Butterfield-Boldig reflects on first semester

She plans to continue listening to wants and needs of community, school

By LUKE REIMER
Reporter

First-year Bowler superintendent Glenda Butterfield-Boldig gives high marks to her first semester back in the Bowler School District.

"The first semester has gone great," said Butterfield-Boldig, who previously taught in the school district.

She said that the school district is exploring some options for expansion.

"We are exploring the possibility of opening a child care center," said Butterfield-Boldig. "We are also in the process of remodeling a couple of our spaces in the building to create a bigger weight room facility and potentially opening that up to the community."

As has been the case, Butterfield-Boldig said that she really feels at home in Bowler.

When she first took the job in the district, Butterfield-Boldig said that she was excited and couldn't wait to see what the future held. That is still the case as she begins the second semester of the school year.

"I have the same feeling as when I started," said Butterfield-Boldig. "I could not be happier than to be in Bowler. I have always felt a special connection to Bowler."

She said that challenges arose during her first semester, mostly involving the COVID-19 pandemic.

"Of course there have been challenges with COVID-19 and figuring out the best way to keep everyone in school in safe ways," said Butterfield-Boldig. "There has been healthy debate around that. We have had a couple of outbreaks. We had to quarantine some classes, and we have had to quarantine a few close contacts. Knock on wood, by this week, we should be back."

She said that she was grateful that Bowler did not have to make decisions to move to virtual learning.

"If we have learned anything in that past two years, it is that being in person is really the best option," said Butterfield-Boldig.

In this, her 24th year in education and 10th year in administration, Butterfield-Boldig said that she is still learning things about herself.

"What I have learned about myself is that I belong in small education systems," said Butterfield-Boldig. "The thought of me being an administrator in a central office location, where I don't get to interact with students and staff, is not where my passion is. I do not think that I would be fulfilled in that role."

She said that one of her favorite things about her job is having the opportunity to stand in the hallway and say good morning to students as they arrive.

"That is something that I may not have the opportunity to do in a bigger school system," said Butterfield-Boldig. "It gives me an opportunity to be a part of the community. When parents come to school, they know who I am and I am not just a name."

One of her points of emphasis coming into this school year was being accessible to parents, staff and students.

"I think that the staff thinks that they can come in to my office and just sit and talk," said Butterfield-Boldig. "It does not have to be anything in particular. It can be about school or what is going on in their lives."

She said that she appreciates her ability to do this at Bowler.

With all of her years in education, Butterfield-Boldig believes that there is room for improvement.

"We are all works in progress," said Butterfield-Boldig. "The way that I look to improve is to continue listening to the needs of the community and staff. The next step would be finding ways to meet those needs and wants using the limits that we have."

She said that her goal is to provide excellent customer services for everyone involved.

"Families, students, staff and community members are important to us," said Butterfield-Boldig. "We wouldn't be here without them. We have to make sure that everything we do puts our students and families at the center of those decisions."

Overall, Butterfield-Boldig is happy with the learning environment in Bowler and how the district has responded to help meet the needs and goals of students and staff.

"It is great to be back in Bowler, and I am planning on spending a lot of time here to make the school the best that we can," said Butterfield-Boldig.

Hass updates school board on class changes

Principal hopes to get students in real life situations

By LUKE REIMER
Reporter

Course books are being updated in the Wittenberg-Birnamwood School District.

Wittenberg-Birnamwood High School Principal Bill Hass updated the school board during its meeting on Jan. 17 about the changes, where the board unanimously approved them.

Hass said that changes were being made to different subjects including English.

"In the English department, we are no longer requiring that every student has to take a speech class," said Hass. "Students all do speeches throughout English, so the English department felt that it was not necessary to have students take another class that was just about speeches."

He said that this would help to open up the English department to offer other classes.

"These would be classes that are approved through colleges, like NTC (Northcentral Technical College) and Oshkosh," said Hass.

The new classes that would be offered are world literature, journalism writing and theater appreciation.

Hass went on to explain what the plan was for the science department.

"We are going to each freshman having to take intro to chemistry instead of making our juniors take chemistry," said Hass. "If you have ever been in a chemistry class and you have students who doesn't want to be there — it is not very fun for that teacher."

He added that the science department is also adding an eco-sphere in crisis class, which could be used for college credits.

Hass also explained that the social studies department will offer new classes.

"They have some new classes, which would be first nation studies — that would be about the tribal affairs that going on in our area and throughout," said Hass. "Contemporary issues would be another class that they are offering."

In the business department, Hass said that they are splitting accounting and quickbooks into two classes.

"The teacher wants to split these into two classes, due to the information that is presented in such a short time," said Hass.

Hass said that there is a reasoning for these changes.

"The changes that we are looking at are trying to make it so that our students are more successful," said Hass. "Last year, we started math in trades and that seemed to work. We are trying to get them in more real life situations, where they can apply what they learn."

We go back in time to meet Amelia Peabody

This week I selected "Crocodile on the Sandbank" by Elizabeth Peters. England in the late 1800s was moving into the "modern age," but it still held tightly to class and propriety.

JAN JONES

Amelia Peabody is the daughter of a distant though affectionate professor. Writing in the first person she describes herself as "tall, plain and formidable in form and attitude." As a child she spent most of her time studying whatever she found of interest, and nearly everything interested her.

She was 32 when her father died, leaving her a substantial inheritance. Now she is free to travel. Her first stop is Rome where she sees a young woman collapse in the street.

Amelia comes to her rescue. She is Evelyn Elsmere, raised by a wealthy but curmudgeonly grandfather who disowned her when she had run off with a dashing gold digger who dumped her as soon as he discovered that she had no money of her own.

After nursing Evelyn back to health, Amelia invites her to go along on a trip up the Nile. To Evelyn's dismay, her former lover, Alberto, shows up begging her to take him back. Then her distant cousin, Lucas, arrives to propose marriage. He tells her he'll inherit so if they marry, her future will be secure. Though tempted, Evelyn sends Alberto away and politely rejects Lucas.

While touring a museum they meet Radcliffe and Walter Emerson. The brothers are archaeologists working on a site far upriver. Radcliffe is passionate about preserving the "less valuable" items they uncover while most only care about precious metals and jewels. He is as strong willed and outspoken as Amelia, so they are at odds immediately.

Walter is younger and more even tempered. He invites the ladies to visit their site to experience a real "dig" when they reach Aramana. Once at the dig site, they learn a great deal about the lesser-known side of archaeology and come to admire what the Emersons are doing.

To their disappointment, Lucas soon arrives and continues his pursuit of Evelyn. By then, she and Walter have fallen in love, though they refuse to admit it. Lucas' rudely superior attitude creates tension.

Things get strange after the villagers take them to a newly discovered tomb complete with an intact mummy. No one wants to believe it when they see the mummy moving about the camp. It is soon obvious that the creature is trying to reach Evelyn.

Many of the workers believe the mummy is real while the rest know it must be a hoax. The big question is why it wants Evelyn. From day one, Radcliffe and Amelia have argued but after some real discussions they come to some conclusions. The mummy is a man in costume, and it isn't working alone. They know what they must do when the creature eludes their traps and carries Evelyn off into the night.

While the others give chase, Radcliffe and Amelia stay behind and hatch a plan of their own. With brawn and brains, they track the "mummy" and find him along with Walter and Evelyn hiding in the royal tomb. The mummy was Alberto in disguise. He and Lucas are cousins, and they have been hoping to convince Evelyn to marry Lucas, thus ensuring he would inherit her grandfather's fortune. When they realized that she actually loves Walter, they decided to kidnap her and take her back to England.

In the end, both Lucas and Alberto were handed over to the authorities and her grandfather's final will is found, leaving everything to Evelyn. Skip ahead four years. Evelyn and Walter are married, as are Radcliffe and Amelia. Inheritances are secure and more adventures await.

Toys for Tots has another banner year

The generosity of the members of Central Wisconsin Electric Cooperative and the communities they live in, was on display as their monetary and toy donations helped make the 2021 CWEC Toys for Tots campaign a success.

More than 30 area businesses in Birnamwood, Bowler, Clintonville, Elderon, Iola, Manawa, Marion, Rosholt, Scandinavia, Tigerton, Wau-paca, and Wittenberg volunteered to be toy donation drop-off sites to collect new, unwrapped toys for the campaign.

"For the second year in a row COVID-19 presented challenges to the Toys for Tots campaign, but with the help of our members and area businesses we were able to overcome those challenges and make Christmas a little brighter for area kids," said Bert Lehman, member relations specialist for CWEC.

By the time Christmas arrived, almost 3,000 toys were distributed to around 1,100 area children. These totals were on par with the totals from 2020.

"With the generous donations of toys and money, we are able to help families in need this Christmas holiday. We are truly thankful for those donations," Lehman said.

The success of the campaign was also aided by the involvement of all departments at the co-op.

For more than 15 years, Central Wisconsin Electric Cooperative (CWECC) has partnered with the U.S. Marine Corps Reserve to organize a Toys for Tots campaign in the CWECC service area. Through the campaign, CWECC provides help to area families in need by supplying donated toys to the families, so they can give their children Christmas presents.

Through this campaign, toys are donated at a variety of collection

Prevea gives community COVID-19 update

Official discusses masking, isolation vs. quarantine, testing

By LUKE REIMER
Reporter

Officials from Prevea Health gave an update on COVID-19 in Wisconsin during a Zoom meeting on Jan. 14.

Prevea President and CEO Dr. Ashok Rai covered where Wisconsin is at in regards to COVID-19, expectations for Wisconsin, isolation and quarantine guidelines, and testing.

Rai opened the meeting talking about how the omicron variant of COVID-19 has affected Wisconsin. Rai used a graphic showing Wisconsin in a dark red color, signifying a severe risk of being infected.

"There was a time where the state had a lot of green and some yellow, orange and red," said Rai. "Every single county is now in that extreme range."

He added that the positivity rate (those who are symptomatic and asymptomatic) is 30%.

"That is almost one in three people," said Rai. "If we are looking at symptomatic people, it is one in two and one in three for asymptomatic."

Rai said the omicron variant is "omnipresent."

"It doesn't need a whole lot to infect somebody," said Rai. "In a vaccinated and boosted individual, the chance of you going into a hospital is mild and very low. In the unvaccinated or unboosted population, the chance of getting sick is higher and higher."

He said that it may not make people as sick as the delta variant.

"It still is a nasty respiratory virus," said Rai. "It still puts people on a ventilator."

Responding to a question, Rai explained when the omicron virus would start to fade away.

"When it runs out of people to infect," said Rai. "That is how infectious this variant is."

He said Wisconsin can continue to see infection spread quickly.

"We have a couple of factors that can speed up infection," said Rai. "We haven't had the level of mitigation that other states have had. As much as we would like to consider this the end game ... we can't just sit back and say this is going to happen and this is going to be the end game."

Rai talked about the different forms of testing, as well as gave recommendations for employers.

"We are going to see a lot more home antigen kits through the federal government and state government," said Rai. "They do work. If they are positive, we ask you to believe them."

Rai said that due to the way omicron replicates, if an antigen is positive, it should be believed and that person should be isolated for five days or longer.

He also said that Prevea has experienced delays getting testing kits.

"We will still continue to test, we have strategies," said Rai. "What we are asking, is that if you are symptomatic and you can't get a test in the next few days, scheduling a test four days from now will do no good. It is isolate for five days."

He said that the only people that will be tested by Prevea in urgent care and the ER are people he described as an "NIH - pure one patient."

"Those are going to be people who have had a solid organ transplant, recent chemotherapy or are undergoing chemotherapy, over the age of 75 without a vaccine and over the age of 65 with significant medical issues and not a vaccine," said Rai. "Otherwise the capacity for testing just isn't there."

Rai went on to explain the difference between isolating and quarantining.

"Isolation is when you are positive — if you know the day of your symptoms starting, that is day zero. If you don't know, the day that you test is day zero," said Rai. "After five days, if the patient is asymptomatic or their symptoms greatly improved, they would be allowed to come out of isolation with a good fitting mask."

He said that implementing this will help to get more people back out to work or do whatever they need to do.

In regards to masking, Rai said that with research, they would like to see people wearing a level one mask to start.

"Cloth masks have more of side leak," said Rai. "In health care, you can't even visit our facilities with a cloth mask, we will put a level one on you."

He said that the importance comes from the tight fitting of the mask.

"Filtration is one thing, but fit is the other," said Rai. "If you have a side leak, then that is completely unfiltered, so it doesn't matter how good the filter is. What we would recommend is putting the mask with the best filter closest to the mouth, then if you wanted to use a cloth mask, you would put it on the outside."

Housing development OK'd for old SMC land

15 homes going on almost 5-acre site with estimated selling values of $250K-$380K

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

The Shawano Common Council approved a deal Jan. 12 with Van's Realty and Construction to build 15 single-family homes on the old Shawano Medical Center site, ending an eight-year limbo in which the city had been trying to come up with the best use for the site.

Under the agreement, Van's has agreed to pay $500,000 to the city once the sale is closed, and the city will reimburse up to half of that amount if the company finishes building those homes within the next 2½ years. The homes will be a minimum size of 1,400 square feet plus a three-car garage and will occupy the 4.73-acre site that used to be a hospital before ThedaCare built its new medical center on the south end of Shawano.

The vote for the deal was 5-0, with Alderman Brad Keuschel abstaining because of his affiliation with the Shawano Ski Sharks. The hospital land is connected to Smalley Park, where the Ski Sharks practice and perform their water ski shows.

City Administrator Eddie Sheppard told the council that the homes are expected to sell for between $250,000 and $380,000. He noted that there were six different concepts presented to the city before the 15 single-family homes was accepted.

Having the $500,000 up front will allow the city to pay for extending Fourth Street, which ends currently at Smalley Street, west and north to Third Street.

"This allows us to utilize the funds to pay for the road without having to take out any debt," Sheppard said. "You're looking at a total return for this TIF (tax increment finance) district in about 5½ years."

Prior to voting on Van's plan, the council voted to change the zoning on the property from campus development to planned development.

While folks in the neighborhood like the idea of the single-family homes, some questioned whether it was necessary to have so many homes on that piece of land. Kelly Shelberg, who lives adjacent to the old SMC property, suggested that fewer homes go on the property and having the rest of it serve as park land or green space.

"I would agree that the single-family housing is a better option for this property than the four-story apartment that was proposed several years ago, but what I don't agree with is that this needs to be jammed with 15 houses," Shelberg said. "I believe that this property, which sits next to the Wolf River, should stand as is and be used by the community. We have been blessed by beautiful parks."

Shelberg noted that, on the day of the council meeting, she saw cross-country skiers and pet owners utilize the hospital space for recreation.

"If no housing is not an option, would the council consider a compromise and lower the number of houses for a bit more community space?" she said. "Would you consider taking small steps in this process and perhaps consider a few homes before giving up the entire property and the last bit of land that Shawano, the City on the Wolf, has?"

John Miesbauer, managing broker the Shawano Coldwell Banker, talks about the need for housing in the city during the Shawano Common Council meeting on Jan. 12. Miesbauer noted there are only a handful of homes currently for sale, and a lot of homes are sold before they are even built.

LEE PULASKI | NEW MEDIA

Todd Dobberstein, president for Shawano Area Waterways Management, echoed Shelberg's sentiments, suggesting that Smalley Park needed room to breathe. He noted that the space has been utilized for 20 Ski Sharks events and 25 other activities.

"Water and tourism associated with water is the number one biggest impact that Shawano has," Dobberstein said. "Don't make a decision today that will impact the future of what we can do with that park."

Sheppard noted that the density for the old hospital land is less than nearby plots of land. Directly to the east of the hospital is 3.3 acres with 12 homes, and south of that is another 3.3 acres with 13 homes.

Not everyone in the standing-room-only council chambers felt leaving the land or at least some of it open was a good idea. Former City Administrator Brian Knapp, who lives near the hospital land, said that Shawano needs high-quality housing in order to continue to prosper. He said that if the city doesn't move on this, the homes will be built in the towns of Wescott or Richmond because people want to live in the Shawano area.

"Each of those families represents at least $55,000 of economic development for this community every year, and that's a very conservative calculation," Knapp said. "That is something you can't replace with an event space or a park."

Shirley Hinze pointed out that affordable housing would be better to attract people to Shawano than high-quality housing.

"If we're going to keep housing affordable for people who work in the city of Shawano, this basically puts these dwellings out of the financial reach of most citizenry," Hinze said.

Housing overall is a problem, according to John Miesbauer with Coldwell Banker, the real estate company that has been working with Van's to sell the homes it constructs. He noted that Van's built 10 homes in Shawano last year, and all of them sold before construction even began.

"What does that mean? It means there's a huge need for housing in Shawano," Miesbauer said. "Currently, there are a total of seven homes for sale in the city of Shawano. One of these homes is yet to be built."

Alderwoman Sandy Steinke noted that, in the eight years the council has been looking at ideas for what to do with the former SMC site, this was the first time there was money for the city attached to it.

"We've gone through several different proposals with giving away that land and making different TIF districts, and we're actually getting money for this land for the first time that I can remember," Steinke said.

ThedaCare, Bellin, Children's Wisconsin team up

Health care corporations seek to provide more pediatric care closer to home

Bellin Health, Children's Wisconsin and ThedaCare have announced a new pediatric joint venture with a shared focus on improving the health and well-being of children and adolescents in northeast and central Wisconsin, as well as the Upper Peninsula of Michigan.

The organizations, which will remain independent entities and continue to be responsible for the day-to-day operations of pediatric services at their clinics and facilities, will work closely together to enhance pediatric primary and specialty care to benefit children and adolescents in this growing region. Each partner organization will play an essential role, with direct benefits to patients that include:

- Bringing additional pediatric services and specialists to the region to expand access to local, close-to-home care.
- Reducing the need for children and their families to travel outside the region when a higher level of care is needed.
- Consistent, best-practice standards of care across each organization's care settings in the region.
- Tailored child and adolescent services that meet community-specific needs with the right resources, expertise, skilled providers and clinical staff, technology and more.
- Better and more efficient care through seamless care coordination and tighter alignment across the three systems.

"Through this partnership, we will create a destination for pediatric health and well-being right here in northeast Wisconsin," said Dr. Imran Andrabi, ThedaCare president. "By working together in new and innovative ways, we will make additional pediatric services available closer to home for people in the region and provide a consistent experience that utilizes best-practice standards of care for patients and families across our organizations."

"While patients today will continue to see the providers they know and trust at the locations in their communities, when patients need a higher level of care, this partnership will allow us to seamlessly transition that care through greater team connectivity, shared processes and more," said Chris Woleske, Bellin Health president. "The result will be a better patient experience that saves families valuable time, energy and cost, allowing them to focus on what matters most — supporting their loved ones."

Recognizing that pediatricians and family medicine providers are the vital home base for the children and adolescents the organizations serve, the joint venture will align each partner's existing primary and pediatric specialty care expertise. Importantly, the partnership builds on the existing long-term relationships between Children's Wisconsin and ThedaCare, and between ThedaCare and Bellin Health.

For instance, Bellin and ThedaCare have robust primary care networks that together provide more than 180,000 pediatric care visits with nearly 430 providers across approximately 70 locations throughout the region. Children's Wisconsin has operated a pediatric hospital, including a Neonatal Intensive Care Unit and Pediatric Unit, at ThedaCare Regional Medical Center-Neenah since 2001.

It also offers dozens of pediatric specialties, including more than 20 in northeast Wisconsin, and is one of the top-ranked pediatric health systems in the country. Children's also recently announced plans for a new outpatient clinic representing a significant investment in the region.

A joint operating board with three representatives from each partner organization will govern the joint venture.

Visit www.bellin.org, www.childrenswi.org or www.thedacare.org for information.

HIGH SCHOOL BASKETBALL

Bowler boys use post play to power past Tigerton in CWC-North clash

Panthers dominate in paint on way to win

By MORGAN RODE
Sports Editor

The Bowler High School boys basketball team dominated in the paint while cruising to a 72-37 Central Wisconsin Conference-North Division win over Tigerton on Jan. 11 in Tigerton.

With each team missing players, it was Bowler that took advantage. The Panthers were down a couple guards, so they decided to focus on working the ball inside and controlling the paint.

Junior Beau Brunner and senior Wylee Dodge spent most of their time on the offensive end of the floor above the 3-point line, working the ball around the perimeter before firing passes to junior post players Emmitt Kietlinski and Tristan Thiex.

Kietlinski and Thiex combined for 50 points in the contest, with Kietlinski scoring 30 points on 15 made field goals and Thiex adding 20 points on nine field goals and a pair of free throws.

Kietlinski said the team practiced getting three post players into the paint on the offensive end so they could use their height and size to their advantage.

"We had a triangle in the post, really trying to work from the high post to the low post," said Kietlinski. "Obviously, I thought we did that today."

At the start of the game, Bowler got out to an 11-7 lead, with the teams combining for four 3-pointers over that time.

After Tigerton junior Asher Michaelis left with his second foul at the 12:34 mark, Bowler started to pull away by scoring in the paint.

Bowler used a 10-4 run to create a comfortable lead and then used a 26-5 spurt to run away with the game.

The Panthers led 51-21 at half-time, with Kietlinski and Thiex combining for 32 points. Dodge had all nine of his points in the first half and Brunner hit a couple 3-pointers and tallied eight of his 11 points in the opening half.

Thiex noted that the Panthers were "very strong with big guys in the post, so we tried to utilize that to our full ability and I think we did a good job of that tonight."

Bowler's play in the second half wasn't as dominant as it was in the first 18 minutes, but the Panthers were eventually able to stretch the lead out to 40 points with just under eight minutes to play, at which time the team pulled its starters.

Kietlinski converted five more shots in the second half, while Thiex hit three more and made a couple free throws. Brunner added his third triple for the team's other three points.

"It just gives us a lot of confidence, especially in the conference," said Kietlinski on what the win means for the team. "We've played some good conference games, we've played some tough conference opponents so we like this conference win — to win by quite a few here tonight and we hope to take it forward into the next games, nonconference and conference."

"I think we did a really good job with defense tonight," said Thiex. "We really got pressure on the ball, and we really moved the ball well. I think the biggest thing is just working on our passes and working the ball into the post — we did a pretty good job tonight, but there's always things we can do better."

While Tigerton was unable to get into a good rhythm, the Tigers continued to play hard until the final buzzer sounded.

Senior Zeke Griepentrog led the Tigers with 10 points, while junior Tyler Dent had nine points.

Down a few players, Tigerton started a pair of freshmen. Maverick Maas had seven points, while Joey Zimdars had six.

While Tigerton is eager to get its entire roster of players back, Griepentrog believes the varsity experience gained against Bowler could help the team moving forward.

"Some of our freshmen got their first varsity playing time, their first varsity experiences. It's nice to see them score," said Griepentrog, who added the team's passing is the thing that needs the most improvement.

Garden phlox, little bluestem named plants of 2022

The new year is upon us, and it's time for gardeners to celebrate the perennial plants of 2022. As chosen by a variety of gardening organizations, this year's perennial plants of the year are among my favorite garden plants.

The National Garden Bureau each year selects a perennial plant to feature as its perennial of the year. This year, it is the Year of the Garden Phlox.

Colorful, vibrant, long-blooming and attractive to hummingbirds as well as butterflies, tall garden phlox is one of my favorite plants — blooming from June all the way through frost.

Tall garden phlox comes in a variety of colors. From the pure white, heavenly scented David, to the rich, black cherry colors of several varieties, tall garden phlox is a beauty. There are those that bloom in purple, lavender, red, fuchsia, white or pink, as well as many patterns and forms that contain spots and swirls and pinwheels.

Tall garden phlox grows in various heights. There are those that are shorter, just a foot to 15 inches tall, while others may reach 4 to 5 feet in height.

Most of the tall garden phlox varieties are extremely fragrant, making them wonderful choices for the summer garden.

During wet summers, some varieties of tall garden phlox are susceptible to powdery mildew. If this concerns you, purchase varieties that are bred to be mildew resistant. There are a large number of tall garden phlox varieties that are resistant to powdery mildew. The plant tag should tell you this.

Enjoy the flamboyant, colorful and fragrant beauty of tall garden phlox this year and celebrate its selection as the plant of the year by the National Garden Bureau.

Another plant organization that routinely selects a perennial plant of the year is the Perennial Plant Association. Each year, a perennial is selected to be heavily marketed and featured throughout the country. The perennial plant of the year must meet certain criteria, such as being easy to grow, easy to find, as well as able to survive in a wide range of habitats and growing zones.

This year, the Perennial Plant Association has selected one of my favorite Hummingbirds, amazing hummingbird moths and most butterflies are attracted to the fragrant, colorful blooms of garden phlox.

ROB ZIMMER

The compact size, rich texture as well as brilliant fall color of little bluestem make it a great choice for Perennial Plant of the Year.

ROB ZIMMER

native grasses as its perennial plant of the year. Little Bluestem is the perennial plant of the year for 2022.

Native to Wisconsin, therefore easy to grow here, little bluestem is a compact version of the giant, big bluestem that may grow 6 to 7 feet tall. Little bluestem keeps it smaller, growing 2 to 3 feet tall and wide.

Like all native grasses, little bluestem is a perfect clumping grass. It remains showy throughout the four seasons — from beautiful, pale silvery blue-green in summer to fiery red, orange, purple and gold during fall and winter. Its feathery seed heads adorn the dancing stems all through fall and winter, adding to its grace, beauty and elegance.

There are many hybrids of little bluestem that have hit the garden centers that come in glorious colors from smoky reds to deep purple and fiery orange.

Little bluestem is the perfect, compact grass for shorter beds and borders and even does great in containers, provided you pop it back into the ground for the snow for the winter season.

Little bluestem is an excellent companion plant for wonderful texture and flow in the garden. Plant it alongside orange milkweed, bee balm, daylilies, coreopsis, gaillardia, purple coneflowers and other medium to large perennials. It is also excellent for mass planting to create a sea of flowing green in summer and colorful reds, oranges and purples in fall.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Don't believe Dems' version of riot narrative

To the editor:

Speeches by President Joe Biden and Vice President Kamala Harris blame Donald Trump for coordinating the events of Jan. 6, 2021. Harris went so far as to compare Jan. 6 to Dec. 7, 1941, and Sept. 11, 2001. Certainly, bad events in American history, but Pearl Harbor and the Twin Towers united America. Why, because Americans felt that we were attacked. Jan. 6 is similar to the Biden administration in the fact that it did not unite America in a common belief.

It started with the rally where Trump encouraged rally goers (go to the capital and peacefully gather and protest). Ending badly, one person was killed by a capitol police officer (Ashli Babbitt).

Lots of false information is out there. The Democrats are running what media headlines claim is an investigation. The first day of the committee, a well-known Democrat Congressman, Adam Schiff, read a statement, which was a lie, and that set the tone and course of this investigation.

Emotions ran high Jan. 6. Several people from Shawano County attended the event and reported no violence, but we know violence did occur. Do you have confidence this Democrat-led investigation is searching for the truth?

I do not condone the violence that occurred. I want those who broke the law prosecuted. What about people like Nancy Pelosi, who had responsibilities? Did they do their jobs?

With that said, I doubt true Trump rally attendees committed these acts. I have attended nine Trump rallies. Each was orderly, peaceful, and was family and child-friendly because lots of children were always present.

Was there a riot? Was there violence? Were laws broken? Did people who had responsibility for capital security fail? Yes, to all.

Do I believe this Democratic-led investigation is designed to fit a narrative? Do I see similarities between this and the Russia collusion, Ukraine investigation? Was the Russia collusion supported by the media? Was the Ukraine and resulting impeachment supported by the media? Is this investigation supported by the media? Yes, yes, yes, yes and yes.

In combat, the first reports of enemy contact are greatly exaggerated. Think back on some of the initial reports as facts now disproved. One example is that a police officer was bludgeoned to death by the rioters with a fire extinguisher. That lie lasted for several weeks but no evidence of an armed insurrection.

I do not condone violence, and I want lawbreakers prosecuted. Never forget our First Amendment has five basic rights and one is the right of the people to peaceably assemble.

Trust USPS, even if Trump does not

To the editor:

"If we don't make a deal, that means they don't get the money. That means they can't have universal mail-in voting," then-President Donald Trump said to Fox Business on Aug. 13, 2020, as he openly described his/the GOP plan to disenfranchise voters during the 2020 election by starving the United States Postal Service's budget.

Is the "post office" broken? The most recent Pew Research survey ranking government agencies once again placed the U.S. Postal Service at the very top. Ninety-one percent of respondents are satisfied with the USPS. How often do we see that kind of consensus anymore?

The USPS is a top employer of veterans. Anywhere across our country, a vet can find work that pays a living wage with benefits. It's a bridge for reentering civilian life. Slinging mug at the USPS is, by extension, an attack on the integrity of the many veterans it employs. Personally, I trust our vets more than a politician trying to game the system at election time.

Postmaster General Louis DeJoy, GOP megadonor, is Trump's own appointee. Trump launched a relentless smear campaign against mail-in voting. DeJoy obediently dismantled sorting machines and removed drop boxes to slow the vote — while millions of Americans were reluctant to vote in person due to COVID-19.

DeJoy also banned overtime to ensure carriers couldn't keep up with the mail volume. U.S. Judge Stanley Bastian ordered DeJoy to stop his corrupt actions, finding, "it is easy to conclude that the recent postal service's changes is an intentional effort on the part of the current administration to disrupt and challenge the legitimacy of upcoming local, state and federal elections."

At this time, Louis DeJoy refuses to resign, and there is no mechanism to remove him. We have a defeated former president still railing against the USPS still overseen by his pick. We have politicians crying foul because they fear losing their future races should more Americans rely upon the safety and ease of mail-in voting.

Then there's the rest of us who trust the post office to deliver our medications and to help us pay our bills, but now we're not supposed to trust it at election time. Have you asked your carrier if he or she diverted ballots in the 2020 election? We don't ask because we trust the USPS and because the question itself is absurd.

Defense trending wrong way as playoffs start

For most of the regular season, the Green Bay Packers' defense looked to have finally turned the corner. The unit was no longer a crutch for the team, and it was actually helping the team to wins.

MORGAN RODE

After great performances against the Kansas City Chiefs in week nine and the Seattle Seahawks in week 10, the Packers' defense has trended in the wrong direction. And now as the postseason opens for Green Bay, the defense is once again the likely determining factor in how deep of a postseason run the team can make.

In the team's seven games since the shutout win over Seattle, opponents have scored 28 or more points five times. In the game against the Cleveland Browns where the defense allowed 22 points, Cleveland also rushed for 219 yards. The other time Green Bay's defense allowed less than 28 points came in a lopsided 37-10 win over the Minnesota Vikings, where the Packers faced quarterback Sean Mannion instead of Kirk Cousins who lit them up for 341 pass yards and three scores earlier in the season.

Hoping to use the regular season finale against the Detroit Lions as a way to shore some things up, instead the defense was gashed for 404 yards and 37 points.

Even in the meaningless loss, coach Matt LaFleur didn't downplay the defense's poor play.

"I would just say the consistency, you know. Football in general comes down to discipline and people owning their roles," said LaFleur. "When you aren't disciplined or you go outside the scheme, bad stuff happens, and we cannot have that. We need all 11 doing their damn job, and if they don't, stuff like that happens."

Green Bay Packers outside linebacker Jonathan Garvin, right, tries to bring down Detroit Lions quarterback Jared Goff during a game on Sept. 20 at Lambeau Field in Green Bay. After putting together a solid start to the season, the Packers' defense has struggled down the stretch. GREG MELLIS | NEW MEDIA

The Packers' defense was beaten for touchdowns on a pair of trick plays against Detroit. With the San Francisco 49ers coming to Lambeau Field for the Divisional Round game, the result of those trick plays should be especially concerning because of all the motion and deception that 49ers coach Kyle Shanahan incorporates into his offense.

Of course, the 49ers and Packers already met way back in the early portion of the regular season, so there's some idea of the challenges the 49ers' offense presents already.

Green Bay held San Francisco's offense to 298 total yards. Only 67 of the yards came on the ground, but that was largely due to the 49ers going behind by 17 points to start the game.

The 49ers' leading rusher in that game was Trey Sermon, who didn't even receive a carry in the team's upset playoff win over the Dallas Cowboys. Running back Elijah Mitchell and versatile receiver Deebo Samuel combined for 168 rushing yards and two scored on 37 carries in the playoff win.

You can bet the 49ers will lean on those two guys and run all day, control the clock and keep the Packers' offense on the sidelines. It'll be up to the Packers' defense to find a way to slow down the rushing attack, or create some turnovers.

One thing that is working in the Packers' favor is its defense might be the healthiest it's been all season for the playoffs.

Outside linebacker Za'Darius Smith hasn't played since week one, but is trending toward playing this Saturday. While he is known more for his pass-rushing abilities, throwing him in to help slow the run should only boost the defense.

Then there's cornerback Jaire Alexander, who intercepted a pass and knocked away three passes in the Pack's win over San Francisco earlier this year. He's expected back for the playoff game as well. Again, like Smith, Alexander would help out more in the passing game, but he's proved to be a sure tackler and certainly makes the defense more versatile.

There's also a chance outside linebacker Whitney Mercilus is back for the playoff run, even though he was expected to be out for the season. He's another big body the Pack can put in the box to try and slow the San Francisco passing game.

Should the Packers find a way to consistently stop the run, they'll be as ready as ever to defend the pass. Ideally, the Packers' offense would get off to a strong start and grab a multi-score lead, like it did in the team's first matchup, then the Packers' revamped defense could pin its ears back and really control the game.

Studs pass-catchers

Two All-Pro receivers will take center stage when the Green Bay Packers host the San Francisco 49ers in an NFC Divisional Round playoff game on Saturday night.

In one corner, it's Green Bay's Davante Adams, who finished second in receptions, third in receiving yards and fifth in receiving touchdowns. In the other corner, it's San Francisco's Deebo Samuel, who led the NFL in yards per reception and finished third in yards from scrimmage.

The X-factor could be the No. 2 receivers, Green Bay's Allen Lazard and San Francisco's Brandon Aiyuk.

In the first six games, Aiyuk caught nine passes for 96 yards (10.7 average) and one touchdown. In the final 11 games, he caught 47 passes for 730 yards (15.5 average) and four touchdowns.

Lazard, meanwhile, scored five touchdowns in the final six games. That was one behind Adams' league-leading total.

"Feel good. Feel good," Lazard said about the state of his game. "I feel like I'm in a really good mental space; physically, as well. Just having a good intuition when it comes to playing the game, feeling it out, knowing what Aaron (Rodgers is) thinking. (Receivers) coach (Jason) Vrable and (Nathaniel) Hackett simply have done a great job throughout this entire year.

"I really just honed in on their teachings, on what they've done to prepare us. I've really been honing in on my notes, on the film and the details and the routes. I've just been working on that chemistry and connection with Aaron. It's obviously been working out very well."

Cold night at Lambeau

It's going to be a cold one at Lambeau Field for the 7:15 p.m. kickoff. While the predicted high for Saturday is 21, the projected low is 3. That will mean a kickoff temperature somewhere in the neighborhood of 12 and a wind chill perhaps dipping below zero.

With a kickoff temperature of 15 or colder, the Packers in games started by Rodgers have won four in a row. That includes a 37-10 romp over Minnesota in week 17.

"We think it's Packer weather, honestly," defensive lineman Dean Lowry said last week. "Go back to our game against Minnesota. We played great team defense. That was probably our most complete game of the year, against Minnesota in that freezing weather.

Green Bay Packers receiver Davante Adams celebrates with offensive lineman Lucas Patrick during the team's game against the Detroit Lions on Jan. 9 in Detroit. Adams will hope to outproduce San Francisco wideout Deebo Samuel in Saturday's Divisional Round playoff game. GREG MELLIS | NEW MEDIA

"We're used to it. Even today, we were outside the whole practice. We just think it fits our strength of playing tough defense and having a quarterback and an offense that's experienced in this weather."

Cold doesn't guarantee anything, though. In the 2013 wild-card round, the 49ers beat the Packers 23-20 with a kickoff temperature of 5. While Rodgers has a wealth of cold-weather experience, 49ers quarterback Jimmy Garoppolo has never thrown a pass in a game with a kickoff temperature of 40 or colder.

Turning over a new leaf

Based on regular-season play, one big advantage for Green Bay is turnovers. Even with the backups turning it over three times at Detroit in the finale, the Packers finished third in the NFL at plus-13 for the season. The Packers had two giveaways in week 1, three giveaways in week 18 and just eight in between.

The 49ers, on the other hand, were minus-4 for the season – worst in the NFC playoff field and second-worst among the 14 playoff teams. However, they were plus-5 down the stretch in winning seven of their final nine regular-season games.

Teams that won the turnover battle this season won 80% of the time. The Packers went 10-0 when collecting more takeaways than giveaways – including plus-2 in the 30-28 win at San Francisco in week three – and 0-3 when they had more turnovers. The 49ers went 4-0 when they won the turnover battle and 1-5 when they lost. Garoppolo threw 12 interceptions and fumbled eight times.

Hackett a hot name

Of the eight head coaching vacancies, Packers offensive coordinator Nathaniel Hackett interviewed for four of them during the playoff bye week: NFC North rivals Minnesota and Chicago along with Jacksonville and Denver.

Hackett, who helped guide the Blake Bortles-led Jaguars offense to an AFC Championship Game in 2017 and the Rodgers-led offenses to NFC title games in 2019 and 2020, has flourished alongside coach Matt LaFleur.

"This has been such a great opportunity for me," Hackett said. "Being able to come here with coach LaFleur has been unbelievable. You go through a lot of time as a coordinator creating systems. Being able to come here and learn Matt's system and being able to combine those two systems has been something huge for me as a person.

"And then at the same time watch a first-time head coach to be able to be in there with him, watch the things that he goes through, being able to have that relationship with Matt has taught me so much about his position. It's just been an amazing experience, it really has. And the culture that he's brought here, it's one of those things like, this is how it should be."

KEYS TO THE GAME

Green Bay Packers quarterback Aaron Rodgers slides to the ground during the team's game against the Detroit Lions on Sept. 20 at Lambeau Field in Green Bay. Rodgers and the Packers' offense will go up against a San Francisco 49ers defense that held the Dallas Cowboys in check last week.

By BILL HUBER
Correspondent

The Green Bay Packers (13-3) will host the San Francisco 49ers (11-7) at 7:15 p.m. Saturday at Lambeau Field in Green Bay. FOX will televise the game.

History

Including this year's 30-28 victory at San Francisco, the Packers lead the series 38-32-1. The teams have split eight playoff games. The 49ers knocked Aaron Rodgers and Co. out of the playoffs in 2012, 2013 and 2019.

Coaches

Green Bay – Matt LaFleur, 39-10 in regular season, 41-12 overall, third season. San Francisco — Kyle Shanahan, 39-42 in regular season and 41-43 overall, fifth season.

When the Packers have the ball

There's not a hotter offense in the playoffs than the one the Packers will roll out on Saturday night. Over the final seven regular-season games, they were second in the league in scoring. Aaron Rodgers was No. 1 in passer rating and Davante Adams was No. 1 in touchdown receptions.

They'll face a tough task against the 49ers' defense, which was superb in shutting down the Cowboys, the offense that was No. 1 in scoring the past seven games, in the Wild Card Round. In winning eight of its last 10 games, San Francisco allowed 20 points or less six times.

While the 49ers finished 12th in points allowed (21.5 per game), they were third in total defense (310 yards per game), sixth in yards allowed per play (5.11), third in sack percentage (8.8) and seventh in goal-to-go situations (63.3% touchdowns). The Cowboys were held to 4.4 yards per play, down three yards from their fourth-ranked season average.

The front is tremendous and was the reason why the Niners upset the Cowboys. The 49ers were credited with five sacks and 14 quarterback hits while limiting the top-notch running back tandem of Ezekiel Elliott and Tony Pollard to 45 yards on 16 attempts.

The only run of 10-plus yards was Dak Prescott's game-ending scramble.

Pro Bowler Nick Bosa and Samson Ebukam are the ends, and Arik Armstead and D.J. Jones are the tackles.

Bosa was limited to 23 snaps against Dallas with a concussion but the 49ers are hopeful he'll be back. He finished fourth in the NFL with 15½ sacks and added four forced fumbles but was largely held in check by Yosh Nijman when the Packers won in week three.

The battle between Bosa and David Bakhtiari will be must-see TV. Bakhtiari returned from a torn ACL to play 27 snaps in week 18 against Detroit. He was dominant in those snaps but the Lions don't have anyone with half of Bosa's talent. Armstead is a tremendous player who contributed six sacks and Jones is a highly underrated player who finished second on the team with 10 tackles for losses.

Fred Warner (137 tackles, seven for losses), Azeez Al-Shaair (102 tackles, nine for losses) and Dre Greenlaw (21 tackles in three games) are the linebackers. Rodgers for years has raved about Warner being an elite player. He suffered an ankle injury against Dallas but expects to play.

If the Packers can protect Rodgers, there are plays to be made against a secondary that gave up 12 catches to Adams, including two big ones on the game-winning drive in week three. Emmanuel Moseley and rookie Ambry Thomas are the corners and K'Waun Williams mans the slot.

Thomas is the weak link. Jimmie Ward and Jaquiski Tarta provide steady veteran play at safety.

When the 49ers have the ball

Which Green Bay defense will show up? Will it be the one that played so well through the first two-thirds of the season and crushed Vikings running back Dalvin Cook in week 17? Or will it be the one that gave up 28-plus points in five of the final seven games?

The 49ers finished only 13th with 25.1 points per game but hit their stride down the stretch. Notably, they finished No. 1 in red-zone offense (66.7%) while Green Bay finished No. 28 in red-zone defense (66%).

The key will be San Francisco's rushing attack. Elijah Mitchell finished eighth in rushing with 963 yards despite missing six games due to injuries. He's not as explosive as Raheem Mostert, who ran circles around the Packers in the 2019 NFC Championship Game, but he's still a big-time talent.

There are two important changes since Green Bay's week three victory. One, Mitchell is healthy; he was inactive for that game. Two, receiver Deebo Samuel has become a featured runner. With Mitchell (27 carries, 96 yards, one touchdown) and Samuel (10 carries, 72 yards, one touchdown) leading the charge, the 49ers demolished the Dallas defense with 169 rushing yards.

Green Bay's run defense ran hot and cold down the stretch. The Browns rushed for 219 yards in week 16 but the Vikings managed only 27 in week 17. All the jet-motion-style runs featuring Samuel as a runner or decoy will test the discipline of outside linebackers Preston Smith and Rashan Gary and All-Pro inside linebacker De'Vondre Campbell.

The running game will set up quarterback Jimmy Garoppolo for success (or failure). He finished third in completion percentage (68.3) and ninth in passer rating (98.8). He averaged a second-ranked 8.64 yards per attempt because he benefited from a league-best 6.51 yards after the catch. He didn't play well at Dallas and has no cold-weather history.

Samuel, with a league-high 18.3 yards per reception, is a stud in the run-after-catch phase and one of the premier playmakers in the league. He averaged 10 yards after the catch, fourth-best in the NFL and by far the best among receivers. He forced 20 missed tackles on 77 receptions; every Packers receiver combined tallied 24 misses on 238 receptions.

George Kittle (71 receptions, 910 yards, six touchdowns) is the best all-around tight end in the NFL, and receivers Brandon Aiyuk (56 receptions, 826 yards, five TDs) and Jauan Jennings (24 receptions, 282 yards, five TDs) emerged down the stretch.

Special teams

This is the phase that Packers fans have dreaded for most of the season.

The 49ers are fairly mediocre on special teams. Veteran kicker Robbie Gould was 20-of-23 on field goals and made kicks of 52 and 53 yards against Dallas.

Punter Mitch Wishnowsky finished 14th in net average. He's got all the kicks in his bag to make fielding the ball a challenge. Presumably, David Moore will handle punts. He had an excellent debut in week 17 but spent week 18 on the COVID list.

In the first meeting, Aiyuk averaged 11.5 yards per punt return and Trent Cannon had a 68-yard kickoff return. With Aiyuk having a key role on offense and Cannon on injured reserve, Travis Benjamin had an 11-yard punt return and JaMykal Hasty went nowhere on two kickoff returns.
