

At left, Jordan Love signals the completion of his second of three touchdown passes against the Dallas Cowboys during Wild Card Weekend. He completed 16 of 21 passes for 272 yards. He was not intercepted, did not fumble and was not sacked in the 48-32 win that sends the Packers to San Francisco for the Divisional Round game. Above, Before Sunday's playoff game in Dallas, Green Bay Packers running back Aaron Jones got to talk to one of his football idols, legendary Cowboys running back Emmitt Smith. Jones proceeded to have one of those vintage Smith games. Jones carried 21 times for 118 yards and three touchdowns. If Aaron Rodgers owned Chicago, Jones owns Dallas. In four career games against the Cowboys, he's rushed for 488 yards and nine touchdowns.

Green Bay stuns Dallas to move on in playoffs

Packers tie franchise records for points in a playoff game

By LUKE REIMER

Jordan Love and Aaron Jones combined for six touchdowns, as the Green Bay Packers tied a franchise record for points in a postseason game with its 48-32 victory over the Dallas Cowboys in Dallas on Jan. 14.

"It feels fine, to be in that locker room, it is a great environment to be in," said Love, after the victory. "I can't say enough about how proud I am of everyone in the locker room. It has been a long season. We have been counted out a lot of the season – just the way everybody keeps battling, keeps competing, keeps getting better and putting on great performances like tonight. It is a great feeling."

Love certainly looked the part of a franchise quarterback in his first playoff start, as the fourth-year pro completed 16-of-21 passes for 272 yards and three touchdowns. In total, Love finished with a 157.2 passer rating.

As has been the case for most of his career, Jones continued to gash the Cowboys defense on the ground. Jones finished the game recording 21 carries for 118 yards and three touchdowns. Those three rushing touchdowns tied Ryan Grant's mark for most rushing touchdowns in a playoff game in Green Bay history.

"I think that was the key for us coming into this game was to run the ball well.

and I think we did that," said Love. "Getting started, the O-Line, like I said, played great and Aaron Jones had an awesome night. I think the run game – the way we were running the ball – opened up everything else, and I think it was able to keep the pass rush down a little bit. It was a great game by the O-Line and the running backs."

As for the receiving game, Romeo Doubs was the main benefactor of Love's big day, as the Nevada alum recorded 151 yards and one touchdown on six receptions. In another historic performance for Green Bay, this was Doubs' first career 100-yard game.

Rookies Luke Musgrave and Dontayvion Wicks rounded out Love's three touchdown passes.

"We are playing all together as one," said Jones, on his success against Dallas and the past few weeks. "The blocking unit – they are doing their thing up front making it easy for me to pick and choose what hole I want to run through."

Aside from 16 points from the Cowboys in garbage time, the Green Bay Packers defense once again was at the top of its game. The vaunted Dallas offense was held to just seven points in the first half, as there seemed to be a major disconnect between quarterback Dak Prescott and star wide receiver CeeDee Lamb.

Lamb, who led the NFL receptions, was held to just 18 yards on two receptions. The Oklahoma alum was able to get back to that All-Pro form in the second half though, as he finished the game with 110 yards on nine receptions.

As for Prescott, he totaled 403 yards on 41-of-60 passes, adding three touchdowns. Unfortunately for the Cowboys though, two of Prescott's passes were intercepted.

Up 7-0 late in the first quarter, Prescott dropped back and threw a pass intended for Brandin Cooks. Packers defensive back Jaire Alexander, who was battling an ankle injury late in the week, made an incredible play on the ball and came up with a diving interception. Three plays later, Jones scored his second touchdown of the day.

The Packers' second interception of the day came late in the second quarter, as during Dallas' march, Prescott threw a pass intended for Lamb. Packers defensive back Darnell Savage made a great break on the ball, jumped in front of Lamb and intercepted the pass. With an open field in front of him, Savage returned the interception all the way back for a touchdown.

"I was just watching the play develop and he obviously jumped the route, so I don't know if he knew what was coming," said head coach Matt LaFleur, on the interception. "It was obviously a critical play in this game. That just kind of allowed us to pile it on at that point."

Dallas' only first half touchdown came late in the half, as Prescott connected with tight end and former Wisconsin Badger Jake Ferguson for the first of his three touchdown receptions.

The Cowboys opened the second half with a field goal, but as was the story for the entire game, anytime Dallas showed any momentum, Green Bay immediately responded. In this case, after Dallas made its field goal, Green Bay faced a first-and-10 from its own 37-yard line. Love dropped back to pass and connected with Doubs, who after a catch and run, picked up 46 yards. Two plays later, Jones capped off his trifecta of touchdowns with a 9-yard rush.

The Cowboys responded with an 11-play drive that ended in a 1-yard touchdown rush from running back Tony Pollard. More than just giving up the touchdown, Green Bay lost Alexander for the game as early in the drive, he went down with what appeared to be an injury to his already injured ankle. On Green Bay's next drive, Jones continued to dismantle the Cowboys' defense, picking up 37 yards on the first two plays. With the strong run game, Green Bay dialed up a play action pass that saw Musgrave wide open down the right side of the field. When he caught the pass, the closest defender to Musgrave was 16 yards away. With the lack of the defense near him, Musgrave had a straight shot to the end zone.

"Like I said, when you are able to run the ball, it opens everything else up," said Jones. "I think we were able to set them up pretty nice on Luke's (Musgrave) touchdown, you know, they have been seeing a lot of outside zone all game, and we hit them with that."

After turning Dallas over on downs, Green Bay's final touchdown and dagger in the game came as Love and company were faced with a fourth-and-two from the Cowboys' 3-yard line. Love took the snap, rolled to his right and threw a dart to Doubs, which after a made extra point, put the Packers up 48-16.

"Guys are out there making plays," said Love, on his receivers being open all game. "The one to Luke (Musgrave) was a great one dialed up by Matt (LaFleur) to get him wide open. The one to Wicks - just go back and look at his route - it was a great route all around, and then he was able to finish the play. I mean, guys are making plays, the O-Line is giving me time to get the ball off, so all around, a team effort."

With 10:23 left in the game, the game was not completely over, as Dallas ripped off 16 straight points and was in position to make the contest a one-score game with 2:06 remaining.

Prescott and company marched down to the Packers 29-yard line. From there, the drive stalled, as on third down Packers linebacker Preston Smith sacked Prescott to set up fourth down.

On the ensuing play, Prescott threw up a prayer, which landed incomplete, allowing the Packers to take back over and kneel the clock out.

The season ended sour again for the Dallas Cowboys, as it now marks 28 years since the Cowboys have made it past the Divisional Round in the NFC playoffs. In fact, since AT&T Stadium in Dallas was completed after the 2009 season, the Packers and Cowboys both have two playoff victories there.

As for Green Bay, it became the first seven seed in NFL history to win a playoff game. With the victory, Green Bay will now take a flight over to Santa Clara to take on the San Francisco 49ers.

The Packers have struggled in the Aaron Rodgers era playing at San Francisco, but with a new quarterback at the helm and a multitude of offensive weapons, can Green Bay exercise its demons on the West Coast?

Young Packers look like a force in NFC

Love has 21 touchdowns, one interception in last nine games

By LUKE REIMER
Green & Gold Express

After Green Bay's offense dismantled the Dallas Cowboys' number one ranked regular season defense, the young Packers team proved that it has to be taken seriously as a contender for the Super Bowl.

After defeating the Carolina Panthers on Christmas Eve, Green Bay's playoff chances sat at just 28%. Since then, the Packers have ripped off three consecutive victories and find themselves two games away from a Super Bowl appearance. It seemed unlikely that even if Green Bay snuck into the playoffs, it would not have a chance to beat the Dallas Cowboys in Dallas.

Jordan Love and company didn't heed that message though. Part of the reason why Green Bay has made what many would think as a miraculous run, lands on the efforts of Love and the offense.

Since Green Bay's Week 9 loss to the Pittsburgh Steelers, Love has been near perfect. Over the past nine games, Love has thrown for 21 touchdown passes, while throwing just one interception. With Love's success as of recent, those young weapons around him have been just as good. Players like Bo Melton, Tucker Kraft and Jayden Reed have gone from unknown to household names.

"I am just so proud and happy for (Love)," said head coach Matt LaFleur. "He is a dude, he is a real dude."

Even with Green Bay becoming the youngest offense in NFL history to appear in the playoffs, and subsequently the youngest offense to win a playoff game, it seems that the improved play of the team's veteran offensive leader has been the catalyst. Over the past four weeks, Aaron Jones has recorded four straight 100-plus rushing yard games. Jones' emergence has really opened the offense to expose the opposing team's passing defenses.

"We believe in each other. We have faith in each other, and we know that we have all of the weapons in that building and in the room," said Jones, on why he believes in this young Packers team. "However you want to put it, we have all of the weapons that we need on this team. People can continue to doubt us, but that is fine. We love the underdog mentality and love the underdog approach. What are people going to say next?"

With the rushing game getting going and, in turn, the passing game excelling, the Green Bay Packers' offensive line has to be credited. Over the last four weeks, Love has been sacked just twice. The culmination of the exceptional play from the offensive line, run game and Love has turned Green Bay's offense into one of, if not the best offense currently in the league.

Luke Musgrave (88) and Bo Melton (80) celebrate after Musgrave's touchdown against the Cowboys. Since Green Bay's Week 9 loss to the Pittsburgh Steelers, quarterback Jordan Love has been near perfect. Over the past nine games, Love has thrown for 21 touchdown passes, while throwing just one interception. With Love's success as of recent, those young weapons around him have been just as good. Players like Musgrave, Melton, Tucker Kraft and Jayden Reed have gone from unknown to household names.

What also seems to be helping Green Bay is the lack of expectations. As had been stated before, this was supposed to be a "see-what-we-have" season. Now it certainly seems like the Packers are playing with house money. It already accomplished what the season goal was. The rest of it is extra.

Similar to the Cincinnati Bengals team that went to the Super Bowl a few years back, it has become very apparent that this Packers team is playing fast and playing loose. All in all though, without a true "superstar" on this team, Green Bay is really playing together as a complete team.

"It is all 11 across the board that have to be on the same page, and I think you see that happening now - we are all on the same page," said Jones. "We knew it would take time throughout the season ... and we have been able to get over that hump."

Playing as a complete team is what fueled Green Bay's victory over the Dallas Cowboys, as five different players scored touchdowns.

While Dallas is a good team and the victory needs to be celebrated, the Packers will face a different kind of beast next week. With the exception of a few weeks, the San Francisco 49ers have looked like one of the two best teams in the NFL all season long. It is obvious, but this will be the Packers' biggest test all season long and it is of course the biggest game of Love's career.

With that being said, after seeing the Packers annihilate the Dallas Cowboys, there is no reason why Green Bay can't go to California and beat the San Francisco 49ers on Saturday.

Divisional Round will challenge Packers' offense against 49ers' defense

By JACOB WESTENDORF
Green & Gold Express

The Green Bay Packers are in the playoffs, and they're not just here to participate.

Less than a year after making seismic changes to their organization, and less than three months after falling to 2-5, the Packers are now 10-8 and in the postseason for the first time since 2021.

That was all well and good, but the season was going to be a relative footnote if the Packers laid an egg in Dallas.

They didn't. Jordan Love was flawless, throwing three touchdowns to three different receivers en route to what was a perfect passer rating before his final pass of the game.

Aaron Jones was dominant again, rolling for more than 100 yards on the ground.

Darnell Savage and Jaire Alexander had big plays on defense, and the Packers built a lead that got as high as 48-16.

Winning in Dallas has become the norm for this franchise. The Packers are 6-0 at AT&T Stadium, including Super Bowl XLV. They're 2-0 against the Cowboys in postseason play as well.

The San Francisco 49ers? That's a different story.

After dominating the 49ers for much of the 1990s, the clear turning point in this rivalry is Terrell Owens' catch in the 1999 Wild Card game where Jerry Rice appeared to get away with a fumble the Packers recovered.

Since that time, the Packers are 1-4 against the 49ers in the playoffs. They've been beaten by at least two scores every time they've had to play in San Francisco. If the Packers are going to reverse that trend, here are their keys to victory.

Luke Musgrave scored a touchdown in the third quarter to make the score 41-16 in favor of the Packers. Leading up the TD, Aaron Jones ran right for 10 yards. Then, Jones ran right for 27 yards. Then, Jordan Love faked the handoff to Jones and Musgrave, who motioned across the formation to the left, ran wide open through the Dallas secondary. Love's pass hung in the air forever. Musgrave caught the ball around the 13 and ran through a tackle attempt at the 2 for a 38-yard touchdown.

Packers' offensive line vs. 49ers pass rush
When you rank the 49ers roster, there aren't many, if any names, that come up before star pass rusher Nick Bosa. Bosa is one of the league's best at getting opposing quarterbacks to the ground.

Packers have their work cut out for them

By JACOB WESTENDORF
Green & Gold Express

Packers's offense vs. 49ers' defense

All eyes are going to be on Jordan Love as he looks for an encore performance of his sparkling playoff debut. Aaron Rodgers' playoff debut was a game for the ages, where the Packers lost 51- 45, but Rodgers was brilliant.

Love's offense scored more points and was able to get a win, something that eluded Rodgers in his first go-round of the postseason.

We're running out of superlatives for Love at this point. Since the calendar turned to December he's thrown 21 touchdowns to just one interception.

When the lights were the brightest on Sunday in Dallas, Love shined the brightest.

He was facing an MVP candidate and an offense that railroaded everyone en route to the NFC's second seed.

In addition, Dallas boasted a top-10 defense on the season.

None of that mattered. Love eviscerated Dallas' defense. He threw three touchdown passes to three different receivers, using three different arm angles.

At this point, if we were ranking offenses going into the playoffs, Green Bay has an argument for the best offense remaining. That's how well they've played.

They've done that despite having receivers in and out of the lineup. Christian Watson returned Sunday but was limited to one catch. Romeo Doubs is coming off the best game of his career, going for 151 yards on six catches, including the final nail in Dallas' coffin. Dontayvion Wicks and Jayden Reed may have been Green Bay's best receivers down the stretch of the season. They were held to two catches, and the Packers still threw up 48 points against Dallas' defense.

Luke Musgrave found the end zone,

Two completions to tight end Tucker Kraft moved Green Bay into goal-to-go in the first quarter against the Cowboys. On third-and-goal, Aaron Jones plowed through for a 3-yard touchdown to put the Packers ahead 7-0 with 7 minutes, 8 seconds left in the first quarter. Kraft's two catches totaled 15 yards.

GREG MELLIS | GREEN & GOLD EXPRESS

and Tucker Kraft was happy to join him. The Packers used a lot of 12 personnel to try and keep Dallas off balance, and they were able to do that.

Rasheed Walker has shaken off some early struggles and been really consistent since the calendar turned to November.

Walker was splitting time with Yosh Njiman at times during the season. That competition appears to be over, with Walker winning.

Whether he's the team's tackle of the future remains to be seen, but he's one of the biggest reasons for Green Bay's improvement.

Zach Tom won the right tackle position early in the year and has been rock solid all season long.

He's one of the team's best players. He bounced out of the lineup for a brief minute against Chicago but was able to finish the game.

The run game has found its stride. Aaron Jones has run for more than 100 yards each of the last four weeks. Despite all of the factors working against Jones, he remains their best player.

San Francisco's defense is run by one of the best in the sport with Steve Wilks running the show.

Nick Bosa and Chase Young used to dream of terrorizing opposing offenses when they were at Ohio State, but were never able to do so. Now, they're reunited and chasing down opposing quarterbacks with a vengeance.

Javon Hargrave was a free agent addition from Philadelphia and gives them some punch on the interior as well.

Behind their front, the 49ers have one of the best linebackers in football. When Aaron Rodgers was in Green Bay he used to rave about Fred Warner's ability as a linebacker.

Warner has not slowed down and is one of the leaders of a 49ers' defense that is near the top of the league once again.

Packer' defense vs. 49ers' offense

Green Bay's final numbers on defense are not going to be indicative of how good they were in Sunday's 48-32 win over the Dallas Cowboys.

Yes, 32 points sounds like a lot. Dak Prescott even piled up more than 400 yards through the air.

That being said, Green Bay's defense had the Dallas offense in a vice grip for most of the game while it was still hanging in the balance.

Darnell Savage had a splash play, returning an interception for a touchdown to give them a 27-0 lead in the first half, that ended the game for all intents and purposes.

Jaire Alexander returned to the lineup after being questionable for most of the week and had an interception of his own.

All-world receiver CeeDee Lamb was limited to nine catches for 110 yards, most of which came after the Packers built a 48-16 lead.

They'll need to be better on Sunday, but that was a good performance against an offense that performed well against just about everyone throughout the season.

Preston Smith, Lukas Van Ness, Keisean Nixon and De'Vondre Campbell all had a sack of Dak Prescott as well. The front four wasn't as good as they had been in previous weeks but was able to affect Prescott enough in the pocket to make him uncomfortable.

This week is a different story.

Everything, as it usually does, starts with the quarterback. Brock Purdy had arguably the best season of any player at his position.

He'll finish in the top-5 of MVP voting this year.

He's not the only MVP candidate in San Francisco. Christian McCaffery has been resurgent since being traded to San Francisco a season ago. McCaffery, of all their weapons, is the most dangerous one, and a touchdown machine. McCaffery finished the year with 14 touchdowns and may have had more if they had not limited his usage after clinching the NFC's top seed in the postseason.

The 49ers identity surrounds McCaffery, and the Packers will need to slow down San Francisco's ground game to have any chance.

Brandon Aiyuk, Deebo Samuel, and George Kittle are all capable of hurting the Packers through the passing game as well.

Green Bay's defensive line might be peaking at the right time, having held each of the last four teams they've faced to less than 100 yards rushing.

This line of scrimmage battle is one to keep an eye on.

Special teams

Green Bay's special teams is not as bad as it was in 2021 when they were one of the laughingstocks of the NFL.

Despite the investment both in their special teams' coordinator and roster spots used on specialists, the Packers have not improved nearly enough to meet the investment that they've made in their special teams.

They are the most penalized unit in football and seem to make at least one major miscue per week.

Anders Carlson missed an extra point on Sunday. He has missed at least one kick in every game of the Packers' current four game winning streak.

The Packers gave up a big kick return to Kavontae Turpin of 47 yards that set up Dallas' first touchdown of the game.

In addition, one of their attempted onside kick recoveries was more eventual than it likely should have been.

Rich Bisaccia is unlikely to be on the hot seat after receiving a promotion for 2023, but this unit should be under a microscope, and even further as the intensity of the games ramp up.

The San Francisco 49ers targeted Green Bay's special teams as a massive point of weakness in their upset victory at Lambeau Field two seasons ago. They are well coached on special teams but have taken a small step back since that game in 2022.

Jake Moody is not as good as Robbie Gould was, and Ray-Ray McCloud is no longer in San Francisco, either.

Despite that, San Francisco has a decided advantage in this phase of the game.
