Thanksgiving celebrations

Volunteer Rory Johnson, left, needed two hands and a little dexterity to get Thanksgiving dinners filled at the First Presbyterian Church on Thursday. Dinners with turkey and trimmings were delivered to 75 Shawano residents at noon on Thursday. Judy Wetzel, who helped coordinate the dinners, said the meals are a project of the church's mission commission. Turkey roasts are purchased with a grant from Thrivent Financial and church members contribute the "sides." In all, she said 40-50 church members work on the project, with 17 cooking and delivering the meals.

About 133 participants in the annual Total Fitness Turkey Trot took to the streets of Shawano on Thursday. A group of participants is shown here through the decorated trees at Franklin Park. The event attracted trotters, runners and a few passengers in baby buggies. Non-competitive participants followed a course through the west side of Shawano and returned to Total Fitness for celebratory pumpkin pie.
