Although Aaron Rodgers is no longer in town, it appears that the Green Bay Packers still own the Chicago Bears.

Quarterback Jordan Love kicked off the new era of Packers' football, leading the team to a dominant 38-20 victory on Sept. 10 in Chicago. The fourth-year quarterback looked to be ready to follow in both Rodgers and Brett Favre's footsteps, as he threw for 245 yards and three touchdowns, with no interceptions.

With Christian Watson injured, wide receiver Romeo Doubs was the main benefactor of Love's impressive start, catching four passes for 26 yards and two touchdowns. More impressive than the two touchdown passes to Doubs though was Love's third.

The touchdown pass came in the middle of the third quarter, when Green Bay was facing a fourth-and-three up 17-6 and looking for a three score lead. Love dropped back and hit running back Aaron Jones out of the backfield for a 35-yard touchdown. Jones left the game after the touchdown with an apparent leg injury.

"It feels great," said Love, on the victory. "Obviously that was the plan for us, coming in here and starting the season off in the right way. I think we did that in all three phases. The second half was huge for us today."

That second half that Love referred to included 28 points on four touchdowns.

"It just feels good to get a win — never took it for granted, so to start off like that feels great," added Love.

Much like Doubs, Jones was very busy on the day. The El Paso alum saw 11 touches for 127 total yards and two touchdowns.

As for the other side of the ball, Green Bay's defense held the Bears to just 20 points. With four sacks on Bears quarterback Justin Fields, the Packers' defense seemed to live up to the hype from the summer and in general looked like one of the better defensive units in the NFL during week one. Defensive backs Rasul Douglas and Keisean Nixon led the team with six tackles, but it was the rookies who made their names heard. First-round draft selection Lukas Van Ness and sixth-round selection Karl Brooks both recorded sacks, while second-year defensive tackle Devonte Wyatt added another 1 1/2.

Head coach Matt LaFleur is now 9-0 all time against the Chicago

Bears. More than that, Green Bay has won 26 out of the last 30 matchups against the Bears. The record of the rivalry now sits at 106-95-6 all time.

"Yesterday I was definitely visualizing just having a win — coming off of the field after the win, kind of telling myself I am going to play great, that we are all going to play great," said Love. "That is just what I kept telling myself over and over again. I woke up today doing the same thing, just telling myself we are going to get this win and that we are going to play great today."

PACKERS OFFENSE VS. FALCONS DEFENSE

Jordan Love is receiving rave reviews after a sparkling debut saw him throw for three touchdown passes and finish with a quarterback rating of 123.2 against the Chicago Bears.

The Bears may have tried to remake their defense in the offseason, but that was clearly a team still in transition as they try to work out some of the kinks of adding as many new players as they have.

The Atlanta Falcons could be a different story.

Calais Campbell might be on the wrong side of 30, but he remains a productive player along the Falcons defensive line. He spurned the New York Jets to sign with the Falcons this offseason.

Along with Campbell up front, the Falcons have Grady Jarrett who had six sacks a season ago.

He added half a sack in Sunday's 24-10 win over the Carolina Panthers.

The Falcons strength at this point is in their secondary. Their prized offseason acquisition was Jessie Bates, who they signed to a four-year $64 million deal on the first day of free agency.

Bates was worth the investment on opening day. He had two interceptions of Bryce Young, the most recent number one overall pick and flew all over the field in run support.

AJ Terrell is an excellent cornerback that could give the Packers problems considering they are a little short in the passing game. It's unclear if Christian Watson will be able to return from a hamstring injury to play, and Romeo Doubs was limited against Chicago with a hamstring injury of his own.

In addition, Aaron Jones suffered a hamstring injury that kept him out for most of the second half. The hamstring was the only thing that stopped Jones from having a huge day against the Bears. He had two catches for 86 yards and a touchdown. He ran for another 41 despite only having nine carries.

If Jones is out, the Packers may lean more on AJ Dillon, who struggled in the season opener, totaling 19 yards on 13 carries. The Packers will need more than that from Dillon if Jones is unable to go.

Luke Musgrave causes a matchup problem every week simply due to the combination of his size and speed, but this week could be particularly advantageous for the former second-round pick.

Carolina's Hayden Hurst was the team's leading receiver against Atlanta with five catches for 41 yards. Musgrave had 50 yards receiving in his debut and could have had a long touchdown if not for a cramp on what turned into a 37-yard reception. His matchup against Atlanta linebackers Kaden Elliss and Troy Anderson could be one to watch.

PACKERS DEFENSE VS. FALCONS OFFENSE

For all the focus on the Packers quarterback situation, it was the defense that shined the most in their season opening win over the Bears.

Joe Barry has been under fire coming into the season after a talented defense has disappointed in the two years under his watch.

One of the big pain points for the Packers defense was against the run. Sunday was a big test against Justin Fields and a Bears run game that was dynamic a season ago.

Fields was able to scamper for 59 yards on nine carries, but none of them went longer than 10 yards. Considering the opponent, that's about as good as a team can hope for.

In the traditional run game, Bears running backs ran for 63 yards on 19 carries. That is an average of 3.3 yards-per-carry.

That's a far cry from the nearly five yards the Packers gave up per rush a season ago. That's the first test the Packers have passed.

However, a bigger test is on its way. If Khalil Herbert is the equivalent of algebra, Bijan Robinson is advanced calculus.

Robinson was picked 8th overall in this past year's draft due to his ability in both phases of the offense. He averaged 5.6 yards-per-carry with 56 yards coming on 10 carries. He added another 27 yards on six catches, including a touchdown.

Robinson isn't the only player to worry about in Atlanta's backfield.

Tyler Allgeier tormented the Panthers with 75 yards on 15 carries and two touchdowns.

Overall, the Falcons ran for 131 yards on 25 carries. Both of their running backs averaged more than five yards per carry. This week will be a bigger test for a Packers defense that has vowed to be better against the run in 2023.

The passing game is a different story. Desmond Ridder is the starting quarterback in Atlanta.

This is his first year as a full time starter after he was picked in the third round from Cincinnati in 2022.

He was 15-18 for 115 yards and a touchdown. The completion percentage was high, but 115 yards is almost unfathomable in the modern era of football.

Ridder has plenty of weapons at his disposal. Kyle Pitts and Drake London were both top-10 picks in their respective draft classes. They have ability to make contested catches and plays down the field.

Jaire Alexander accepted his first challenge of the season. Alexander and the Packers secondary held the Bears prized acquisition, DJ Moore, to two catches on three targets. It was a quiet day.

London is a different style receiver, but after being held without a catch in his debut, the Falcons might try to feature him more in the passing game.

Pitts is typically lined up as a receiver as well. The Falcons will try to get him matched up against the Packers linebackers who are coming off a strong debut that included a pick-six from Quay Walker.

Where the Packers' biggest advantage might lie is in the pass rush. Atlanta's offensive line struggled in the season opener, where Ridder was sacked four times.

The Packers sacked Justin Fields four times on Sunday and recorded a whopping 35 pressures, according to Pro Football Focus, which was the second most in the NFL behind the Dallas Cowboys.

The Packers were able to accomplish that without Rashan Gary playing a full complement of snaps.

Gary is one week further removed from the ACL injury that cost him half of the 2022 season. He should see more action this Sunday.

Look for the Packers to try and get Kenny Clark and Devonte Wyatt matched up against Matthew Bergeron, a rookie who will be making a second year start. Both Wyatt and Clark had strong debuts, recording two combined sacks and a forced fumble.

SPECIAL TEAMS

Anders Carlson had a strong debut after a rocky camp led some to wonder whether the Packers would bring in any competition for the rookie.

They did not and their faith was rewarded. Carlson was 6-6 on all of his kicks including a 52-yard field goal before time expired in the first half.

The field goal operation was clean as they were breaking in a new snapper and holder in addition to Carlson.

Daniel Whelan showed off his big leg with a 68-yard punt on Sunday. Keisean Nixon and Jayden Reed both present problems in the return game that could be a challenge for the Falcons.

The Falcons finished 10th a season ago in Rick Gosselin's annual special teams rankings under Marquice O'Brien Williams.

They didn't have any opportunities to return a kickoff on Sunday, and only fielded two punts, which were returned for four total yards.

One thing that could be interesting, should the game be close, late is Younghoe Koo. The Falcons kicker excels at the onside kick in an era where that is mostly obsolete. The Packers were 1-1 in recovering onside kicks on Sunday, but that could be something set to be exploited with as many young players that are on the Packers' roster.

The Packers defense, including T.J. Slaton (93) rose to the occasion against the Bears on opening day. The defense hurried Bears quarterback Justin Fields all day and kept running back and receivers quiet for much of the time.

KEYS TO THE GAME

Consistency needed for Packers to go 2-0

By JACOB WESTENDORF

Green & Gold Express

The Green Bay Packers are off and running after a dominant 38-20 win over the Chicago Bears in the season opener.

The Packers had what could be argued as their best game in all three phases over the last two years during the game. Jordan Love was solid in his debut, throwing three touchdown passes. Aaron Jones made two huge plays in the passing game.

The defense suffocated Justin Fields and a new-look Bears offense, and the special teams was solid.

Matt LaFleur often says that you're only as good as your most recent game. If that's the case, the Packers are pretty good right now. He also says things can change quickly in the NFL. That's true, too.

After a thumping of Chicago, the Packers are moving on to play Atlanta, who was victorious 24-10 over the Carolina Panthers in their first game.

This game will be the team's first true road test of the season with Chicago being relatively local.

Here are the keys to the Packers stacking road wins to start their season.

PACKERS DEFENSE VS FALCONS RUN GAME

The Packers defense was excellent against the Bears run game. Justin Fields was not able to find many running lanes. His running backs had even less room to work with. They had 63 yards on 19 carries. The Packers have vowed to be better against opposing run games this season, and Sunday was a good start.

This Sunday will be a different challenge. With all due respect to Khalil Herbert and Roschon Johnson, the Falcons duo of Bijan Robinson and Tyler Allgeier is a much different challenge.

They combined for 131 yards on 25 carries. In a sport where running backs have been devalued, the Falcons thought enough of Robinson to take him with the eighth overall pick in this past year's draft. He is a menace in the run game. He's more dynamic than anyone the Packers have seen so far this season.

Chris Lindstrom is currently the highest paid interior offensive lineman in the NFL as well. The other two starters on the Falcons interior are Drew Dalman and Matthew Bergeron. They used a second round pick on Bergeron. Combine the investment in the interior offensive line with Arthur Smith as the head coach, the Falcons are committed to running the football.

The Packers need to remain committed to stopping it.

PACKERS PASS RUSH VS FALCONS OFFENSIVE LINE

For all the fanfare surrounding Love's excellent debut, it's Joe Barry's defense that deserves a gold star after Sunday's performance.

It took awhile for them to heat up, but once the pass rush got going, they were nearly unblockable. The Packers had 35 pressures against a Chicago offensive line that was remade this offseason with the idea of protecting Justin Fields in mind.

Rashan Gary should play more snaps this week as he is further removed from his ACL injury, which could make the pass rush even more lethal.

The Falcons had struggles of their own. Desmond Ridder was sacked four times on only 23 dropbacks.

If the Packers can slow down Atlanta's running game, Ridder hasn't proven to have the ability to beat opposing defenses with his arm consistently. He had a high completion percentage in Sunday's win over the Panthers, but little else.

His struggles could become more exaggerated if the Green Bay front is able to hunt.

FALCONS DEFENSE VS

JORDAN LOVE/THIRD DOWNS

The most impressive part of Love's debut was his ability on third down. He finished the day 8-10 with 141 yards and two touchdown passes. That included a 35-yard touchdown pass to Jones on a 4th and 3 that broke the game open late in the third quarter.

The Falcons gave up five third down conversions in 14 attempts. Green Bay's offense, despite their youth, is a bigger challenge for the Falcons defense considering they're facing a more experienced quarterback.

The Packers were horrendous on early downs on Sunday against Chicago. They averaged -.17EP/play on first and second down.

It was their third down offense that saved them. The Packers probably don't want to make a living on converting third downs, but it is something they'll feel good about knowing they've already had success on that down.

PACKERS RECEIVERS VS

FALCONS SECONDARY

Jessie Bates might have been the best player on the field for the Falcons on Sunday. He picked off Bryce Young twice in his first game after getting a $64 million contract in the offseason to help spearhead the Falcons secondary.

In addition, AJ Terrell has been a good player for the Falcons since being drafted out of Clemson.

Jeff Okudah is a former top draft pick that has struggled, but is currently starting for Atlanta.

The Packers receivers are the incredibly young, and walking wounded. Christian Watson missed Sunday's game with a hamstring injury. Whether he will be able to play Sunday is unclear. Soft tissue injuries can be tricky.

Romeo Doubs did play but was limited. He had a stat line that looked similar to that of James Jones in 2015. Four catches 26 yards and two touchdowns. Perhaps a full complement of snaps will get him more opportunities in the passing game.

Jayden Reed had a nice debut with two big catches but looked like a rookie at times. He left the game with cramps but should be good to go on Sunday.

Green Bay's receiver room has things to like about it, but youth and inexperience can lead to mistakes.

The Packers saw plenty of those on Sunday.

They made enough plays against a defense that was the worst in the NFL a season ago.

The Falcons are much more talented, and have players that have played together for longer than what Chicago had.

The Packers are going to need to be more consistent in the passing game against a better defense if are to come out of Atlanta 2-0.

In his debut as the first string quarterback for the Packers, Jordan Love three for three touchdowns and no interceptions in beating the rival Chicago Bears.

Packers have full belief in Love

Love takes in what being a starting NFL quarterback is all about

By LUKE REIMER
Green & Gold Express

The new era of football has started in Green Bay and for quarterback Jordan Love, head coach Matt LaFleur and the rest of the team, it could not have started any better.

While beating your division rival to open the season with a win is great, the lasting impact that this win will have the season could be greater. Now Love played well in the season's opener, but more importantly, it seems that not only the coaches, but the team as a whole and the fan base believes in Love and are rallying around him.

That should help the 24-year old more than anything. Being drafted in the first round of the 2020 NFL draft to replace Aaron Rodgers, Love had to wait for three years before getting his first real snaps as the starting quarterback for the Green Bay Packers. While in that time sitting, Love watched Rodgers win two MVP awards and bring Green Bay to the NFC Championship twice.

Green Bay Packers quarterback Jordan Love hugs Bears QB and friend Justin Fields after Green Bay's 38-20 win.

GREG MELLIS | GREEN & GOLD EXPRESS

Over the team's history, Green Bay has become the mecca for starting quarterbacks. Love looks to be the next on that list.

All of those reasons and more would seem to put more pressure than needed on any quarterback, especially one who only had one career start before week one. The good thing for Love though is that he has the perfect team around him to help relieve those pressures.

"I couldn't be more proud of (Love's) performance, of his poise," said LaFleur. "There is a big time belief in that locker room for Jordan Love and I think guys are going to rally around him. They are excited for him, they love him, they respect him. He comes to work every day, has a great attitude, has great energy and I think you saw that (against Chicago)."

As anyone who has ever played a sport knows, it is a lot easier to succeed at your job, when you have the support of your team and your fans. With the drama surrounding Rodgers out of Green Bay, it appears that Love has the full support of almost everyone who has ties to the Green Bay Packers.

As much fun as his teammates and his fans are having at watching him lead the team, Love is having just as much fun leading them.

"Just being in that locker room with those guys is awesome," said Love. "I was actually given a game ball today and those guys were going crazy in there. It is an awesome feeling for me. We have a great team. It feels great having everyone behind you."

With that being said, Love is just doing his part in helping Green Bay win, while also enjoying every part of being a starting quarterback in the NFL.

"Just having that moment when the crowd is going crazy just for the national anthem is a surreal moment, and I was just able to take it all in," said Love. "I was telling everybody before to just enjoy this. We worked our whole life for this opportunity to be here in the NFL on this stage. It was awesome to just take it all in."
