year, Rodgers hasn't been able to lift the team up when its mattered most.

That isn't necessarily a knock on Rodgers — football is a team game after all — but it's also fair to say Rodgers is asked to carry too much of the load. Could that be the reason for the average to subpar play we've seen at times from No. 12 in the playoffs?

Maybe it is, maybe it isn't, but I personally think the team expects Rodgers to cover up the team's weaknesses far too often.

Take this year for example. The Packers were awful on special teams all season. The organization didn't do much to fix the issues during the regular season and it came back to bite them in the postseason. You take away seven points from the blocked punt and add three points for the blocked field goal and the Packers win comfortably. It wouldn't have been the flashiest of wins, but advancing is the name of the game in the playoffs.

After really coming on in the second half of the season, the Packers' offense was abysmal against San Fran. Rodgers completed 20 passes in the game, with nine receptions each for running back Aaron Jones and wide receiver Davante Adams. Of his 29 attempts, only six went to a player other than Jones or Adams.

It's almost like Rodgers didn't trust the team's other receiving options. Granted, there were some drops in there, but there was also times only Adams or Jones was open to pass the ball to. Only having a couple reliable targets can certainly affect a quarterback during a game, and can adversely affect other parts of their game as a result.

So could moving on from Rodgers actually help the Packers find more success in the postseason?

Obviously, to win a Super Bowl, you first have to reach the playoffs, and at least average quarterback play is needed for most teams to get there. The Packers have a dynamic 1-2 punch in the backfield (Jones and A.J. Dillon) and they really helped open up a lot of things for Rodgers and the pass game the past couple years.

If you look at the game-by-game breakdown for Rodgers, it's not chock full of 400-plus yards passing games. There's a lot of Packers' wins in which Rodgers threw for less than 300 yards. His unbelievable ability to take care of the ball helped the team to three 13-win seasons in a row. The next quarterback wouldn't need to throw for 400 yards and five touchdowns a game, instead being a game manager and taking care of the ball.

Another reason moving on from Rodgers could work is the improved play the team's defense showed this year.

Going into the playoffs, many people, including myself, saw the defense as a liability. Instead, with several injured starters back, the defense absolutely dominated.

With cornerbacks Jaire Alexander and Eric Stokes, defensive lineman Kenny Clark, inside linebacker Krys Barnes, outside linebacker Rashan Gary and safeties Adrian Amos and Darnell Savage, you have a strong core to build around.

What about inside linebacker De'Vondre Campbell and cornerback Rasul Douglas? That brings me to my next point.

Being in salary cap misery, moving on from Rodgers could save the team a bunch of money. That's money that could be used to bring back Campbell and Douglas, among other on the offensive side of the ball (like Adams) to surround the next quarterback with some weapons.

Green Bay Packers outside linebackers Preston Smith, top, and Rashan Gary celebrate during the team's NFC Divisional Round playoff game against the San Francisco 49ers on Jan. 22 at Lambeau Field in Green Bay. With the defense's improved play this season, moving on from quarterback Aaron Rodgers could be a little bit easier for the organization to do.

Trading Rodgers would also bring in some draft picks that could be used to fill out the roster and continue building the team toward a Super Bowl.

Moving on from Rodgers doesn't mean that Jordan Love needs to be the next starter either. Should the Packers not go into a total rebuild, there's still plenty of big-time players on the roster that would make Green Bay a preferred destination for a veteran quarterback.

That next quarterback, whoever it might be, is highly unlikely to match the gaudy numbers Rodgers has put up over his career, but those also might not be needed in order for the team to get back to the Super Bowl.

A more balanced team that can rely on defense at times to win games, the offense at others to earn a victory or the special teams to make a play and squeak out a win might actually make the Packers a more dangerous team come playoff time.

Maybe the regular season win total won't reach 13, but in a weak NFC North, between eight and 10 wins might get the job done each year.

It's hard to imagine the Packers without Rodgers at quarterback, but it's going to happen at some point. With some of the recent playoff letdowns and other question marks around the roster, now might be that time to move on.

Pack eliminated by 49ers after blowing lead

Blocked punt turns tide of game

By MORGAN RODE
Sports Editor

The Green Bay Packers suffered a 13-10 loss to the San Francisco 49ers in a NFC Divisional Round playoff game after surrendering 10 points in the final five minutes of action on Jan. 22 at Lambeau Field in Green Bay.

Clinging to a 10-3 lead with under five minutes to play, all Green Bay had to do was punt the ball back to San Francisco and lean on a defense that had dominated for most of the night. Instead, the 49ers broke through the Packers' punt protection, blocked Corey Bojorquez's punt, scooped up the loose ball and returned it 6 yards for the game-tying score.

Tied up, the probable MVP Aaron Rodgers and the Packers' offense had a chance to redeem themselves after a sluggish game, but a penalty on first down pushed the ball back, and Green Bay eventually went three-and-out.

A 57-yard punt from Bojorquez made San Fran start the drive from its own 29, but gains of 12 and 14 quickly moved the 49ers into Packers' territory. On a third-and-seven play, Green Bay's defense allowed a 9-yard run, and after a couple 1-yard runs drained all but four seconds, San Fran's Robbie Gould drilled a 45-yard field goal to end the game and stun the Packers.

"Well, that's a tough pill to swallow for all of us right now," said Packers coach Matt LaFleur. "That's a really disappointed locker room. I hurt for them."

"I am a little numb for sure. Didn't think it was going to end like this," said Rodgers.

There was plenty of blame to go around in the loss, with the special teams and offense carrying the brunt of it.

Not only did the special teams allow the punt to be blocked and turned into points, but a field goal at the end of the first half was blocked, keeping Green Bay's lead at 7-0 heading to halftime.

A 45-yard kickoff return to open the third quarter helped the 49ers get on the scoreboard with a field goal.

Like he often does when any part of the team struggles, LaFleur took the blame for the poor special teams' play.

"It's extremely disappointing, especially when you look at what happened tonight," said LaFleur. "Again, these are things I got to do a better job (of) and be more involved (with) to make sure that those types of things don't happen. That we're putting these guys in the right position, that we're coaching them the right way. Ultimately, it all falls on me."

Coming off the bye week, the Packers' offense opened the game firing on all cylinders.

The pass game helped Green Bay march right down the field on the opening drive before running back A.J. Dillon powered in from 6 yards out to give the Packers a 7-0 lead less than six minutes into the game. The drive went 69 yards in 10 plays, with 54 of the yards coming through the air.

On the second offensive drive of the game, Green Bay had picked up 33 yards in four plays and were at the San Fran 42-yard line before tight end Mercedes Lewis fumbled the ball after catching a pass. The turnover turned out to be a big play, as Green Bay's offense never really got back in rhythm.

The Packers next three drives went for a combined 26 yards and ended in three punts.

A 75-yard pass from Rodgers to running back Aaron Jones looked to jumpstart the offense right before halftime, but a sack on the next play resulted in a fumble. Green Bay fell on the loose ball, but with time dwindling and no timeouts left, had to spike the ball and attempt a field goal, which was blocked.

Green Bay's offense gained just 58 yards in the second half, with 57 of those coming on a drive that ended in a 33-yard Crosby field goal.

"I didn't have a great night tonight," said Rodgers, who completed 20 of 29 passes for 225 yards and was sacked five times. "They did a good job of kind of getting me off the spot and a better job of taking away some of the quick game that we got going the last time we played them and I just missed a couple reads."

The shortcomings on special teams and offense wasted a spectacular showing from the Packers' defense.

GREG MELLIS | NEW MEDIA

Boosted by the return of outside linebackers Za'Darius Smith and Whitney Mercilus and cornerback Jaire Alexander, the Pack's defense was elite to start the game. Before gaining 68 yards on their final drive of the first half, San Fran's offense was at negative-10 yards through four series, all ending in punts.

On the drive that gained 68 yards, the Packers didn't allow points, as safety Adrian Amos intercepted a pass from Jimmy Garoppolo near the end zone.

San Fran gained 154 yards in the second half, but the Packers' defense was stingy in the red zone, forcing a short field goal and turnover on downs to end two possessions.

Smith and defensive lineman Kenny Clark each had a sack, while outside linebacker Rashan Gary finished with two sacks to lead the defense. Gary had three tackles for loss, including the one that resulted in the turnover on downs, and had three of the team's seven quarterback hurries.

The 212 yards of total offense allowed by the defense was the fewest given up since a playoff game against the Atlanta Falcons in 2011.
