

Mountain town chairman race is only local primary

All county voters are being asked to narrow superintendent field and answer a referendum question on Voter ID

BY WARREN BLUHM

A three-way race for Mountain town chairman is on the primary election ballot Feb. 18, in addition to a statewide primary for superintendent of public instruction.

Early voting began Feb. 4 and will continue until Feb. 13.

Incumbent Mountain Town Chairman Lindor “Skip” Maletzke faces two challengers in the spring election — Town Board Supervisor Brenda Carey-Mielke and Tom Huff. The top two vote-getters in the primary will face off in the April 1 general election.

A race is also on for town chairperson in the Town of Lakewood, where Scott Van Laanen chose not to run for reelection. Mike Musil and Kevin L. Ballangee will square off in April.

Little Suamico Town Chairman Dale Mohr is being challenged by Frank Nowak, in a rematch of the 2022 spring election. Little Suamico is also expanding its town board from three members to five, including the chair. Six people are running for the four available slots, including incumbents Liz Paape and Tracey Krumrei, as well as David E. Primly, Penny Helmle, Dan Herzberg and Nowak.

In the Town of Oconto Falls, Town Chairman Dave Alsteen faces a challenge from Robert Wolf.

And in the Town of Underhill, Town Chairman Peter Vorpahl is challenged by Mark Winkler.

The vast majority of incumbent local officials are running unopposed for reelection, and in several communities where incumbents decided not to run, only a single candidate stepped forward to take the job.

Those include the Town of Bagley, where Tom Bauer is running to succeed Town Chairman Greg Lechleitner; the Town of How, where Ken Holmes is unopposed to succeed William Bartz Jr. as chair; and the Town of Maple Valley, where Supervisor Mike Beyer is the only candidate to replace Town Chairman Russell Brock.

In the Town of Pensaukee, Town

Cliff Gerbers, who has served as treasurer of the Gillett School Board since 1984, has decided not to run for another three-year term. Gerbers was named Board of Education Member of the Year by the Wisconsin Rural Schools Alliance in 2023.

SPRING ELECTION CANDIDATES

Find the list of candidates on the April 1 ballot, including the Feb. 18 primary for Mountain Town Chairman and state superintendent of public instruction, on Page 2.

Clerk Jackie Nelis is not on the ballot, and Trudie Chico is the sole candidate to succeed her.

Among local school boards, the biggest changes are expected in Gillett, where longtime Treasurer Cliff Gerbers and President Jamie Young opted not to run for another term on the seven-person board.

Gerbers was first elected to the school board in 1983 and has been treasurer for 39 of those 40 years. He and his wife, Mary, were grand marshals of the 2017 Gillett Independence Day Parade.

The three incumbents running on the Oconto Falls City Council are unopposed — Devin Wirtz, Ashley Bahrke and Mat McDermid. In Gillett, Alderperson Irene Drake is challenged by Keri Hicks, while Ashley VanStraten and Jerry Luther are unopposed.

And in Oconto, there are six candidates for four positions on the city council — incumbent Bob LeBreck along with Rob Gunner Daul, Kim Bronikowski, Mike Feldt, Violet McFadden Hornick, Casey Sowle and Wibble Sowle.

The Mountain town chairman race is the only local contest Feb. 18, but all county voters will be asked to choose the finalists for the state’s highest elected education position. Jill Underly is running for a second four-year term against Brittany Kinser and Jeff Wright.

In addition, a statewide referendum question whether the state’s Voter ID Law should be enshrined in the state constitution. The question is, “Shall section 1m of Article III of the constitution be created to require that voters present valid photographic identification verifying their identity to vote in any election, subject to exceptions which may be established by law?”

Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. Feb. 18, or voters may contact their municipal clerk for an absentee ballot or to cast an absentee ballot in person.

The written application must include your voting address within the municipality where you wish to vote; the address where the absentee ballot should be sent, if different from the voting address; your signature; and a copy of your photo identification.

The deadline for submitting an absentee ballot application is Feb. 13, and the last day to vote an absentee ballot in the clerk’s office is 5 p.m. Feb. 14. By state law, no in-person absentee voting may occur on the day before the election.

The municipal clerk will deliver voted absentee ballots returned on or before Election Day to the proper polling place or counting location before the polls close on Feb. 18. Any ballots received after the polls close will not be counted.

Oklahoma fugitive caught in Oconto County

Arrest warrant had been issued in Tulsa on Jan. 17

BY WARREN BLUHM
News Editor

An Oklahoma woman found not guilty by reason of insanity in a fatal 2013 crash has been apprehended in Oconto County after she apparently violated the terms of her release from a mental institution.

Shea Lynn McClain, 38, of Collinsville, Oklahoma, appeared before Oconto County Judge Michael Judge on Jan. 29 after being taken into custody on a mental health hold. The judge scheduled an extradition hearing for Feb. 5 to give her time to speak with the State Public Defender’s Office, and said the date can be moved up on request.

According to online records, McClain caused a car wreck in Tulsa County on Dec. 5, 2013, that led to the death of Cameron Hood, 24, a photojournalist for KJRH-TV Channel 2 in Tulsa. McClain failed to stop at a stop sign and ran into

New NorthLakes clinic opens in Oconto

NorthLakes Community Clinic (NLCC) has announced the opening of a new health care facility in Oconto, expanding access to essential medical services for area residents.

The 10,000-square-foot clinic adjacent to Bellin Health Oconto Hospital represents NLCC’s commitment to addressing critical health care needs in Oconto County.

“Today marks a transformative moment for health care access in Oconto County,” said NorthLakes CEO Ana Tochterman. “This new facility enables us to enhance our existing dental services and introduce vital new services to meet community needs.”

Two new services — behavioral health and chiropractic care — will now be offered, along with expanded dental and patient supports. Optometry is expected in the future.

This expansion addresses a crucial gap in local health care services, particularly in mental health care, according to a NLCC press release. The facility’s location next to Bellin Hospital creates a centralized health care hub for Oconto residents, streamlining access to various wellness services.

The facility’s opening follows months of planning and construction by IEI Contractors. The project is a collaborative effort between NLCC and Bellin Hospital, and the land acquisition benefits both organizations’ operational needs.

“This facility shows what can be achieved when health systems work together,” said Julie Bulin, vice president of Bellin Health Oconto Hospital. “Our partnership with NorthLakes is bringing new opportunities for comprehensive care to the people of Oconto County, improving offerings and helping us pave the way for a healthier tomorrow.”

More than 70 plates were served at St. Anthony Parish on Feb. 1 at the Taste of Knights. This event was a fundraiser for the Oconto Falls Knights of Columbus council. With a $20 admission, attendees enjoyed an evening of all-you-can-eat food and beverages served by local Knights.

Dishes included Guinness Irish stew by Lee Ward, potato pierogi by Carl Blahnik, pulled pork sliders with apple slaw by Rick Lemke, Swedish meatballs by Craig Young, Polish sausage and kielbasa. Chef James Ryczkowski, who cooked at St. Norbert College for 27 years, served hand-carved slow-roasted roast beef onto homemade potato rolls.

"I went to culinary school in Chicago, and one of my classmates was the inventor of Sweet Baby Ray's barbecue sauce," Ryczkowski said. In addition to the meal, there were raffle baskets and a 50/50 raffle. St. Anthony Parish is gearing up for a busy spring. Its annual school auction is scheduled for April 5, and its popular food truck event is planned for May 5.

the car that Hood was driving, killing him. Her car was traveling at between 96 and 104 mph in a 40 mph zone at the time of the collision. A criminal complaint was filed in August 2014 charging her with child neglect and negligent homicide by use of a motor vehicle. The second charge was amended in April 2015 to manslaughter in the first degree by use of a vehicle. On May 22, 2017, McClain was found not guilty by reason of insanity, and she was ordered confined to the Oklahoma Forensic Center in Vinita, Oklahoma, the state's largest inpatient behavioral health facility in the Oklahoma Department of Mental Health and Substance Abuse Services. In May 2024, Tulsa County Judge David Guten approved a placement plan with conditions including that McClain may not leave the county or the state of Oklahoma without first seeking permission from the court. According to the case file with the Oconto County Clerk of Courts Office, on Jan. 17 of this year, Guten issued a bench warrant charging McClain with indirect contempt of court and ordering that she be held without bond when found. The county contacted Oklahoma officials on Jan. 23 after the warrant turned up in a computer search after she was taken into custody. The fugitive complaint defines indirect contempt of court under Oklahoma law as "willful disobedience of any process or order lawfully issued or made by the court." The court files do not have details about how authorities knew McClain had left Oklahoma or the circumstances that led to her detainment in Oconto County.

CMN leader reflects on Overstreet's contributions

The College of Menominee Nation bid farewell and extended condolences to the family of longtime collaborator, researcher and natural anthropologist David Overstreet, who died Jan. 20 at age 82 in Milwaukee. Through his trailblazing work as an agricultural investigator, independent archaeological consultant, CMN adjunct professor of anthropology (2006-13) and youth development facilitator, Overstreet left an indelible mark on the college's legacy, according to a statement issued by CMN. Discoveries and extensive knowledge of historical Menominee lifestyles made due to his work will benefit the Menominee Nation for the foreseeable future. "CMN's focus on Menominee agricultural practices began because of research led by Dr. David Overstreet in collaboration with the MITW Historic Preservation Department in 1995," CMN President Christopher Caldwell said.

DAVID OVERSTREET

"Today, agricultural research and production gardens mimic ancient garden practices on our campus. We also have a bachelor's of sustainable agriculture degree program inspired by this work." Overstreet's work built on current and future generations through collaborations with the Department of Continuing Education and the Sustainable Development Institute. These collaborations focused on middle and high school-level programs that promoted higher education, built leadership skills and broadened understanding of sustainability through place-based experiences. Students worked with Overstreet to learn how to conduct archaeological investigations on ancestral gardens and participate in contemporary research on CMN and off-campus sites. He received a doctorate in anthropology from UW-Milwaukee and had been a practicing professional archaeologist for over 50 years. In addition to his work at CMN, he taught at UW-Waukesha, UW-Milwaukee and was director of Archaeology at Marquette University. He was a research associate at the Milwaukee Public Museum. His work with the Menominee Tribe led to him being presented with an appointment as a sturgeon warrior and honorary thunderbird. A graveside service will be held at the Menominee Nation Cemetery in the spring.

watersports with many, especially his daughter, Erica.

Lee did make a return to a more "traditional" work environment in the 1980s when he became a stockbroker at Smith Barney. He worked hard and eventually bought his dream car – a white Corvette. But his adventurous spirit eventually led him back to the outdoors – the mountains of Colorado.

Settling in Silverthorne, Colorado, Lee enjoyed hiking, mountain biking and camping. Armed with paracord, shock cords, duct tape and Velcro, he was always prepared for any scenario. He became a white-water rafting guide in his 50s and was the oldest guide on the Arkansas River. It was there he adopted his river name "Hawk," a moniker he carried with him the rest of his life.

After an injury on the river, Lee relocated to Florida, where he worked as a park ranger at John D. MacArthur Beach State Park in West Palm Beach. He later moved to Palm Harbor to care for his aging parents.

Norman 'Jake' Peterson and being able to share that love with his sons. Even when he wasn't physically able to hunt, Jake enjoyed riding along bear hunting and listening to the dogs. He also enjoyed ice fishing.

Jake is survived by his wife of 46 years, Sue; four sons, Keith Peterson, Kyle (Dana) Peterson, Norm (Jess) Peterson and Chad (Nel) Peterson; grandchildren, Brittany, Jacob (Alley), Willimina "Billie" (Brendon), Lindsey, Emily, Abby and Bailey; two great-grandchildren, Piper and Dante; sister, Gail Simmons. He is further survived by many nieces,

Joyce J. DeBauch

On Oct. 16, 1954, she was united in marriage to the love of her life, Vincent DeBauch, at Fort Carson in Colorado. Soon after their marriage, the couple moved back to Wisconsin where they raised their children. Joyce worked at Mirro Aluminum and Saranac Glove Company.

Joyce and Vincent enjoyed going on fishing trips to Canada, camping and gardening. Together they had the opportunity to visit all 50 states. Joyce loved baking for her family. Throughout the years, she was a very active volunteer in her community. Vincent preceded her in death on Jan. 25, 2022.

Left to cherish her memory are her three daughters, Judy DeBauch, of Green Bay, Carolyn (Kirk) Fishbaugh, of Hobart, Brenda (Dennis) Wiskow, of the Town of Underhill; two sons, Gary DeBauch and Steve (Joanne) DeBauch, both of Gillett; grandchildren, Tanya, Jason, Lee eventually developed a handicap in his right leg that affected his ability to walk. But his determination to continue doing the things he loved drove him to work harder. Ever resilient, he developed a fitness regimen to stay mobile with minimal assistance. This ultimately led him to Competitive Edge Performance (CEP) as a physical therapy client. Here he forged valuable friendships as he sought out the newest treatments and technologies. Partnering with CEP, he led Stand Up Paddleboarding clinics for veterans with PTSD.

As a grandfather, Lee passed down survival tips, gadgets and cherished memories, delighting his grandchildren with boyhood stories and pirate treasure legends.

In 2016, Lee reconnected with Jan Betts, whom he met and dated while they were students at Wittenberg University. A romance blossomed, and they began spending more and more time together, splitting their time between Palm Harbor, Florida, and Gillett. Summers at their cabin on the Oconto River meant boating, long rides on their ATVs and many laughs with Jan's family.

Lee is survived by his life partner, Jan Betts; daughter, Erica Rivers (Bryon); grandchildren Lauren, Jake and Kelly; his sister, Lynn Smith; his brother, Craig Smith; and loving family members, Jennifer Czerwinski (Dan), Jason Betts (Chanda), Allie, Olivia, Peter and Meghan.

Lee's humor, resilience and adventurous spirit will be deeply missed by all who knew him. His family will remember him with a celebration of life in May 2025 (more details to come), and we invite you to honor Lee by sharing your favorite stories, memories and pictures on his Kudoboard <https://www.kudoboard.com/boards/XhG9pXrx> (click hyperlink or copy and past address into your browser).

Car hits snowplow, woman killed

By NEW MEDIA STAFF

An Oconto woman died Feb. 2 when she lost control of her car and rear-ended a snowplow on U.S. Highway 41 south of Oconto. The Wisconsin State Patrol said Sarah M. Yedynak, 26, was killed in the crash, which occurred at about 8 a.m. in the southbound lane of Highway 41 near Frog Pond Road. Yedynak was driving a 2012 Cadillac CTS when she apparently lost control of the vehicle on the slippery road. The snowplow, driven by a 50-year-old man, had stopped in the left-turn lane when it was struck. The snowplow driver was not injured, according to the State Patrol news release. Assisting agencies included the Oconto County Sheriff's Department, Oconto Police Department, Oconto Fire and Rescue, Brown County Medical Examiner, and Oconto County Emergency Dispatch Center.

Cervical cancer rates increase for women

ThedaCare is encouraging more women to play an active role in helping to reduce incidents of cervical cancer across central and north-eastern Wisconsin.

"Protection from cervical cancer begins with healthy lifestyle choices, early detection through regular exams and screenings, and vaccination against certain viruses," said Dr. Emily Gonnering, ThedaCare family medicine physician. "We want women to understand the screening guidelines as well as their risk and prevention steps."

Cervical cancer, a disease that forms in the cervix, is highly treatable when caught early, Gonnering said. In recent years, screening rates among some eligible groups have declined, leading to an increase in diagnoses.

In women ages 30-44, cervical cancer rates increased 1.7% each year from 2012 to 2019, according to the American Cancer Society (ACS). Experts say confusion around changing screening guidelines may have contributed to a drop-off in women following through on testing.

Any woman can develop cervical cancer, according to Gonnering. The disease develops in the cervix, the entrance to the uterus from the vagina.

About 99% of cervical cancer cases are linked to infection with high-risk human papillomavirus, (HPV), according to the World Health Organization. This is a common virus transmitted through sexual contact.

ACS estimated 2024

EMILY GONNERING

About 4,300 women were projected to die from the disease.

The toll of the disease disproportionately affects certain minority groups, Gonnering said. The cervical cancer death rate among Black women and Indigenous women is 65% higher than in white women.

Cervical cancer is most frequently diagnosed in women between the ages of 35 and 44. It rarely develops in women younger than 20.

Once one of the most common causes of cancer death among American women, rates of the disease dropped by more than half between the mid-1970s and mid-2000s. Improved prevention and screening have helped, Gonnering said.

Though cervical cancer rates have been increasing in women ages 30-44, they've declined 11% each year for women ages 20-24. That likely reflects the first signs of cancer prevention from HPV vaccination.

Health experts recommend that women at normal risk for cervical cancer should begin testing at age 25. Those aged 25-65 should have a primary HPV test every five years. A primary HPV test is one that is done by itself for screening.

Women older than 65 who have undergone regular screening in the would bring the diagnosis of around 13,800 cases of invasive cervical cancer.

past 10 years with normal results can stop cervical cancer screening.

"It's important to also understand that women should complete routine health care visits every year, regardless of whether they're due for cervical cancer screening," Gonnering said. "Staying current with your health care visits will enable your provider to better monitor your physical health over time and more effectively assist you in your efforts to reduce your cervical cancer risk."

In its early stages, cervical cancers and pre-cancers often have no symptoms, Gonnering said. If symptoms do occur, they often include but aren't limited to abnormal vaginal bleeding, an unusual discharge from the vagina, pain during sex and pain in the pelvic region.

Getting vaccinated against HPV, if eligible, and completing screenings are important steps in preventing cervical cancer, Gonnering noted.

The ACS recommends HPV vaccination of children, including boys, between the ages of 9 and 12.

Children and young adults ages 13-26 who have not been vaccinated, or who haven't gotten all their doses, should get the vaccine as soon as possible.

"Through screening and vaccination, we hope to see a decrease in the number of women diagnosed with cervical cancer," Gonnering said. "If you have any questions around whether you're due for screening, please reach out to your health care team."

YOUR RIGHT TO KNOW

Protect press against frivolous lawsuits

Shereen Siewert, publisher of the Wausau Pilot and Review, has been breathing easier these days. In September, a Wisconsin appeals court upheld a lower court's dismissal of state Sen. Cory Tomczyk's defamation lawsuit against Siewert, the nonprofit newsroom she founded in 2017, and one of its reporters.

The ruling, which Tomczyk did not appeal, ended a three-year legal nightmare that began after the Pilot and Review reported that Tomczyk, before joining the Wisconsin Legislature, "was widely overheard" calling a 13-year-old boy a "fag" at a Marathon County board meeting about a surprisingly contentious resolution affirming community inclusivity. Tomczyk denied using the slur and accused the news outlet of having "smeared" his reputation.

Although the Pilot and Review prevailed, the lawsuit took a severe financial and emotional toll, including some $200,000 in legal bills, lost donors and sponsors and the trauma of fearing bankruptcy while Siewert was caring for her dying sister and mother.

"I had serious conversations with my son about selling him my home if I couldn't pay my legal bills," said Siewert, noting that she was personally named in the suit. "I woke up in a panic thinking — I'm 56 years old and am about to lose everything."

The case drives home the need for what are sometimes called anti-SLAPP laws; the acronym stands for strategic lawsuits against public participation. While 34 states and the District of Columbia have enacted such laws to protect media and individuals from frivolous defamation lawsuits, Wisconsin has not.

"We are starkly aware that any reporter and any news organization in Wisconsin can be sued at any time for anything," Siewert said. "Every time we write a story, we're putting our livelihood on the line."

Bills introduced last year by Democrats would have allowed Wisconsin judges to quickly dismiss SLAPP suits and require plaintiffs to pay the defendants' legal fees. The state's GOP-controlled legislature did not even give them a hearing. But 2025 offers lawmakers a fresh opportunity to pass anti-SLAPP legislation.

Under the current standard set for defamation of public figures, a news outlet must show "actual malice" in publishing the information in question — either knowing it to be false or with "reckless disregard" as to its veracity. The Pilot and Review argued, and both a trial court judge and three-member appeals court panel unanimously agreed, that Tomczyk, as a local businessman who publicly opposed a resolution to declare Wausau a "Community for All," qualified as a public figure and had failed to prove "actual malice."

Indeed, the record showed that the Pilot and Review took appropriate steps to affirm the accuracy of its reporting. Three people swore they heard him use the slur, which he acknowledged using on other occasions. (Tomczyk did not respond to requests for comment for this column.)

The two lead Democrats behind last year's anti-SLAPP bills — Sen. Melissa Agard of Madison and Rep. Jimmy Anderson of Fitchburg — aren't returning this session.

Rep. Alex Joers, D-Middleton, expects his colleagues will revive the legislation in 2025 and hopes slimmer partisan margins will encourage more compromise than in the past. The Assembly's unanimous passage last year of a bill to protect student media from censorship showed Republicans and Democrats can find common ground on press protections. (The bill, however, died in the Senate.)

The benefits of an anti-SLAPP law would extend beyond newsrooms. Joers, who worked for Agard before joining the Legislature, recalled Agard researching the issue after learning that companies were suing people who left negative reviews on Yelp. Anti-SLAPP laws in other states — including Republican-led Texas and Tennessee — have protected residents from expensive lawsuits.

"This could happen to anybody," Joers said.

It should happen to no one.

Giving helped Operation Christmas Child

To the editor:

The overwhelming generosity of the people of Shawano helped provide joy to children in need through Operation Christmas Child shoebox gifts this season. Across the U.S., the Samaritan's Purse project collected 10.5 million shoebox gifts in 2024. Combined with those collected from partnering countries in 2024, the ministry is now sending over 11.9 million shoebox gifts to children worldwide.

Shoebox packers brought joy and hope to children around the world through fun, full, personalized gifts. For many children, this is the first gift they have ever received. Each shoebox gift is a tangible expression of God's love, given to children in need around the world. Since 1993, Operation Christmas Child has collected and delivered more than 232 million gift-filled shoeboxes to children in more than 170 countries and territories.

Across the region, shoebox packers often shop for deals on shoebox items throughout the year, and many serve at a deeper level by becoming a year-round volunteer. Information about ways area participants can get involved year-round can also be found at samaritanspurse.org/occ.

Although local Shawano

drop-off locations for shoebox gifts are closed until Nov. 17, anyone can still be a part of this life-changing project by conveniently packing a shoebox gift online in just a few simple clicks at www.samaritanspurse.org/buildonline.

These simple gifts, packed with love, remind children around the world that they are loved and not forgotten.

Medicare Advantage deserves hard look

Elon Musk recently announced his intention to cut $1 trillion in federal spending through the new U.S. Department of Government Efficiency. As the department looks for ways to trim waste, one program that deserves immediate attention is Medicare Advantage (MA).

This is the component of Medicare that allows seniors to opt-in and purchase privately run government-subsidized health plans. It's a popular program that typically bundles medical, hospital, and drug coverage, often including extras like vision and dental. MA produces better health outcomes than traditional Medicare, making it a good deal for both patients and taxpayers.

Yet for all these benefits, the program sorely needs reform.

It currently wastes billions of dollars each year as a result of perverse incentives, inefficient procedures, and misguided policies. Rethinking the most dysfunctional aspects of MA could dramatically lower costs while improving quality of care.

One of the program's most glaring inefficiencies concerns a practice known as "upcoding" or "over-coding." This is when a health plan deliberately diagnoses patients with additional ailments in order to make them appear sicker, and thus riskier and more expensive to insure.

Misrepresenting a patient's health may seem like the exact opposite of what an insurance provider is supposed to do. But for the company, increasing the number of diagnoses means more money from the federal government. That's because, under current rules, the government reimburses plans more generously for patients with higher "risk scores." In recent years, risk-score inflation has become rampant.

In 2021, for instance, patient risk scores in MA were 12.1% higher, on average, than for patients in traditional Medicare, according to analysis from the Medicare Payment Advisory Commission.

Fortunately, there are relatively straightforward ways to fix the problem.

Currently, Medicare is required to reduce payments to MA insurance plans by at least 5.9% to reflect differences in coding across different populations. By increasing this figure — known as the "minimum risk reduction" — to 8%, the government could remove the incentive for plans to overstate how sick patients are. According to an estimate from the Congressional Budget Office, this would save at least $47 billion over a seven-year period.

The government could reduce MA waste even more significantly by rethinking MA's system of "quality bonuses."

Right now, Medicare pays bonuses to MA plans that perform well on measures of customer satisfaction. Plans in certain urban areas are even eligible for "double bonuses." The aim is to encourage the insurance providers to improve quality — but that isn't how the arrangement has worked out.

The bonus program has had only a questionable effect on plan quality while substantially driving up overall MA costs, according to an analysis by the Urban Institute. Meanwhile, the double-bonus payments have increased racial disparities in how Medicare funds are distributed. And none of this has improved patient care.

The Congressional Budget Office estimates that eliminating double bonuses alone would reduce MA spending by $18 billion over seven years. The office also looked at another, more technical reform, which would do away with so-called "benchmark increases" tied to quality bonuses, and estimated the savings at more than $94 billion.

Add it all up, and ending MA quality bonuses could save taxpayers huge sums, with no negative impact on patients.

Medicare Advantage offers enormous value to seniors, and should be preserved. But it deserves scrutiny from the new Department of Government Efficiency for ways to reduce waste. Reforming the program could put Musk well on the way to his savings goal.

FARM LIFE FROM A FARM WIFE

Third cat comes aboard to expel rodents

Late summer of 2022, I connected with Sarah Magee, a tenderhearted woman who is in the business of rehoming cats. We were in need of a couple of natural mouse hunters and knew of her reputation of finding homes for healthy, neutered cats. She has since established a nonprofit called Joy's Place Animal Rescue.

For a couple of years, it was just the two cats we received from Sarah. They settled in very comfortably and since their arrival, we've had an almost non-existent rodent problem. Extremely satisfying.

Over time, I noticed we began to have a transient visitor. A battle-scarred and weatherworn cat would trudge over to our house from parts unknown, to hydrate and replenish. I saw him once come right down the road. The next time I'd spot him, he'd be picking his way through our corn field. His appearance was sporadic and his countenance cautious, always with the notion he was trespassing and seemingly would get kicked out right soon if he didn't watch out.

His yellow coat appeared stained, marred with tufts sticking up hither and yon, burrs embedded in his tail; ear bent sideways, evidence of a fierce clash at some point. His eyes looked mattered. We perceived he had little peripheral vision, was likely deaf (he didn't appear to startle easily) and probably half blind. A complete sorry sight, to be honest.

Later, to my dismay, I realized I had not offered him the greatest hospitality. In my mind, I had two sweet girls who loved their private domain and were very content to live in the barn with only each other for company. Not wanting to rock the boat, I did nothing to encourage this uninvited visitor to our home barn.

After some time, he was coming quite often — as much as I can remember, ev-

Summer partying just around corner in Shawano

Thursdayz at Franklin, Naberhood Block Party schedules released

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

The Cloud Nine Fire Show, which was a hit last summer, will return in August to conclude the Tuesday family night lineup of the Naberhood Block Parties. FILE | NEW MEDIA

Recent warmer temperatures might have some folks pining for summer, but for the city of Shawano, summer plans are all set with finalized schedules for Thursdayz at Franklin and the Naberhood block parties.

Thursdayz will be starting its lineup with Johnny Wad on June 5 and ending Aug. 21 with Star Six Nine, a rock band that includes a little of everything. Both bands are traditional staples for Thursdayz and tend to be big attractions for locals and visitors. Returning to Franklin Park are The Presidents, a party rock band that has been absent from the Shawano area for a few years, according to Matt Hendricks, the city's park and recreation director.

There are also some newcomers to the summer series, including a tribute band called Taylor and Anti-Heroes playing Taylor Swift songs, as well as Ozzmosis, a tribute band to Ozzy Osbourne and Black Sabbath.

Meanwhile, the Naberhood Block Parties are back for another summer, with live music Saturday nights and family events Tuesday nights. Game nights and arts and crafts are part of the schedule, and the Disney Night that debuted last

Turkey fan plaque turns feathers into decoy

Darrell Bartel's first turkey hunt didn't go as planned, but it had an outcome he could never have foreseen.

The Waupaca Foundry Inc. supervisor hunted with a co-worker who tried for three days to coax a gobbler to box and slate calls. Finally a tom turkey came in, hiding behind a tree as his caller whispered: "Shoot."

"I was shaking bad," Bartel recalled as he dropped the bird with his shotgun.

That 2001 turkey wasn't especially huge or impressive, but Bartel decided to mount the tail feathers as many hunters do for a rustic memento of a successful hunt.

He went to a local sporting goods store and bought a standard mounting plaque made of wood. Bartel was not impressed.

"It didn't fit together right or look good," he said.

Like so many thousands of inventors before him, it took a sub-par product to get those creative fluids flowing, and the seed was planted for a better tail-mounting creation.

His first design featured a wooden plaque with holes on the bottom to add turkey feet (to display the spurs), a beard and even the shotgun shells used to bag the bird. His small workshop at his rural Waupaca home shows several of his old plaques as well as his new designs.

Darrell Bartel, 66, of Waupaca, holds one of his original birch tail fan plaques, along with samples of his patented combination plaque and tail fan decoy. The lightweight plastic design is weather resistant and spins in a slight breeze to add movement that brings gobblers in for hunters.

In 2002, he added a piece of pipe between two round, wooden pieces for his plaque so a steel stake could be added, turning a tail fan into an effective field decoy. The feathers drew a turkey's attention, but the heavy wood still didn't spin in the breeze.

Three years later, he bought his first high-density polyethylene (HDPE) plastic and cut it into two 8-inch diameter pieces a half-inch thick (essentially the same design he uses today).

"I routed out the void to accommodate the cured fantail, drilled out a center hole to place a T-nut and philips head bolt to hold the two halves together, securing the fantail and also drilling a hole in the base to place the holder onto a steel stake," he said.

"This allows the fantail to turn spontaneously in the slightest breeze."

Thus, Jake's Tail Holder (named for his youngest son Jacob) was born. After many successful hunts with his combo trophy mount and decoy, he applied for a U.S. patent in 2015 and received a patent pending award a few months later. His hard work and creativity paid off when he received his first patent in 2018.

the status quo, he added a variety of state shapes to the front panel the next year.

In 2019, he also added a classic life-sized hen turkey shape called Jen the Hen, mademore realistic with a photographic image applied to a hydrographic water-dipping process that is similar to that used to apply camo or other finishes to gun barrels and vehicle bumpers. This weather-resistant image is perfect for hunters when they are chasing turkeys in rain, snow and sleet. He points to several Canada goose decoys he's made with the same process that have perched in his back yard bordering the Waupaca River for six years. They still look new.

He's also made a few owl and crow decoys.

He has a patent pending on the decoy design, which also turns in the slightest breeze like the tail fan holder. He added a jake decoy to create a "Jake Meets Jenny" combo.

The Marine Corps veteran with Middle East tours of duty in 1976-80 taught himself to use a CNC machine to cut out and engrave his plaques. He even offers first-time hunters and youths free engraving on their plaques. Now retired, the 66-year-old inventor also completed a Fox Valley Technical College course to help him with marketing and other entrepreneurship skills.

His trademarked FlatlineYourBird slogan refers not only to the advantages of a flat silhouette decoy (easy to carry, store and use) but also when the successful hunter uses them to bag a gobbler and thus "flat-lines" the turkey. He uses a mock electrocardiogram in his advertising to emphasize the name.

Bartel's products are 100% American made, and he's sourced every portion of the construction process close to home.

He just received corporate approval from Scheels to sell some of his tail fan plaques at the store in Appleton, and he hopes other stores will follow. You can find all his products and order through his website at www.flatlineyourbird.net.

ery other day. With disdain, I started calling him Freddy the Freeloader. Ashamed, I do admit that and have since asked Freddy to forgive me.

These days he has joined us full-time, sleeps tucked in a straw hole he's fashioned for himself in our safe, dry barn; very close to the breakfast/dinner/supper table as this is an eat-when-the-desire-hits smorgasbord.

With regular feeding and fresh water plus TLC (he's allowed me to pet him), the transformation has been remarkable. His coat has since become glossy yellow, he's filled out, his burrs are gone and eyes clear and focused. Contrary to our first impression that he's hard of hearing, he comes running as soon as I walk into the barn calling my usual greeting in a singsong voice, "Good morning, my kitties. How's everyone doing?" The trio come like a mad stampede, meowing their acknowledgement as I slip through the door — their loud purring, music to my ears.

I was never, ever a cat person. Growing up on the farm and even in the farm marriage partnership my husband and I share, we never had cats as so-called pets. They were there for one purpose: rodent control.

These days, the cats in my barn are dearly loved and pampered. They have new portions of dry cat food and clean, fresh water daily. I say that not to brag at all — it's what people are supposed to do if they have animals in their care — but back in the day, barn cats were treated more like they're there for a purpose, not a pampering. If one happened to perish, I did not bemoan that fact. It just was.

If one of mine go on a retreat, I fret, giving my (trying so hard to focus) husband an up-to-date attendance report. "Little Yellow has been gone for a full week now." or "Graycie hasn't shown up since last Tuesday. She was there when we had that one storm, remember?" or "Where on earth do they go?" or "I wonder where Fred came from?" As if he has the answer. He listens with a bewildered smile and oh so patiently, but doesn't have an invested heart like me. I get it.

In the barn next to the kitty's food and water bowls, we've placed a live trap. I had noticed that many times — even when there were just the two of them up there — their food and water were completely empty. No way could just two cats consume all of that in one day.

Setting the trap, we've humanely caught quite a number of raccoons and opossums over the years. Their home is out in the woods making a living. When they come into my territory and eat the food I purchased for my cats, it's game on. Sorry woodland creatures; you're trespassing.

So now it's my three musketeers up in the barn mow. When before the new one was met with a low growl, they've all slowly started to make friends. I discovered with delight one day all three had their heads in the breakfast bowl at the same time. Freddy the Freeloader has since been affectionately dubbed simply "Fred." He's one of us and has a place at the table.

year will return with characters greeting children, Disney karaoke and more.

The block parties have become really popular, which makes it easy for the recreation staff to decide to continue them. Hendricks noted that moving the Saturday music from the afternoon to the evening has yielded more participation and enjoyment. He added that the businesses have really enjoyed the time shift, seeing more people walk through their doors.

"We've been really happy with (the block parties)," Hendricks said. "Success is measured in a couple of different ways. One of the ways people think of first is how many attended. You wouldn't want to put 2,000 people at the Naberhood because it wouldn't fit. More is not an indicator as much as the quality of the experience. For the Naberhood, it seems 150-300 people fills that space pretty well. On both accounts, I believe that we're doing really well."

The only challenge is keeping each of the lineups interesting, according to Hendricks. While it's important to bring the showstoppers back because the people want them, it's important to infuse the lineups with new blood, as well.

"It's kind of a mix," Hendricks said. "You always want to bring back the popular ones, but we don't want it to be the same exact experience year after year. Some of them we've had before — yoga, improv, Disney. National Night Out has been good and unique."

Hendricks noted that both the Naberhood and Thursdayz events have attracted enough attention that folks don't even need to have a schedule in hand to know that fun is about to commence on a given night.

"One of the nice things about starting at 6 o'clock is that, even if people didn't have a schedule, they still know that something's going on there on Tuesday, Thursday or Saturday," Hendricks said, noting that when the times were different for movies and other activities, it didn't generate as much attention. "Having a consistent time and day was important."

Thursdayz have been part of the landscape longer, and not even the 2020 pandemic could completely derail the weekly concert series.

"It feels like it's become part of the culture of Shawano," Hendricks said. "It seems like people really get excited about it. They ask questions about it. There's a lot of interest and 'Can we do this? Can we do that?' That's been really fun to see grow, because the first year or two, we still get feedback and like any other program, you want to stay with what's successful but change it up so it's not the same."

He added the tribute bands are a first for Thursdayz. Many of the bands perform cover songs of a variety of artists, but this will be the first time bands geared toward specific performers are part of the entertainment.

"This will bring different niches of people," Hendricks said. "With tribute bands, you have people coming in full costume and playing the part. That's something that's a little bit new for this year."

The city is still working on its music lineup for Sunday nights at Arlington Park, but officials plan to release the information within the next couple of months.

IN THE KITCHEN WITH FRANCESCA

Good breakfast includes sweet, savory items

February is National Hot Breakfast Month. When I think of hot breakfast, I generally think sweet — pancakes, waffles, French toast, etc. — with eggs or meat on the side. Recently I was looking through an old cookbook for a pancake recipe, and I found a recipe for buttermilk pancakes. Buttermilk pancakes have a great texture, but sometimes, especially with homemade buttermilk, can have a rather odd taste.

However, I decided to try out the recipe, with the addition of vanilla and almond extract. They were quite delicious – definitely a keeper recipe. By the way, do not overmix these pancakes, lumps are normal. A tip for knowing if the griddle is hot enough, that I actually picked up from a Beverly Cleary book is to drop a drop of cold water on the griddle. If it snaps and evaporates quickly, the griddle is hot enough.

Although I am fairly certain that putting vanilla and almond extract in pancakes is uncommon, I strongly encourage you to try it. My family has been experimenting with extracts in pancakes for years, and these two extracts are definitely the best. I cannot recommend lemon extract in pancakes, however — it makes them taste weird, especially with butter and syrup. Tip: To make 1 cup of homemade buttermilk, add 1 tablespoon of vinegar or lemon juice to a 1-cup measuring cup and add enough milk to equal one cup. Let sit for at least five minutes before using. Bacon, a quintessential breakfast meat, is one of my favorite meats. There are many ways to cook bacon, but my favorite chewy, low-stress, easy clean-up method is oven bacon. Cooking bacon on the stovetop or under the broiler requires constant attention, and can be quite messy. However, with oven bacon, lining the pan cuts out the scraping and scrubbing. When the fat has cooled, simply lift out and discard the lining and fat. You do not even have to flip the bacon. Although, the bacon tastes great plain, this is also a good method to use when making things that require pre-made bacon, for example, breakfast bakes, soups and BLTs. You can prepare the rest Buttermilk pancakes can be an easy thing to make for breakfast and are quite tasty, but if you want to jazz things up a little bit, adding vanilla or almond extract will really sweeten the meal.

Bacon can be cooked in many ways, but doing it in the oven with pan lining can cut down on the cleanup.

CREPES

- 1/2 tsp. vegetable oil
- 1 1/2 cups whole milk
- 1 cup flour
- 1/4 tsp. salt
- 1 tsp. sugar
- 3 large eggs
- 2 tbsp. melted butter, cooled

Add oil to a 10-inch nonstick skillet and spread with paper towel over bottom and sides. Heat skillet over low heat for at least 5 minutes. While skillet is heating, in a large bowl, whisk together flour, sugar, and salt. In a medium bowl, whisk together milk and eggs. Add half of the milk mixture to the flour mixture and whisk until smooth. Add melted butter and whisk until combined. Add remaining milk mixture and whisk until smooth. Set a cooling rack next to stove. Increase heat to medium and heat skillet for 1 more minute. Lift and tilt skillet and pour 1/4 cup of batter (using a dry measuring cup) into it; swirl batter around to evenly coat the bottom of the skillet. Return skillet to stove and cook until surface looks dry and crepe starts to brown at edges. Working quickly, slide spatula under crepe and flip crepe. Cook until the second side is spotty brown. Transfer to cooling rack, or plate if eating immediately. Fill, fold, and top crepes as desired.

BUTTERMILK PANCAKES

- 2 cups sifted flour
- 1 tsp. salt
- 2 eggs, beaten slightly
- 2 tbsp. melted butter
- 1 tsp. baking soda
- 2 tbsp. sugar
- 2 cups buttermilk
- 1/2 tsp. vanilla extract (optional)
- 1/2 tsp. almond extract (optional)

Start heating the griddle over low heat. Melt the butter, set aside. Sift the flour, baking soda, salt and sugar into a bowl. Add the eggs, buttermilk, vanilla and almond extracts (if using) and melted butter; stir just until mixed. Batter will be lumpy. Increase griddle heat to desired temperature. Pour 1/4 cup (or 1/8 cup for smaller pancakes) batter for each pancake onto hot greased griddle; cook until bubbles cover surface. Flip and brown on the other side. Serve with desired toppings.

OVEN BACON

- 1 lb. of bacon

Line bottom and sides of a large rimmed baking sheet with parchment paper or aluminum foil. Arrange bacon in rows; avoid overlapping. Place the sheet in a cold oven and preheat to 350 degrees. Bake for approximately 20 minutes, or until done. Drain bacon on a plate lined with paper towels or napkins.

of the recipe while the bacon bakes. I have only ever tried this method with thick-cut bacon, so if you are using thin bacon, the baking time will probably be less than 20 minutes. Lastly, crepes, a delicate and tender kind of French pancake, are another delicious breakfast option. Crepes, although they require more work, time and attention, are still quite doable. Crepes can have either sweet or savory fillings. I personally like sweet — butter, syrup, cream cheese filling, jam, whipped cream or fruit. For savory, the book where I got the crepe recipe from suggests cheese, ham, scrambled eggs, chopped herbs or sliced scallions.

One of the most important things when making crepes is having a non-stick pan (I use a stainless steel pan). Because crepes are so delicate, if they stick to the pan they will tear and not cook properly. Also, watch the temperature while cooking. The goal is to have the pan hot enough to brown the crepes nicely but not too hot as to burn them. If, when you pour in the batter and start swirling, the batter bubbles like crazy, the pan is too hot — turn down the heat.

Pulaski High performing ‘Once Upon a Mattress’

Pulaski High School students will soon perform this year’s musical, “Once Upon a Mattress.” The show is a “comic retelling of the children’s story “The Princess and the Pea,” said Amy Tubbs, drama director. “Queen Aggravain wants to find the perfect princess for her son, Prince Dauntless, but everyone fails the tests that she and the Wizard create. The King has been cursed and is unable to speak, communicating only in pantomime. Because no one in the kingdom is allowed to marry before the prince, Lady Larken and Sir Harry have a problem with their baby on the way. “Harry travels to another kingdom and brings back a swamp princess, Princess Winnifred, who will try to pass the test with the help of the Minstrel and the Jester.” Shows will be performed 7 p.m. Feb. 15 and Feb. 22 and 2 p.m. Feb. 16 and Feb. 23 at the Ripley Performing Arts Center at Pulaski High School, 1040 S. St. Augustine St., Pulaski. Tickets are $8 and available for purchase at pulaskihs.ludus.com.

The King, played by Hayden Witte, left, is excited for Prince Dauntless, played by Crosby Willette, to marry Princess Winnifred, played by Gwen Rybak, but Queen Aggravain, played by Morgan Miskulin, doesn’t want her son to marry yet.

Bowling event raises money for K-9s

By KEVIN PASSON
Editor-in-Chief

Two dozen teams of five bowlers each converged on Lakeshore Lanes on Feb. 1 to raise money for the Shawano County Sheriff's Department's K-9 units.

Proceeds have yet to be tallied. Detective Craig Rekoske said the amount raised varies from year to year, but it's usually between $4,000 and $7,000.

"Each team is matched up against another team, but every team is also competing against all other teams," Rekoske said. "There are also bucket raffles and the paddle wheel, which is where a lot of the money comes from."

There are cash prizes for top scoring teams.

"My team has never won anything in our lives," Rekoske said. "That's why this year we changed it up, and we had prizes for the seventh- and 12th-place teams, too. That way you don't have to be the best to win."

Proceeds from the bowling event are used for training, equipment and veterinarian care for the dogs.

"Village Vet donates a lot of care, but we do pay them for some services," Rekoske said. "I was a K-9 handler for 14 years, so this is my way to raise funds and give back."

The event is run by the nonprofit SOS K-9 (Supporters of Shawano K-9), which exists solely to raise funds for the program. A golf outing in August each year raises funds that are set aside for when it comes time to purchase a new dog.

"SOS K-9 started 18 or 19 years ago," Rekoske said. "It's an independent group. When we have bills to be paid, we turn them over to them, and they write a check either to the department if the department paid for it or to the handler if they have a receipt."

Rekoske said the designated weekends for the bowling and golf fundraisers have pretty much stayed the same. That allows people to plan on attending and participating each year without having to worry about checking and juggling their schedules.

CHIEFS' 3-PEAT OR EAGLES' REVENGE?

Super Bowl LIX teams playing at the top of their games

BY JACOB WESTENDORF
Green & Gold Express

For the second time in three years, the Philadelphia Eagles and Kansas City Chiefs will meet in the Super Bowl. The Chiefs are playing in hopes of capturing their consecutive NFL title. The Eagles are looking for a bit of revenge from two years ago. What will it take for either team to lift the Lombardi Trophy after the game? Chiefs' offense vs. Eagles' defense The Eagles' defense helped lead them to the Super Bowl during the 2022 season. Their pass rush was vicious, as they set the team record for sacks that year. The current team is not as good as they were two years ago, but Philadelphia's pass rush is still a weapon for them with Vic Fangio at the controls. Josh Sweat is their leading man with eight sacks on the year. Nolan Smith has had a sack in each of the first three playoff games, including two against Green Bay in the Wild Card round. The interior of Philadelphia's pass rush is where the money is made. Milton Williams has had a breakout season, and Jalen Carter might be the best defensive tackle in all of football. In the secondary, general manager Howie Roseman was active in addressing a weakness and turning it into a legitimate strength. Quinyon Mitchell was a first-round pick and has emerged as the team's best cornerback. Across from him is Darius Slay, who has been excellent in a complementary role this season. Cooper DeJean has been excellent as a nickelback and had a big pass breakup early in the team's NFC championship win over the Commanders. Perhaps the biggest change the Eagles made on defense was at defensive coordinator.

The Chiefs are aiming to make NFL history by winning three straight Super Bowls. Patrick Mahomes, Andy Reid and Travis Kelce led last year's Chiefs offense to the first back-to-back Super Bowl championships since the 2003-04 New England Patriots. The last time the Packers played the Chiefs was in 2023 at Lambeau Field.

When will the Pack be back?
Can LaFleur and the front office get Green Bay into the Super Bowl?

BY JACOB WESTENDORF
Green & Gold Express

If you've been following the Green Bay Packers since the 1990s, all you've known is great quarterback play. Brett Favre took the reins in 1992. Aaron Rodgers took over for him in 2008. Jordan Love looks to be continuing the lineage with two good seasons after taking over for Rodgers. The three quarterbacks have combined for seven MVP awards, three Super Bowl appearances and two championships. Matt LaFleur was tasked with adding a second championship to Rodgers' resume, while also getting Love ready to play when his time came. LaFleur succeeded at one of those missions. Love has exceeded expectations, including a big second half of his debut season as a starter. Despite the overall excellence of LaFleur in the regular season, it has not translated to postseason success. LaFleur has coached in two conference championship games and earned the number one seed in the NFC playoffs twice but flamed out at home on both occasions. Overall, LaFleur's playoff record is 3-5, including this year's 22-10 loss to the Philadelphia Eagles in the Wild Card round. The disappointment from being one-and-done in the playoffs came on the heels of a year where expectations were high. The year 2023 was a bit of a free roll in a city called Titletown. The Packers had no expectations, so they exceeded them. Making the playoffs was simply good enough in 2023. Anything from there

Rushing, passing games can't find rhythm

Injuries play major factor in regression

BY LUKE REIMER
Green & Gold Expres

After quarterback Jordan Love got hot to end the 2023-24 season, many within the NFL sphere predicted Green Bay to be one of the highest-powered offenses this past year. With Christian Watson, Romeo Doubs and Jayden Reed at his disposal, Love finished the 2023 season with 32 touchdown passes in his first season as a starter; it seemed like he and the Packers' passing offense as whole were just scratching the surface of what fans could see in 2024. Add into the equation that head coach Matt LaFleur continues to be thought of as one of the best offensive play-callers in the NFL and that Green Bay replaced Aaron Jones with Josh Jacobs. It looked like the Packers were the team to beat in the NFC this season.

In Green Bay's first game in 2024, it looked like the offense had not skipped a beat. Against one of the best defenses in the NFL in Philadelphia, Love completed 17-of-34 passes for 260 yards and two touchdowns. That was before Love went down with a leg injury. After Love went down, it became obvious that the Packers' philosophy changed, as it became more run-heavy than many would have thought. With Malik Willis under center, Green Bay immediately found a two-headed rushing attack, partnered with Jacobs. Together, the duo led a two-game stretch of 449 combined rushing yards against the Indianapolis Colts and the Tennessee Titans in back-to-back games.

While Love did eventually come back, these two games foreshadowed what the offense came to be this season. On the season, Green Bay ranked fifth in the league with 2,496 rushing yards. On top of that, the team finished with 23 rushing touchdowns, which again ranked fifth in the entire league.

So while the rushing game was certainly the strength of the offense, one has to wonder why the passing game was not able to make that next step. While injuries to Love probably delayed the continued progression of the offense, it seemed that

Defense impresses in first year with Hafley

By LUKE REIMER
Green & Gold Express

While Jordan Love and the development of the young offense was the major story surrounding the Green Bay Packers coming into the season, one underrated addition to the team was new defensive coordinator Jeff Hafley. With Hafley manning the defense, fans and sportswriters alike instantly saw a shift in the overall philosophy and scheme, as Green Bay sent a lot more pressure than anyone was accustomed to seeing.

The first stat that really pops out when reviewing Green Bay's defensive season is that it blitzed at the third-highest percentage in the NFL this year. That, in turn, ranked the team as eighth in sacks across the league with 45. On top of that, it was not just one player who was racking up all of the sacks; it was a team effort.

Rashan Gary led the team in sacks with 57.5, but 13 players came away with at least one sack.

That constant pressure and threat of sacks also played a major role in Green Bay's ability to force turnovers this past season. The Packers finished 2024 with 31 turnovers, which ranked third in the NFL. With 14 fumble recoveries and 17 interceptions, the philosophy of sending pressure early and often more than paid off.

One major benefactor and, in turn, catalyst of the defense was the addition of defensive back Xavier McKinney. McKinney anchored a strong pass defense, leading the team in interceptions with eight and finishing second in the NFL, only behind Detroit's Kerby Joseph.

Jeff Hafley's first season as defensive coordinator was highlighted with improved defensive statistics across the board. GREG MELLIS | GREEN & GOLD EXPRESS

"I thought there was an incredible amount of growth, to be honest with you, in terms of maybe a vision of what we wanted to do and where we went to," said LaFleur, on Hafley's first season coaching the defense. "You make the necessary adjustments and you put your guys in position, and then ultimately, those guys have to go out there and execute."

On top of McKinney, Green Bay saw a breakout season from rookie Edgerrin Cooper when Quay Walker went down with an injury late in the season. Over the final three games of the season, Cooper totaled 17 tackles. More than just his performance when Walker went down, Cooper proved that he can lead the defense in play calling.

There is still room for improvement though, as Gary and Lukas Van Ness did not exactly take the next step in becoming the great pass rushing duo in the NFL. Along with that, Kenny Clark also was not as effective as he was probably needed to be, especially against the run-heavy teams that Green Bay lost to — including the Philadelphia Eagles, Minnesota Vikings and Detroit Lions.

In what seemed to be a developmental year for the defense coming into the season, it is fair to say that it more than impressed, even with injuries to star players like Jaire Alexander. On the season, Green Bay ranked sixth in the NFL in points given up this season, allowing 20 points per game to opposing teams.

While again, it was the offense that was supposed to make the jump this season, it turned into the defense really becoming the strong part of the season. Given the likely additions to the pass rushing and defensive backs units, there should be high expectations for the defense going into next season. Based off this past season, that should be very exciting for Packers fans.

"I thought Hafley did an outstanding job," LaFleur said. "And it is not just Hafley; it is our entire defensive staff."

Above, free agent acquisition Xavier McKinney earned his first All-Pro and Pro Bowl honors for 2024. Here he celebrates an interception with Keisean Nixon in Jacksonville. OFFENSE, injuries to Doubs and son did not help the cause. With the injury concerns after the last two seasons and the overall lack of star play, could adding a playmaker be in the cards for the offseason? Maybe, but as it stands, LaFleur still likes the group of pass catchers around Love.

“I think that our collection of receivers is pretty darn good,” said LaFleur. “I think that we have six guys that we can definitely lean on. I love the group; I think that they work their tails off. I do think that there is a lot more out there for them. We have to be a lot more consistent. We have to make sure that when given those opportunities, we come down with that football.”

Whether it is bringing in a veteran or supplementing the receiver room in the upcoming draft, one thing is certain – the passing game as a whole needs to be better for Green Bay’s offense to really be thought of as one of the better units in the league.

While the stats may be a little misguided due to the injuries surrounding the team, Green Bay finished 16th in the NFL in passing yards with 3,939. When looking at 2023, the team finished with 4,210 passing yards, good for 14th in the NFL.

While those numbers do look good, one thing stands out: As a whole, the passing offense did not get better this past season. Did a strong rushing attack have an impact on that? Of course. But again, with such high expectations on where Love and the group of pass catchers should have been this season, the passing attack and probably the offense as a whole can be seen as tad disappointing.

Jordan Love scrambled when he had, but it sometimes appeared as if he was running more than necessary. The Packers’ inconsistent offense hurt the team down the stretch.

Backup quarterback Malik Willis ran for a touchdown and threw for a score, leading the Packers to a 30-14 rout of the Tennessee Titans. Willis not only won his second straight start subbing for Jordan Love, he got revenge against the team that traded him to Green Bay. Willis helped save Packers season

0-3 could have been much to overcome for Green Bay

By JACOB WESTENDORF
Green & Gold Express

A backup quarterback is like a good lawyer. You never know that you need one until you really need one.

The Green Bay Packers have neglected the backup quarterback position over the years.

If it was not a first round pick like Aaron Rodgers or Jordan Love, chances are that the backup was a journeyman or a late round draft pick the Packers were hoping to develop.

Occasionally that worked with someone like Matt Flynn, but more often than not the backup situation has been a point of contention.

Brian Gutekunst neglected the position a season ago with Jordan Love taking over as the team's starting quarterback.

Sean Clifford was the team's backup. A fifth-round pick that was a rookie.

Clifford never had to play as Love was able to start all 17 games in his "rookie" season.

Michael Pratt was added in the draft last offseason to compete with Clifford for the backup role.

Both Clifford and Pratt were lackluster in the preseason, which led to Gutekunst making a trade as training camp ended.

He traded a seventh-round pick to the Tennessee Titans for Malik Willis.

Willis did not have much time to get acclimated. He was on the team for less than a month when Love went down with a knee injury that would impact the next two games.

Willis was asked to help save the season of a team that had already fallen to 0-1 on the year.

Backup quarterbacks are hoping to keep teams afloat when they are asked to play.

Losing is not unexpected. Backups are, in fact, backups for a reason.

Willis could not afford to lose the games he was asked to play.

An 0-2 start would put the Packers in a large amount of trouble, and 0-3 could end the season before it even began.

Instead, Willis was efficient, confident and calm.

Those are not words used to describe him during his time in Tennessee.

Sometimes a situation is what makes all the difference for a young quarterback.

Willis' first start as a Packer was a 16-10 victory over the Indianapolis Colts.

Willis was asked to make two big plays in the passing game, and he made them.

The following week in his revenge game against his former team, he did more against the Titans, as the Packers won in a rout.

"I just cannot articulate the job that he's done in this short period of time," LaFleur said after the game. "People can't fathom it. I promise you, you guys don't get it. I know you think you got it, but you don't get it. What he's been able to do, I've never seen something like this."

"Hats off to him, hats off to everybody around him, guys rallying, having his back. I think Tom Clements does a great job. And I'd be remiss to say Connor Lewis and Sean Mannion, just the help they've given him, the support. Jordan Love has been instrumental, as well, giving him the tips and hanging right by his side and helping him out all along the way."

Willis would win a third game against the Jacksonville Jaguars with a big throw late to Jayden Reed to set up a game-winning field goal.

Willis would play most of the season finale against the Chicago Bears, and helped lead a go-ahead drive for a field goal before the Bears orchestrated a game-winning drive of their own.

Getting the Packers to 3-1 in the four games he was asked to play had to be more than what the Packers ever could have hoped for.

The Packers will have Willis under contract for the 2025 season and would be wise to keep him, because you never know when you'll need a good backup quarterback.

Special teams provides mixed results in 2024

Consistency lacking in kicking, receiving

By LUKE REIMER
Green & Gold Express

While there certainly have been other reasons why Green Bay has seemingly underperformed in the playoffs throughout the Aaron Rodgers era, one thing certainly stood out - special teams.

Those problems continued to persist in Jordan Love's first season as a starter, as rookie kicker Anders Carlson made 27 of 33 field goals on the season, including 34 of 39 extra points. On top of that, Carlson struggled in the kickoff game. He kicked off 86 times but was only able to record 37 touchbacks, coming out to a 43 touchback percentage.

Green Bay's kicking unit drastically improved in 2024 though as after an off-season of questioning and a few weeks of Brayden Narveson, Green Bay landed on Brandon McManus. McManus instantly provided production for the Packers, winning them two games on last-second field goals.

More than just the game-winning kicks for Green Bay's special teams was the kick defense. In a tight game with Chicago

Green Bay's special teams had its ups and downs in 2024. Top left, special teams coordinator Rich took some heat this year but was re-signed on an extension to keep him in Green Bay through the 2026 season. Top right are long snapper Matt Orzech, kicker Brandon McManus and punter Daniel Whelan. Bottom left, Karl Brooks celebrates after blocking a last-second field goal attempt against Chicago. on Nov. 17, the Bears lined up for a game-winning field goal. Packers defensive lineman Karl Brooks got an early push on the Bears offensive line and got his hand up to block the Bears' game-winning attempt and win the game. This was the first game in a long time that Green Bay recorded a win because of its special teams, not in spite of it.

In Rich Bisaccia's third season as Green Bay's special teams coordinator, some aspects of the unit improved, while others continued to decline. The aspects that declined reared its head on the kick-off coverage team. In 2024, the Packers gave up the third most kickoff yards at 1,323. While those kickoffs yards were somewhat masked by the Packers' defense this season, giving teams starting field position beyond the 30-yard line is a slippery slope moving forward. To add to the list of problems with the special teams unit, it seemed like that part of Green Bay's game suffered a bit of a collapse in the team's Wild Card matchup against the Philadelphia Eagles. The game immediately started with a fumble on a kick return from Keisean Nixon that gave the Eagles prime scoring position early in the game. Later on in the game, finding itself down

10-0, Green Bay had the opportunity to cut the lead to one score, but McManus missed a 38-yard field goal. "I think that the fundamental part of alignment, assignment, key, technique, your eyes being in the right place, to some degree being fundamentally sound in the things that you are doing - it is certainly not the time a lot or trick-em type," said Bisaccia, on what the most important thing about special teams during the playoffs is, when talking to media before Green Bay's playoff game. "(It is) to be fundamentally sound and put yourself in the right position at the right time. You know, this time of year you would really like to stay away from the penalties."

Special teams in the playoffs once again proved to be the Achilles' heel for Green Bay as it looked to advance to the Super Bowl. Not that the team lost because of the special teams unit, but it just goes to show how important that unit is when making a playoff push, especially when those points that Bisaccia made aren't coming to fruition.

Even though those problems presented themselves throughout the season, Bisaccia was re-signed on an extension to keep him in Green Bay through the 2026 season.

With the continued disappointment from the special teams, many teams probably would have moved on from its special teams coordinator, re-signing Bisaccia was probably the right decision for Green Bay, just based on his leadership capabilities. Overall, it is hard to give the Packers special teams anything better than a B- grade on the season, because while there were some good aspects, there are a lot that need to continue to improve if the Packers want to get back to the Super Bowl.

Kicker Brandon McManus was the hero in his first game with Green Bay. Signed after Week 6 to replace rookie Brayden Narveson, McManus made a 45-yard field goal as time expired to give Green Bay a 24-22 win over Houston in Week 7.

Packers finally find kicker

BY LUKE REIMER
Green & Gold Express

After a season with inconsistent play from the kicking position, Green Bay went the route of bringing in competition in the offseason to secure the kicker position. That came in the form of signing Greg Joseph to compete with Anders Carlson throughout training camp.

That seemed to be the biggest story of the offseason, as the Packers were supposed to be on the precipice of winning the Super Bowl. Bringing in competition seemed like the right move at the time. It turned out that Green Bay did not go either way and signed out of house, bringing in Brayden Narveson, who was with the Tennessee Titans through the offseason.

When the Packers brought in Narveson, it seemed like the right move, given that Carlson probably needed to go, just given the circumstances around his inconsistent play from the season before. In his time in Green Bay, Narveson wasn't necessarily relied on, as Green Bay's early season schedule was pretty easy. Good thing that Narveson did not need to be relied upon, as his time in Green Bay was just as tumultuous as Carlson's. Narveson converted 12 of 18 field goals. On top of that, out of his 38 kickoffs, he was able to kick just 18 for touchbacks. Seeing the inconsistency in the kicking game, Packers general manager Brian Gutekunst elected to sign Brandon McManus.

The signing came as a little bit of a surprise given McManus' history of alleged sexual assault. After the NFL declared that there was insignificant evidence to support the sexual assault claims, McManus was listed as free agent. After signing with the Packers, the case was marked as resolved with no other information provided.

McManus instantly made an impact as he converted two game-winning field goals to push Green Bay close to the top of the NFC. On the season, McManus converted 20-of-21 field goals, with a long of 55 yards. He also went perfect on extra points hitting 30 of 30 attempts.

Even though the kicking game looked a lot stronger this past season, there were still some issues when it came to when snaps, as well as McManus' distances. While 55 yards being a season long is great, there seemed to be some hesitation from Matt LaFleur on kicking long field goals.

The major question surrounding McManus now is if he comes back next season. It seems likely that he is a priority for Gutekunst given the stability he provided this season.

"I had a good conversation with him before he left and obviously you guys saw how he solidified that journey that we were going on," said Gutekunst, on the possibility of re-signing McManus. "I think the thing that was so neat about being around him is not only his confidence, but his ability to adjust, no matter where we were or what weather we had. If we were able to get Brandon back, I think certainly that would make me feel very good about that group."

If it does not work out where the Packers have to look a different way for kicker next season, it seems likely that Gutekunst goes the route of signing another veteran given the success from what happened last season. With what Gutekunst said though, it is probably inevitable that McManus kicks for the Packers again next season.

had the Packers playing with house money. Beating the Dallas Cowboys and taking the top-seeded San Francisco 49ers to the brink of elimination changed the calculus.

The Packers were thinking Super Bowl just one year into a rebuild.

At times, the team looked like they were hitting their stride, but the story of the season can be told by three opponents – the Detroit Lions, Minnesota Vikings and Philadelphia Eagles.

The Packers played each team twice and lost all six games to those two teams.

Ultimately, a team is going to need to beat good teams to get into the Super Bowl.

A troubling trend is growing in opposition of Matt LaFleur.

The ability to get his team to play their best football against the best teams has not been a trait they've possessed.

In 2019, they fell behind against a vastly superior San Francisco 49ers team and were blown out.

Despite the overall excellence of Matt LaFleur and Brian Gutekunst in the regular season, it has not translated to postseason success. LaFleur has coached in two conference championship games and earned the number one seed in the NFC playoffs twice but flamed out at home on both occasions. Overall, LaFleur's playoff record is 3-5, including this year's 22-10 loss to the Philadelphia Eagles in the Wild Card round.

GREG MELLIS | GREEN & GOLD EXPRESS

They fell behind 28-10 to the Tampa Bay Buccaneers with a series of uncharacteristic mistakes and questionable coaching decisions.

The 2021 team did the same against the 49ers before a blocked punt ultimately sunk their season.

The Packers were not better than this year's Eagles team that eliminated them in the postseason, but they were expected to be.

Instead, the final month of the season sealed the team's fate.

Green Bay was trending downward as the season came to a close. That culminated with a loss to the Chicago Bears where LaFleur insisted the team was attempting to gain some momentum going into the postseason, only to make decisions that flew in the face of that mission.

Josh Jacobs hardly played. Kenny Clark was in and out of the lineup. Jordan Love started and injured his elbow.

It was a bizarre series of events. Ultimately, Chicago won on a walk-off field goal by Cairo Santos.

Once the season ended, Tucker Kraft essentially said that the team got what was coming to them, that they could feel their struggles brewing.

The question is why? Why did a young team plateau and ultimately decline as the season went on? Why was LaFleur as conservative as he was throughout the season?

Aggression has been rewarded in this postseason. Andy Reid and Nick Sirianni are two of the more aggressive coaches in football, especially on fourth down. They'll face off on Super Bowl on Sunday.

LaFleur was one of the most conservative in football this season.

Perhaps that controversial decision to kick a field goal trailing by eight against Tampa Bay in the 2020 NFC Championship Game will be his lasting legacy.

A good coach but not aggressive enough to find his way over the hump.

The 2025 season is a big year for LaFleur and the Packers.

In a city named Titletown, there are no more years without expectations. The Packers are expected to win.

Brian Gutekunst said himself it was time they started competing for championships.

That starts with the man in charge, LaFleur.

Who will stay, and who will go?

Packers GM expected to go shopping in free agent market

By JACOB WESTENDORF
Green & Gold Express

The Super Bowl is upon us, and the Green Bay Packers are not playing in it.

The Packers were eliminated shortly after the playoffs began with a 22-10 loss at the hands of the NFC champion Philadelphia Eagles.

Once the season was over, all eyes turned to the offseason.

The Packers did some of their best work last off-season. General Manager Brian Gutekunst's three best moves came before the regular season began.

Xavier McKinney and Josh Jacobs were brought in to solidify the back-fields on both sides of the ball.

Both players fit seamlessly into their roles and were stars on offense and defense.

The other big move was a small trade for a backup quarterback. Malik Willis was one of the best moves of the season in general, winning three of the four games he had to play extended minutes in.

That doesn't include a draft class that included Edgerrin Cooper and Evan Williams.

With the offseason upon us, the question now is who is staying and who is going?

The Packers had some tough draft classes in 2020 and 2021. The only player who is a slam dunk to be on the roster in 2025 from the 2020 draft class is Jordan Love.

The 2021 class is the group slated to be free agents now.

The biggest free agent, however, is someone who was not in this draft class.

Kicker Brandon McManus was another small move made by Gutekunst during the season, and he paid off in a big way.

Replacing Mason Crosby proved to be no easy task. Anders Carlson was given the leash of an entire 2023 season before being let go at the end of training camp.

Greg Joseph was the presumptive winner of the offseason kicking competition, but that lasted all of one day.

Brayden Narveson was brought in and released before Halloween.

McManus was Gutekunst's fourth crack at attempting to replace the franchise's all-time leading scorer.

As it turns out, the fourth time was, in fact, the charm.

McManus missed one kick during the regular season for Green Bay and solidified the position.

He ended with a whimper, missing a 38-yard field goal in Philadelphia, but with the issues Green Bay has had at that position, they should be more than eager to give McManus a deal to stay in Green Bay.

"We would," Gutekunst said in his end-of-year availability when asked if the Packers want McManus back next year. "Had a good conversation with him before he left. Obviously, how he solidified that journey (at kicker) we were going on. He's a veteran guy."

The thing that was so neat about being around him was not only his confidence but his ability to adjust, no matter where we were, what weather we had."

Apart from McManus, there are not a lot of free agents that represent priorities to be brought back to Green Bay.

Eric Stokes was the team's first-round pick in 2021, but his career in Green Bay appears to be over. He played six snaps in the final two games of the year, despite being healthy.

Stokes never found his footing after a gruesome leg injury suffered in his sophomore campaign.

He was passed on the depth chart by Keisean Nixon and Carrington Valentine.

A.J. Dillon is a popular figure in Wisconsin but unlikely to be brought back to Green Bay after a neck injury ended his season.

The only free agents other than McManus that could be a priority is defensive tackle T.J. Slaton and center Josh Myers.

Myers was referred to as a heart and soul player by coach Matt LaFleur during the season. Gutekunst said he felt Myers had his best year.

He's had more downs than ups during his career, but perhaps the Packers will opt for stability at their pivot position.

Slaton had his best year as a Packer and was the anchor of the team's run defense. How much is that worth in free agency? That remains to be seen, but the Packers could certainly look to keep him in the fold. They don't really have a two-down run defender on their defensive line, which is where Slaton excels.

Overall, the lack of options in house make it likely that Gutekunst will once again go shopping in free agency this offseason.

For the second time in three years, the Philadelphia Eagles and Kansas City Chiefs will meet in the Super Bowl.

The Chiefs are playing in hopes of capturing their consecutive NFL title. The Eagles are looking for a bit of revenge from two years ago.

What will it take for either team to lift the Lombardi Trophy after the game?

Chiefs' offense vs. Eagles' defense

The Eagles' defense helped lead them to the Super Bowl during the 2022 season. Their pass rush was vicious, as they set the team record for sacks that year.

The current team is not as good as they were two years ago, but Philadelphia's pass rush is still a weapon for them with Vic Fangio at the controls.

Josh Sweat is their leading man with eight sacks on the year. Nolan Smith has had a sack in each of the first three playoff games, including two against Green Bay in the Wild Card round.

The interior of Philadelphia's pass rush is where the money is made. Milton Williams has had a breakout season, and Jalen Carter might be the best defensive tackle in all of football.

In the secondary, general manager Howie Roseman was active in addressing a weakness and turning it into a legitimate strength.

Quinyon Mitchell was a first-round pick and has emerged as the team's best cornerback.

Across from him is Darius Slay, who has been excellent in a complementary role this season.

Cooper DeJean has been excellent as a nickelback and had a big pass breakup early in the team's NFC championship win over the Commanders.

Perhaps the biggest change the Eagles made on defense was at defensive coordinator.

The Eagles replaced him with Sean Desai, who was eventually replaced by Matt Patricia during the season.

Neither of those options worked well, and the Eagles hired former Packers' nemesis, Vic Fangio.

Fangio facing off against Patrick Mahomes and Andy Reid is one of the better matchups in the Super Bowl.

On the other side of the field, it's familiar territory at this point.

Mahomes and the Kansas City Chiefs are back in the Super Bowl for the fifth time in six years.

This time around, they're playing for history. No team in the Super Bowl era has won three consecutive Super Bowls.

Others have come close, but none have accomplished it.

Mahomes is also playing for legacy purposes. A win in this Super Bowl would be his fourth championship, tying him with Terry Bradshaw and Joe Montana for second among quarterbacks behind only Tom Brady.

This Chiefs' offense is solid, if unspectacular.

It's not like the days where Tyreek Hill ran deep through the secondary or Travis Kelce made one big play after another.

They're methodical, and they execute. In fact, they're similar to the New England Patriots of old in that they are chasing individual and team legacies.

Kelce is still around and is the team's leading receiver.

Xavier Worthy and Marquise "Hollywood" Brown are their two best receivers and give juice to the passing game for plays down the field.

JuJu Smith-Schuster is a potential red zone target, while their ground game is

Patrick Mahomes is also playing for legacy purposes. A win in this Super Bowl would be his fourth championship, tying him with Terry Bradshaw and Joe Montana for second among quarterbacks behind only Tom Brady. GREG MELLIS | GREEN & GOLD EXPRESS led by Isaiah Pacheco and old friend Kareem Hunt.

Ultimately, the Chiefs' offense remains dangerous because of the two men that are at the controls. Reid and Mahomes.

Chiefs' defense vs. Eagles' offense

Philadelphia's offense is led by Jalen Hurts. Hurts had a down year last year after a near MVP season in 2022. He's had a better season in the 2024 regular season and had not played after the first quarter of a late December game against Washington thanks to a concussion.

Jalen Hurts and the Philadelphia Eagles beat the Packers twice this year on their way to the Super Bowl. GREG MELLIS | GREEN & GOLD EXPRESS

After some subpar play in the first two games of the postseason, Hurts lit up the Washington Commanders for four touchdowns in a 55-23 romp over their division rival.

AJ Brown and Devonta Smith combine for one of the best receiver combinations in all of football. Dallas Goedert has had a big postseason and was the leading receiver in the NFC Championship Game.

The big addition to the Eagles' offense this off-season was running back Saquon Barkley.

Barkley's talent alone was tantalizing in this offense, but he has run all over any opposing defense that has been in his way this year.

asked to play in an emergency situation. That situation arose when Landon Dickerson exited the game with a knee injury.

With the layoff, both players should be able to play.

Special teams

Philadelphia's special teams has enjoyed a big postseason. They forced a fumble in two of their three playoff games and recovered both of them. Both fumble recoveries led to touchdowns in the Wild Card and Conference Championship rounds.

Will Shipley is likely to be the kickoff returner if Kenneth Gainwell is unable to play due to an injury suffered in the NFC Championship Game.

The big question mark for the Eagles is at kicker. Jake Elliott had been rock solid for the duration of his career, until this season.

He struggled during the regular season and missed the first postseason field goal of his career in the conference championship game.

He's 1-for-8 on the year in kicks that are longer than 50 yards.

In a game where points are going to be at a premium, the Eagles cannot afford to give points away in the kicking game.

Their punt return team will need to be shaken up as well, after getting hit up for a fake punt in their previous game.

Overall, the Eagles' special teams is solid if unspectacular. The goal here will just to be sure that the kicker makes his kicks.

The Chiefs' special teams had a big night against the Buffalo Bills in the conference championship round.

Nikko Remigio had a nice night that included a 41-yard punt return.

Harrison Butker has not been as good this year as he's been in recent years but has been nails in the postseason.

In a game of this magnitude, the kicking game can be a deciding factor.

Something else that plays into special teams is how aggressive both teams are on fourth down.

The Eagles and Chiefs both were in the top four of conversions on fourth downs during the season.

A failed fourth-down conversion is similar to a turnover in these big games. Whatever team is better in situational football could be the one that is raising the Lombardi Trophy at the end of the night.
