Health officials provide updates on COVID-19

Oconto County sits at 5,111 total cases and 68 deaths

By LUKE REIMER
Reporter

Updates on the COVID-19 pandemic were provided by Oconto County employees on June 24 at the Oconto County Board Meeting.

Oconto County Health and Human Services Director Mike Reimer and Oconto County Health Officer Deb Konitzer spoke in front of the board on COVID-19 cases, as well as vaccinations.

"We are in the process of scheduling a post-pandemic, not that the pandemic is over, review of all of the players," said Reimer. "We are going to go through and talk about what worked and what didn't work."

In her update, Konitzer talked to the board about the number of cases and deaths from COVID-19 that Oconto County has seen since the beginning of the pandemic and how that compares to today.

"Looking at total cases, we are at 5,111 and we have had 68 deaths," said Konitzer. "In the last couple of months we have had two deaths over two months."

She added that the burden, or the number of cases for 100,000 people, has dropped to 50 per 100,000, with the state being less than that.

"That brings us down to a moderate high to medium activity level, which really is a change from about three weeks ago," said Konitzer. "We are really seeing a lot less activity."

Konitzer said that seeing this less activity surrounding the COVID-19 cases has been a positive.

In terms of the Delta COVID-19 variant, Konitzer said that Oconto County is seeing more complications with people who are 35 years old or younger.

"This is a concern, because that is the age group that is least vaccinated," said Konitzer. "When you look at the percentage that are vaccinated, the older you are, the more likely that you have been vaccinated."

In response to this, officials in Oconto County are looking at ways to persuade that age group to receive vaccinations.

In relation to testing for COVID-19, Konitzer said that Prevea still has sites where the public can be tested. She added that Prevea, Bellin, the Resch Center and Lambeau Field will continue to provide sites where the public can be vaccinated.

In effort to continue to get people vaccinated, the county is working with Prevea and Bellin to incorporate pop-up clinics to help those who are hesitant or can't make an appointment.

Konitzer finished her update with information regarding the amount of people that have been vaccinated.

"For our coverage rate of vaccinations, we are at 41% that have at least one dose," said Konitzer. "The state is at 49%, so we are lagging behind. We are really trying to get the vaccination rate up so we don't have that resurgence."

County Board passes wage increase, budget guidance

Oconto County equalized property values are up 3.6%

By LUKE REIMER
Reporter

The Oconto County Board on June 24 passed its budget guidance letter for department heads as they prepare their 2022 budget proposals.

The board also passed wage adjustments for county employees and a consistent vacation policy for managers and department heads.

"Each year at this time, we submit a budget guidance letter," County Administrator Kevin Hamann said to the board.

He noted that the county's equalized value rose from $4,087,983,235 to $4,235,645,135, an increase of 3.6% in 2020. This is the seventh year in a row that they have seen an increase.

"I am expecting something similar again," said Hamann.

An update on those numbers will be received by Aug. 15.

Hamann said the county's general fund was overall in positive condition.

"Our preliminary number, which is still subjected to audit, is that we are going to add $832,000 to our fund balance," said Hamann.

For the 2022 budget, the county is budgeting for a 2% wage increase among general employees, which would result in $324,000. A 2% wage increase is also being budgeted for public safety employees, which would result in $43,000. They are also budgeting $10,000 for elected officials and $3,000 for temporary and seasonal employees.

"We anticipate that retirement, disability, life insurance and workers compensation will stay the same as 2021," Hamann said. "Social Security and Medicare will stay the same. I do expect health insurance to go up."

Oconto County officials are recommending to lower the contingency budget from $500,000 to $100,000.

"My concern with too big of a contingency is that too often departments rely on that contingency and come up with projects for it," said Hamann. "If they really need something, they should budget for it."

Human Resources Director Shelly Schultz addressed the vacation and wage adjustment resolutions.

"What we are asking for is actually to be more consistent with our vacation policy," said Schultz, adding that the proposal is nothing different than what is currently in place, but rather to have it in writing.

Supervisors approved Schultz's proposal to give newly hired managers three weeks of vacation and four weeks for department heads.

Schultz also spoke for a 1% wage increase across the board for all employees salaries effective July 4 and covering the rest of 2021.

The county had budgeted for zero increase, and with the state of the economy, Schultz said a 1% increase is behind what other counties are doing for wage adjustments.

"A few did not budget anything, but a majority of counties budgeted anywhere from 1-3%," Schultz said.

The increase adds $81,000 in expense for the remainder of 2021, funded out of the contingency budget, she said.

In a letter read to the board on June 24, Hamann said his last day will be Jan. 7, 2022.

"I have truly enjoyed working for Oconto County," Hamann wrote. "I sincerely appreciate the support provided by the county

He was born April 27, 1997, in Green Bay, the oldest of four children born to Jim and Tracey (Anderson) Ash. We know God will welcome him into open arms and ease his pain. As an infant, he moved to Oconto Falls with his Mom and Dad.

Brett started his athletic career early in elementary school wrestling, playing football and baseball which he continued through high school. He was always near the top of his Class of 2015 academically and in sports. Brett also enjoyed hunting and fishing with his family and friends.

Brett was an "old soul" people would say as at an early age, he always enjoyed talking to his older relatives and gaining their knowledge. This continued into adulthood as he was always eager to learn something new. He also enjoyed coaching youth sports and being a volunteer fireman for the Oconto Falls Fire Department. Brett went to diesel mechanics school and worked a few mechanic jobs before purchasing a business in Lena which he was currently running as Ash's Auto Parts. He knew how to take care of any customer's need immediately or could quickly figure it out. Brett had many friends in the area, old and young alike, who will miss his quick wit and occasional smile.

Brett leaves behind his parents, Jim and Tracey; two brothers Bryce and Cameron; one sister Taylor; paternal grandparents, Rod and Doris Ash; maternal grandmother, Judith Anderson; aunts, uncles and cousins. Brett will be lovingly remembered as a great son, brother, grandson, nephew, cousin and friend who will be sadly missed and never forgotten.

son, and uncle Michael Ash.

Davel's post as administrative coordinator permanent

ADA promoted to take charge of county's legal affairs

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

Shawano County has filled two of its top positions from within after months of interim staffing, allowing for full-time leadership.

The Shawano County Board of Supervisors unanimously approved James Davel as administrative while Maulson takes over the post previously held by Tony Kordus, who left in March of this year for personal reasons after serving the county for more than 12 years.

Davel, who previously served as the county's emergency management coordinator, had been serving part time as the interim administrative coordinator for several months after several failed attempts to recruit other potential candidates.

"We did hold several interviews. We made offers, and a couple of those offers were used, I believe, to go back to where they were employed and get a raise, because none of them accepted it," County Board Chairman Tom Kautza said. "We then went back to see if Jimmy would be interested, and he jumped right on it."

Prior to being hired by the county, Davel had served for 30 years in the U.S. Army.

Supervisor Jerry Erdmann, an Army veteran himself, had some positive praise for Davel.

"Stay motivated, and get 'er done," Erdmann said.

Davel will receive an annual salary of $105,165, slightly less than the $106,081 that Miller received. However, the real savings to the county will come from the fringe benefits, according to Kautza. Because Davel is receiving benefits from the military, the county is expected to save more than $25,000 having Davel in the position.

"I think he's doing a pretty good job," Kautza said. "There's still a lot to learn, but I haven't heard much in bad comments from anybody. In the interim, whenever you asked for something to be done, he'd do it."

Supervisor Gene Hoppe endorsed making Davel's appointment permanent, saying he's watched Davel in action.

"I've noticed through the days that he's been dealing with people really, really good," Hoppe said.

With Davel becoming the administrative coordinator, that leaves the emergency management coordinator position open. However, the county board won't have to approve filling that position as it passed a resolution during the meeting putting the emergency management office back under the sheriff's department. This reverses a decision from 2016 to make emergency management its own agency, receiving oversight from the county's public safety committee.

Maulson will officially take over as corporation counsel July 6 after serving as an assistant district attorney for the last five months. She has also worked in the public defender's office in Wausau for six months and received her juris doctorate from the University of Wisconsin Law School.

"I thoroughly look forward to working with you all," Maulson said to the board.

Maulson will receive an annual salary of $90,147, which will save the county an additional $25,000 compared to what the county was paying Kordus, according to Kautza. The resolution that the board approved also stipulates that if she decides to resign, she must give a 90-day notice.

"She is going to, hopefully, be a longtime employee for Shawano County," Kautza said, noting that Maulson will be on time for future county board meetings. Maulson had to fit in her attendance at the board meeting between two court hearings.

Because Maulson is still fairly green in her law career, the $25,000 in salary savings will be used this year to retain Von Briesen to assist her as she becomes acclimated to her new post, Kautza said.

Kautza noted that the hiring was rushed through with a recommendation from the administrative committee prior to the board meeting.

"The executive committee approved making an offer to her (earlier in June), and when she accepted, I thought we should hurry up and do the whole thing, because she's going to start in early July," Kautza said. "There's no point postponing it until the executive committee next month; that's almost a whole month from now."

Kautza said that the committee did not receive any applications from municipal attorneys or other experienced professionals, noting the labor market is extremely tight. Still, he feels Maulson will serve the county well.

"You now have 27 bosses instead of one," Kautza said to Maulson after the vote. "Welcome to the group."

Organic food producers can get reimbursed by USDA

Organic food producers and processors have until Oct. 31 to apply for reimbursement of costs related to organic certification through the USDA National Organic Program.

In Wisconsin, this federal funding is administered through the Wisconsin Department of Agriculture, Trade and Consumer Protection (DATCP).

Farms and businesses that produce, process or package certified organic agricultural products are eligible to be reimbursed for 50% of certification-related costs (up to $500 per category of certification) for expenses paid from Oct. 1, 2020, to Sept. 30. Farms and businesses must be located in Wisconsin and currently certified as organic or actively seeking certification through an accredited organization during that time.

Applications materials and instructions can be found online at the DATCP's Organic Cost Share Program webpage: https://datcp.wi.gov/Pages/Growing_WI/OrganicFarmingAndFood.aspx

Applications must be mailed to DATCP-DAD, Organic Cost Share Program, P.O. Box 8911, Madison, WI 53708 or emailed to datcporganic-costshare@wi.gov. For information, contact Andrew Bernhardt, DATCP organic agriculture programs specialist, at datcporganiccostshare@wi.gov or 608-572-0512.

The funding for this popular program originated in the 2002 Federal Farm Bill and was renewed in the 2014 Federal Farm Bill. Funding comes from the federal government through the USDA National Organic Program. DATCP administers the funding for Wisconsin.

Dealing with CRPS unnerving for Shawano woman

Steinbach trying to educate community, medical officials about rare and painful condition

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

A simple bicycle ride in 2020 triggered the start of a lifetime of pain for Shawano resident Sarah Steinbach, who has since learned that she has complex regional pain syndrome (CRPS).

However, instead of letting the pain overtake her, Steinbach is turning that pain into awareness about an issue that few people are aware of. To that end, she held her first CRPS awareness walk June 26 at Heritage Park, spreading the word at the Shawano Farmers Market and other downtown areas about a rare condition that affects fewer than 200,000 people in the United States per year.

CRPS is when someone has chronic arm or leg pain developing after an injury, surgery, stroke or heart attack. What makes the pain CRPS is when it feels greater than someone would expect from the injury that caused it. It can last for years, and for many, it can last a lifetime.

For Steinbach, the CRPS started on that ride July 7, 2020, with her son, Isaac, and her golden retriever, Bennet. The trio stopped for a drink of cold water when a blue butterfly fluttered in front of them, and Bennet wanted to chase the butterfly, jerking the leash enough to cause Steinbach to fall off her bike. She immediately felt an intense burning pain in her elbow, and she knew she needed to get medical care for it, a challenge at the time due to the coronavirus pandemic causing restrictions at health care facilities.

"It took about four months. I'd seen three different specialists and all they found at first was a bone bruise, marrow deep," Steinbach said. "I had no idea that was even a thing, but I kept saying that it hurts too much for it to be just a bone bruise."

The doctors recommended giving it six more weeks, but in the meantime, Steinbach went to another pain specialist, who immediately saw that she had CRPS and prescribed her oral nerve medication. The specialist had her come into his office in December 2020 for a trial spinal cord stimula-tor, which was expected to relieve the debilitating pain she had experienced for months, although there's nothing that can cure it.

"I got a lot of relief," Steinbach said, noting that she had her permanent spinal cord stimulator implanted in January of this year. "The purpose of the spinal cord stimulator is to change the brain waves that my body is sending the pain signals. It's actually a symphonic nervous system disease and autoimmune, so my body is attacking itself, and it causes the pain."

CRPS is sometimes referred to as the "suicide disease," according to Steinbach, because one out of two people with the condition opts to take their own life because the pain is so great.

"CRPS is the most painful condition known to humans, and it actually spreads through your nervous system," Steinbach said, noting that medical experts show CRPS creates higher pain than childbirth or amputation. "It started in my elbow and went to my wrist, my hand, went up to my shoulder and mid-shoulder. In mid-March, I had a test confirming it has spread to my leg."

With the CRPS, Steinbach has lost a lot of the function in her arm and is uncertain how she will be able to work again, noting she did office work before her injury with a lot of typing, and doing the repetitive motion now would just increase her pain.

When asked what has allowed her to endure, Steinbach said having a support system made all the difference. Her family has been supportive, and Steinbach also found a CRPS support group that covers much of northeast Wisconsin. Not even the emotional support can cripple the physical pain, though, she said.

"There are nights when you wish to the stars that the pain would subside a little," Steinbach said. "Then the break of dawn comes. We warriors get excited about morning because we've made it through another day."

The walk continued in spite of the rainy weather. For some people suffering with CRPS, a simple touch can cause pain, even from a drop of moisture.

Steinbach and her support group are trying to communicate with doctors and nurses about CRPS. It is so uncommon that many medical professionals are not aware of its existence and, therefore, unable to diagnose it when a patient comes in with symptoms.

"You just can't believe that medical professionals would just dismiss your symptoms and how we feel and how it affects us," Steinbach said. "Every day is different. You don't know if you're going to be able to get out of bed, if you're going to be stiff, if you're going to work, how much pain you have."

The money raised from the weekend's awareness walk will go into a fund to help others dealing with CRPS. Steinbach said she knows one person with CRPS who is living off of Social Security and cannot afford a cane.

"I am so thankful to be in a community that loves me," Steinbach said. "I have been here, and my family has been here, for a long time, so I know that I will get through this disease OK."

Fight for Independence Day like you do Christmas

We always hear about the so-called War on Christmas, where people feel that they can't say "Merry Christmas" for fear that you might be considered insensitive to those who celebrate other holidays, such as Hanukkah. If retail workers or others dare to say the all-encompassing "Happy holidays," it's seen as an affront to Christians.

However, there is another holiday out there where folks don't dare to say its name, although it baffles me as to why. This holiday doesn't have other competing days, and it's not one that's limited by faith. It's a day that we revere as the birth of this country and the freedoms that we enjoy today.

LEE PULASKI

Independence Day. There. I said it. Sue me. Why is everyone so afraid to call the holiday we have coming up Independence Day, instead relegating it to the mundane declaration of the date that it falls on? Everywhere you look, advertisements show that we're going to be having "July 4th" activities and "Fourth of July" festivals.

We're going to have parades, baseball games, barbecues and flags galore to celebrate the day, and we're going to light up the night with dazzling fireworks.

We're going to be doing things that folks in less-developed countries only dream of, yet those two beautiful words — Independence Day — seem to be akin to shouting "Fire!" in a crowded theater. We'll say everything else under the sun on this day and probably do a few things that we might regret later, but yet when it comes to announcing what day it is, Independence Day is considered to be a dirty phrase.

We used to be proud to broadcast our patriotism. We used to have beaming smiles when people spoke of independence. However, independence is rarely spoken on broadcast television. Businesses tout their big red, white and blue sales for "the Fourth of July." It's like we're a nation that's ashamed of our freedom instead of flaunting it like a snazzy, sexy sports car.

Why are we so unwilling to say two words that sum up the decision 245 years ago where American colonists signed a Declaration of Independence and essentially told the king of England that they weren't going to put up with his tyranny anymore and were venturing out on their own? Why are we denying that the ensuing Revolutionary War that took place after the document was signed was a battle for our freedom and for our independence to be who or what we want to be?

Instead, we call this holiday by its date. There's another day in history we call by its date, but it's not celebrated with red, white and blue and hot dogs — Sept. 11. That's when our little hamlet of freedom was shaken to its core by foreign terrorism that reminded us that freedom is not simply given to us. We have to fight for it, and many folks do that for America every day, whether they wear a military uniform, a police uniform or a three-piece suit in the courtroom.

After what happened earlier this year when our nation's Capitol was besieged by people intent on disrupting a democratic process laid out in our United States Constitution, it's highly likely that the date Jan. 6 will be another one that Americans speak with bitterness on their tongues — another dark day in our history. With this tendency for specific dates to become unpleasant to think and speak of, why do we relegate one of the biggest celebrations of the year for America to a mere Fourth of July?

What kind of reaction do you think people would have if we called Veterans Day "Nov. 11," or if we simply called Thanksgiving "the fourth Thursday of November"? It makes little sense for us to make our proud holiday of patriotism into something we should be ashamed of. We should embrace our freedom and our civil liberties and not glance around for fear someone might change our status to dictatorship simply because we dare to say the words "Independence Day."

By not saying the words, we're indicating that the people who fought and died to maintain the infancy of our nation are not important, that they're an afterthought. We're acting like our fun times on the lake and parties in our backyards are prepackaged and given to us like food in a grocery store, not acknowledging that there was a long and laborious process to get our country to where it is. That's wrong. That's half a step away from despicable.

I hope that we all take a little time to remember that our way of life exists because our ancestors took steps to secure our independence. We're so ferocious when it comes to protecting the holiday of Christmas from being watered down, but I believe we should fight just as hard to keep Independence Day from becoming a faint memory. Americans are proud of who they are, and they should be proud that they have their independence, as well.

Happy Independence Day, one and all, and just in case I forget to say it in six months, have a merry Christmas.

Brunch with a view of the cows

Volunteers were kept quite busy dishing out scrambled eggs, sausage, cheese curds and more June 27 during the Shawano County Brunch on the Farm at Back 40 Acres in the Town of Angelica. The Shawano County Farm Bureau was expecting more than 4,500 people to attend this year, and despite the rainy weather throughout the event, traffic on Cedar Road was backed up for most of it as vehicles waited to get on the farm.

Twig's sodas go from glass to aluminum

Bottling company tries canned beverages of select flavors to get into other markets

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

Twig's Beverage Company has been bottling delicious Sun Drop soda for decades, and a few years ago, the company started developing its own specialty sodas to quench locals' thirsts.

Now, those flavors have been canned.

Twig's has decided to put its root beer, black cherry, orange and grape flavors into aluminum cans in the hopes of getting into additional markets beyond the current grocery stores and other places that sell specialty sodas.

"We find that a lot of events and venues cannot have glass because of the liability of breakage and stuff," said Lucas Hartwig, who operates Twig's with his family and was the one spearheading putting the sodas in cans. "That was an opportunity to get into other markets by having cans. Also, some people prefer cans, especially the people who travel here. People visiting here might not want the fragility of the bottles. The cans are a little more durable."

The project took a little more effort, due to the fact that Twig's is set up for glass bottles. Hartwig brought in a mobile canner who processed 800 cases of soda in 16 hours.

"They drove up here, and they have all their machinery on wheels, so they just wheeled it all in and hooked it up to our system," Hartwig said. "It's all the same soda. We batched it all here and stuff. We did that all in a day."

Hartwig hopes to have the cans available for sale at the Shawano County Fair and other fairs in the region. The canned soda could also potentially be sold at the Resch Center in Green Bay and other sports arena, he said.

"With Twig's vs. Sun Drop, there are no territories or regulations," Hartwig said. "With Twig's, we can go wherever we want. We can go outside of our territory to other events, and maybe retailers (outside Twig's Sun Drop territory)."

Whether plans to do more canned

Lucas Hartwig grabs a four-pack of Twig's Forget-Me-Not Grape soda for a customer June 26 at Twig's Beverage Company in Shawano. The cans are a new twist to the flavored sodas that Twig's batches, as customers are used to seeing them in glass bottles.

LEE PULASKI | NEW MEDIA

soda materialize remains to be seen. A big unveiling planned to be in an outdoor tent had to be moved inside June 26 after the rainy weather changed those plans, but Hartwig is hopeful that once the word gets out, the demand will go up.

"We didn't want to invest in machinery and stuff, because we don't know how it's going to go," Hartwig said. "We just did a minimum run, and I took a survey to find out the four most popular flavors, and that's why we've got the black cherry, grape, orange and root beer."

Hartwig noted that some of Twig's regular distributors have already scooped some of the cans up for retail sales, setting up a waiting game to see if the canned soda takes off.

"We're just kind of rolling with it," Hartwig said. "If it works, great. If it turns out to be less than ideal, then we didn't invest too much in machinery or stuff like that."

Of course, if the popularity skyrockets, it'll take some time to can some more soda, as Hartwig noted the mobile canner is booked up for several months.

Hartwig said that Twig's was considering going with a black can for the sodas to match with its labels versus the standard silver aluminum, but finding someone that made black cans that was available was difficult as the state continues to recover from the coronavirus pandemic.

"It was a little pricier, so we went with the (standard) aluminum cans," Hartwig said. "We got some black tack packs on top that contrasted well, so we might just stick with this style."

Packers seek student art work

The Green Bay Packers are inviting student artists to submit artwork for the fifth annual Packers Student Art Contest, with three grand prize winners earning the opportunity for their art to be featured at Lambeau Field, a trip to a Packers home game and a donation for their school.

The theme of this year's contest is "Why Are the Packers Your Favorite Team?" and asks students to share an artistic representation of what the Packers mean to them.

Artists are invited to capture the theme through paintings, drawings, prints, digital art, mixed media or collage.

Eligible artists include students in grades 6-8 or grades 9-12, or students attending a university or technical college at the time of submission, with one winner chosen from each category. The final artwork size must be either 8.5 inches by 11 inches or 16 inches by 20 inches on canvas, paper or other mixed media. Art pieces must weigh less than 30 pounds and be able to fit comfortably in a standard frame.

The deadline to submit pieces is Aug. 13 at 10 a.m., and the winning pieces will be displayed in the stadium's club level during the upcoming season.

The three grand prize winners also will receive a $5,000 donation to the winner's school art program and tickets for each winner and two guests to a future game at Lambeau Field.

For full contest rules and guidelines, or to submit an entry for the contest, visit pckrs.com/artcontest.

Sunset theme decorates newest barn quilt

The nation's largest trail of barn quilts in Shawano County continues to grow with the addition of number 367.

The quilt, called Sunset Memories, is on a barn owned by John and Vicki Spiegelberg at N3525 Lone Maple Road, Tigerton. The quilt was put on display June 21, which was especially meaningful, since it was John and Vicki's 41st wedding anniversary.

"The quilt pattern represents our interests, including our love of trees, lumber, hunting and farming with antique tractors," Vicki said.

John and Vicki, who live in Hortonville, purchased the 80-acre parcel of land in 2004, using the land for cropping and the barn for storage. The barn, built in the early 1900s, was in poor condition, but John and Vicki fixed it up well enough to have several barn dances there for family and friends. As time allows, they continue to make improvements in the barn, including adding metal siding and repairing some of the inside.

At their home in Hortonville, they raise some beef steers and chickens. John also has a collection of about 30 antique tractors that he has restored. He also built a saw mill and Vicki enjoys woodworking and making crafts.

John and Vicki have three sons. Clayton, Cole and Charlie, who with his wife, Lindsey, has two boys. They also have a daughter, Karen, who is married to Ben Cate, and they have two daughters.

Vicki and John said they have thought about getting a barn quilt for quite some time and are thankful to Jim and Irene Leuenberger for making it happen.

"It really is amazing what they have done to make the old barns in Shawano County look beautiful again," Vicki said.

The Spiegelberg barn quilt was painted by the Shawano County barn quilt committee and was put up by LeRoy Raddant and his grandson, Keenan, who both work at Raddant Electric in Shawano.

Hostas add excellent texture to gardens

Growing hostas is a love affair for many gardeners in our area. They are easy to grow, versatile, beautiful, artistic and useful throughout the garden and landscape. Hostas are one of the most drought-tolerant plants available in our area, and they are able to withstand adverse conditions, such as those we have seen this summer. Wet or dry, hot or cold, hostas always thrive.

ROB ZIMMER

One of my favorite aspects of gardening with hostas is their beauty, which lends itself to artistic creation and endless possibilities in the garden.

Hostas provide many forms of artistic grace.

There is amazing texture, vertical interest in some plants, color, form, sculpture, symmetry, asymmetry, and so many varieties are available that you can create a virtual tapestry of beauty.

Some of my favorite hostas are those that are heavily corrugated, or seer-suckered, providing incredible texture in the garden not available from any other plant. As some varieties of hostas mature, this corrugation becomes especially intense, creating quite the display in the garden. Some examples of hostas with especially beautiful corrugation are World Cup, Abiqua Drinking Gourd, Big Daddy, and Rainforest Sunrise.

Many gardeners refer to hostas that blend several shades of color together as “painted” hostas. Indeed, this is exactly how they appear, as the colors are blended on the leaves, almost like brushstrokes from an artist’s paintbrush. Depending on the variety, this color can become more intense and more beautiful when the hosta is placed in the sun or shade.

Form is another characteristic of hostas that lends itself beautifully in the garden. Some hostas are small, barely 6 inches across with tiny leaves. Others are quite massive, reaching up to 8 feet across and 4 feet high, spectacular specimen plants in the summer garden. Some hostas are round and symmetrical, while others may take on unruly forms that provide a bit of Hosta of the Year for 2021 is this beauty called Rainbow’s End.

ROB ZIMMER

Many hostas provide exceptional texture in the summer garden, as well as intense coloration, form and elegance.

ROB ZIMMER

mystery and enchantment.

Because of their versatility and adaptability, many varieties of hostas can be grown in either sun or shade. An increasing number of newer hostas, especially, are perfectly adapted for up to full sun, especially some of the gold hostas, variegated hostas and green hostas. The best blue hostas are still wisely kept in the shade, where their blue coloration remains the most intense.

Some hostas have wide, massive, elephant-ear type leaves, while others have long, narrow, strap like leaves that create a fireworks display in the garden. The same is true of hosta flowers. A closer look at the blooms of hostas reveal spectacular beauty among the blossoms. Some are streaked in purple and white. Some are heavily fragrant and massive in size. Others are a rich purple or even blue. There is even one hosta that boasts yellow flowers.

Gardening with hostas is much like creating artwork. Choosing varieties that mix well together and provide a pleasing combination of colors, textures, forms, heights and leaf shape is a fun way to explore your gardening hobby.

Crash on Main Street injures Shawano woman

By NEW MEDIA STAFF

Injuries were reported following an accident involving a vehicle and a pedestrian on Main Street in Shawano.

The Shawano Police Department was notified of the accident and responded at 5 p.m. on June 23.

The crash involved a car driven by Joseph Black, a 66-year-old man, and Rita Trinko, a 78-year-old woman, according to Lt. Michael Musolff.

According to Officer Ryan Atkinson, Trinko was shopping at Charlie's County Market and was crossing Main Street when Black, whose vision was blocked by a parked car, hit her with his vehicle.

Trinko suffered significant injuries, but they are reportedly non-life threatening.

Rita Trinko, shown at home in this 2014 file photo, sustained injuries after she was hit by a car on June 24.

Recording has Wisconsin seniors criticizing Gard

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The University of Wisconsin-Madison's senior basketball players were critical of their head coach during a late-season team meeting that was secretly recorded and later sent to a newspaper.

The Wisconsin State Journal says it received a 37-minute audio file this week of a Feb. 19 team meeting that included seven senior players, coach Greg Gard and three assistant coaches. The newspaper said it received the recording from an anonymous email account and that it included only a portion of the actual meeting.

During the meeting, forward Nate Reuvers tells Gard that "we don't have a relationship" and that "I personally don't think or feel like you care about our future aspirations." Guard Walt McGrory tells Gard that "I don't know if I'll ever talk to you again after this."

Gard issued a statement saying he has his "players' backs" and is fully committed to their development.

"I care deeply about the student-athletes in our program," Gard said. "I want nothing more than to help them and see them succeed on and off the court. Our program has a lengthy track record of doing both. But the path to a championship or to graduation is not always easy. Sometimes there are setbacks. Difficult conversations have to be had. Sometimes people just need to get things off their chest."

Gard added that he was "incredibly disappointed" that a private meeting was "secretly recorded, edited and made public."

"It shows a complete lack of care for our program culture and for the confidentiality that is owed to our student-athletes who wanted an opportunity to share their thoughts behind closed doors," Gard said.

Athletic director Barry Alvarez, who is retiring at the end of the month, said in a statement that "Greg, his staff and his team have my full support as they look toward the 2021-22 season." Chris McIntosh, who has been deputy athletic director since 2017, will be the new athletic director.

In the State Journal report, an unidentified player described the meeting by saying that Gard "sat there, he listened and there was not one dry eye in the entire room at the end of everything." The player added that, "the biggest thing that he did at the end was he apologized again and he was in tears and he said, 'It's not your fault; it's my fault.'"

Wisconsin went 18-13 and lost to eventual national champion Baylor in the second round of the NCAA Tournament this past season. The Badgers had opened the season ranked seventh after winning a share of the Big Ten title in 2019-20.

Gard owns a 119-70 record in six seasons.

Although the NCAA gave seniors the options to return for one more year of eligibility because of the pandemic, Brad Davison is the only one of Wisconsin's seven 2020-21 seniors who plans to play for the Badgers next season.

Schaal wins discus title to lead Gillett at state

Gillett earns 6 other podium finishes

By MORGAN RODE
Sports Editor

Karissa Schaal's first-place finish in the girls discus competition highlighted an impressive showing for the Gillett Secondary School at the Division 3 WIAA State Track & Field Championships on June 24 at Veterans Memorial Stadium in La Crosse.

Schaal ended up earning two of the team's seven podium (top six) finishes at state.

In the discus competition, Schaal built some momentum during the preliminary round with a throw of 117 feet, 4 inches on her final of three throws. That mark was the top of the 17 competitors, meaning Schaal would throw last in the 10-competitor final.

By the time Schaal was set to throw the last of her three final attempts, her mark of 117-4 still led the way, so she tried to outdo herself.

Schaal delivered a throw of 122-11 to not only up her top throw, but also set a new school record on her final attempt of high school.

"It's crazy, insanely crazy," said Schaal. "It's all the hard work. I mean, work, work, work and put your mind to it and I had nothing to lose at that point. It was the last throw of my life, so I left it all out there."

Earlier in the day, Schaal turned in a sixth-place finish in the shot put.

Like many of her competitors in the event, her top throw came on the second throw of the prelims. Schaal's mark of 37-3 got her into the finals and held up as her best of six throws in the event.

All of Gillett's other state athletes were part of running events.

The boys 4x800-meter relay team of Alex Peterson, Evan Peterson, Connor Hanson and Derek Hanson had the best finish of the bunch, placing second in 8 minutes, 20.98 seconds. Only Sheboygan Area Lutheran (8:16.73) finished with a better time.

"Finishing up my season with a state runner-up finish for our relay is very special to me," said senior Derek Hanson, who later placed 15th as an individual in the 1,600 with a time of 4:53.8. "It acts as a visible accumulation of our team's relentless hard work. I'm so proud of everyone on this team for all the consistent effort they've invested in our program, and hope this will help inspire our younger runners to rise up to the big expectations we'll be having for them. Gillett's no longer just some small town!"

MORGAN RODE | NEW MEDIA

"This is just the first year of our amazing 4x800 legacy here in Gillett," said Evan Peterson. "And with this inspiring state finish I have high hopes for next year's team to be in the exact same place, especially with three out of four of us coming back next season."

Alex Peterson later earned a podium finish as an individual in the 3,200, taking sixth in 10:15.68. Connor

Hanson took 15th in the 800 (2:11.83). Both athletes will hope to use their state experience this year to help them achieve even more success in the track seasons to come.

"This strong finish in our 4x800 and for my 3,200 gave me things to work on, but also much-needed experience at state," said Peterson. "Running at state is a different animal than most of our regular season meets. Going into next track season, this added knowledge/experience will give me more confidence in myself to push for even better times and places throughout the course of the season."

"Making it to state this year has really given me confidence, and for next season I will have high expectations for myself and my team, with hopes of another awesome state-bound trip," said Hanson. "I also feel that the state competition has made me less afraid of close competition like what we had at state. Overall, I feel more prepared and wanting competition to push myself to my goals"

The Gillett girls 4x800 relay also competed at state and earned a podium finish. The team of Aubrey DeBauch, Ryann Wagner, Carleigh Kaczmarek and Sylvia Hansen placed fourth with a time of 10:22.85.

"It means the world to me to make it on the podium at state track," said Wagner. "The girls on my relay team push me to be the best I can be and I'm so grateful for them. I'm going to miss our seniors so much, they taught me so much and made a huge impact on my running career. I'm thankful to be able to run with my team at state and accomplish so much together!"

"Making the podium was obviously the goal. The fact that we made it as a team was an even greater experience because those girls next to you have put the same amount of time and dedication in as you and you would do anything for them," said Kaczmarek. "It's just so amazing to see our hard work pay off."

DeBauch and Hansen later competed in individual events, with each making the podium again.

DeBauch placed fifth in the 300 hurdles with a time of 48.28.

"It is incredibly special to finish my senior season by making it on the podium twice at the state track and field event," said DeBauch. "After not being able to compete my junior year due to COVID, I knew I had to leave everything I had left out on the track for my senior season."

Hansen took sixth in the 800 with a time of 2:22.13.

"To me, it just means that all my hard work has paid off," said Hansen of her podium finishes. "I've been waiting for this moment for awhile. Since my freshman year, I haven't really been where I wanted to be, especially getting injured. Just to finish off my high school career on the podium means the absolute world to me."

Lena/STAA

Kennedy Marquardt, of Lena, represented the Lena/St. Thomas Aquinas Academy co-op at state.

Marquardt competed in the girls 400, placing 14th with a time of 1:02.07.

"It was the best experience to end my career at the biggest meet in the state," said Marquardt, a senior.

"I am very grateful and honored to have been able to compete at a level of competition that the state meet is. While it was bittersweet knowing that I would never compete for Lena again, it was a good way to showcase all my countless hours that I have spent training for this one moment at state."

Suring

Jeremy Hensel represented Suring at state, competing in the boys pole vault competition.

Gillett's Sylvia Hansen competes in the girls 4x800-meter relay during the Division 3 WIAA State Track & Field Championships on June 24 at Veterans Memorial Stadium in La Crosse. The relay team placed fourth, with Hansen also placing sixth in the 800 as an individual.

MORGAN RODE | NEW MEDIA

Hensel cleared 11 feet and 11-6 on his first attempts before keeping his season alive by clearing 12 feet on his third attempt. He was unable to clear 12-6, which left him in 12th place.

Hensel will now try and build upon what he accomplish this year to turn in an even bigger track season when he's a senior next spring.

"After this year I think now I know what it's like and I'll be more prepared for next year," said Hensel. "I'm just gonna carry all this energy and emotion into the next season."

Kids From Wisconsin returns to Shawano

The Kids From Wisconsin's 53rd year will present "Live! In Living Color" at 7 p.m. July 10 at Franklin Park, 235 S. Washington St., Shawano. Admission is free.

This year's Kids From Wisconsin troupe features two Shawano Community High School graduates — Nathan Edwards on woodwinds and Sarah Bergmann on piano.

Bergmann will be a sophomore this fall at the University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire, where she is studying business. She began playing the piano at a very young age and started working as an accompanist six years ago. Since then, she has enjoyed playing many different styles of music in a variety of instrumental and vocal ensemble settings.

This is Bergmann's first summer with the Kids program.

Edwards is a graduate of Shawano High School. He loves all things music. Tenor sax, alto sax, and clarinet are some of the instruments he plays. Edwards had played in the pit orchestra for school musicals and is a member of the Tri-M musical honor society. He has competed all over the Edwards was asked to be part of the Honor Band during the Louisville Jazz Festival. He will be attending UW-Stevens Point to pursue a degree in music education.

An iconic Kids From Wisconsin performance is a professional, fully staged Vegas-style performance designed for a multi-generational audience. The group tours the Midwest and will perform to more than 120,000 people during a summer. "Live! In Living Color" will highlight the greatest live music venues throughout the history of this country and the musical artists that helped define their legacies — including The Ed Sullivan Theater, Caesars Palace, The Grand Ole Opry, House of Blues and Broadway, just to name a few.

Prior to the show, there will be an Arts Spotlight starting at 4:30 p.m., featuring music, dance and culture groups from across the Shawano area.

Arts organizations that would like to participate can sign up at <https://www.kidsfromwi.org/event-details/sign-up-your-arts-organization-to-participate-in-a-community-arts-spotlight>.

The Shawano performance is being sponsored by the Shawano Community High School Music Boosters. For information, visit www.kidsfromwisconsin.org.

John Trumbull painting: Signing of the Declaration of Independence.

Nine surprising facts about the Declaration of Independence

1. The Declaration of Independence wasn't signed on July 4, 1776.

On July 1, 1776, the Second Continental Congress met in Philadelphia, and on the following day 12 of the 13 colonies voted in favor of Richard Henry Lee's motion for independence. The delegates then spent the next two days debating and revising the language of a statement drafted by Thomas Jefferson. On July 4, Congress officially adopted the Declaration of Independence, and as a result the date is celebrated as Independence Day. Nearly a month would go by, however, before the actual signing of the document took place. First, New York's delegates didn't officially give their support until July 9 because their home assembly hadn't yet authorized them to vote in favor of independence. Next, it took two weeks for the Declaration to be "engrossed"—written on parchment in a clear hand. Most of the delegates signed on August 2, but several—Elbridge Gerry, Oliver Wolcott, Lewis Morris, Thomas McKean and Matthew Thornton—signed on a later date. (Two others, John Dickinson and Robert R. Livingston, never signed at all.) The signed parchment copy now resides at the National Archives in the Rotunda for the Charters of Freedom, alongside the Constitution and the Bill of Rights.

2. More than one copy of the Declaration of Independence exists.

After the adoption of the Declaration of Independence, the "Committee of Five"—Thomas Jefferson, John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, Roger Sherman and Robert R. Livingston—was charged with overseeing the reproduction of the approved text. This was completed at the shop of Philadelphia printer John Dunlap. On July 5, Dunlap's copies were dispatched across the 13 colonies to newspapers, local officials and the commanders of the Continental troops. These rare documents, known as "Dunlap broadsides," predate the engrossed version signed by the delegates. Of the hundreds thought to have been printed on the night of July 4, only 26 copies survive. Most are held in museum and library collections, but three are privately owned.

3. When news of the Declaration of Independence reached New York City, it started a riot.

By July 9, 1776, a copy of the Declaration of Independence had reached New York City. With hundreds of British naval ships occupying New York Harbor, revolutionary spirit and military tensions were running high. George Washington, commander of the Continental forces in New York, read the document aloud in front of City Hall. A raucous crowd cheered the inspiring words, and later that day tore down a nearby statue of George III. The statue was subsequently melted down and shaped into more than 42,000 musket balls for the fledgling American army.

4. Eight of the 56 signers of the Declaration of Independence were born in the U.K.

While the majority of the members of the Second Continental Congress were native-born Americans, eight of the men voting for independence from Britain were born in the United Kingdom. Button Gwinnett and Robert Morris were born in England, Francis Lewis was born in Wales, James Wilson and John Witherspoon were born in Scotland, George Taylor and Matthew Thornton were born in Ireland and James Smith hailed from Northern Ireland.

5. One signer of the Declaration of Independence later recanted.

Richard Stockton, a lawyer from Princeton, New Jersey, became the only signer of the Declaration of Independence to recant his support of the revolution. On November 30, 1776, the hapless delegate was captured by the British and thrown in jail. After months of harsh treatment and meager rations, Stockton repudiated his signature on the Declaration of Independence and swore his allegiance to King George III. A broken man when he regained his freedom, he took a new oath of loyalty to the state of New Jersey in December 1777.

6. There was a 44-year age difference between the youngest and oldest signers.

The oldest signer was Benjamin Franklin, 70 years old when he scrawled his name on the parchment. The youngest was Edward Rutledge, a lawyer from South Carolina who was only 26 at the time. Rutledge narrowly beat out fellow South Carolinian Thomas Lynch Jr., just four months his senior, for the title.

7. Two additional copies of the Declaration of Independence have been found in the last 25 years.

In 1989, a Philadelphia man found an original Dunlap Broadside hidden in the back of a picture frame he bought at a flea market for $4. One of the few surviving copies from the official first printing of the Declaration, it was in excellent condition and sold for $8.1 million in 2000. A 26th known Dunlap broadside emerged at the British National Archives in 2009, hidden for centuries in a box of papers captured from American colonists during the Revolutionary War. One of three Dunlap broadsides at the National Archives, the copy remains there to this day.

8. The Declaration of Independence spent World War II in Fort Knox.

On December 23, 1941, just over two weeks after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, the signed Declaration, together with the Constitution, was removed from public display and prepared for evacuation out of Washington, D.C. Under the supervision of armed guards, the founding document was packed in a specially designed container, latched with padlocks, sealed with lead and placed in a larger box. All told, 150 pounds of protective gear surrounded the parchment. On December 26 and 27, accompanied by Secret Service agents, it traveled by train to Louisville, Kentucky, where a cavalry troop of the 13th Armored Division escorted it to Fort Knox. The Declaration was returned to Washington, D.C., in 1944.

9. There is something written on the back of the Declaration of Independence.

In the movie National Treasure, Nicholas Cage's character claims that the back of the Declaration contains a treasure map with encrypted instructions from the founding fathers, written in invisible ink. Unfortunately, this is not the case. There is, however, a simpler message, written upside-down across the bottom of the signed document: "Original Declaration of Independence dated 4th July 1776." No one knows who exactly wrote this or when, but during the Revolutionary War years the parchment was frequently rolled up for transport. It's thought that the text was added as a label.

REMEMBERING GETTYSBURG

Statue of General Warren at the top of Little Round Top, Battle of Gettysburg.

JULY, 1-5 1863

July 1. Maj. Gen. Henry Heth marches toward Gettysburg to seize supplies. In an unplanned engagement, they confront Union cavalry. Brig. Gen. John Buford slows the Confederate advance until the infantry of the Union I and XI Corps under Maj. Gen. John F. Reynolds arrives. Reynolds is killed in action. Soon Confederate reinforcements under generals A.P. Hill and Richard Ewell reach the scene. By late afternoon, the wool-clad troops are battling ferociously in the sweltering heat. Thirty thousand Confederates overwhelm 20,000 Federals, who fall back through Gettysburg and fortify Cemetery Hill south of town.

July 2. On the second day of battle, the Union defends a fishhook-shaped range of hills and ridges south of Gettysburg. The Confederates wrap around the Union position in a longer line. That afternoon Lee launches a heavy assault commanded by Lieut. Gen. James Longstreet on the Union left flank. Fierce fighting rages at Devil's Den, Little Round Top, the Wheatfield, the Peach Orchard, and Cemetery Ridge as Longstreet's men close in on the Union position. Using their shorter interior lines, Union II Corps commander Maj. Gen. Winfield S. Hancock and others move reinforcements quickly to blunt Confederate advances. On the Federal right, Confederate demonstrations escalate into full-scale assaults on East Cemetery Hill and Culp's Hill. Although the Confederates gain ground on both ends of their line, the Union defenders hold strong positions as darkness falls.

July 3. Believing his enemy to be weakened, Lee seeks to capitalize on the previous day's gains with renewed attacks on the Union line. Heavy fighting resumes on Culp's Hill as Union troops attempt to recapture ground lost the previous day. Cavalry battles flare to the east and south, but the main event is a dramatic infantry assault by 12,500 Confederates commanded by Longstreet against the center of the Union position on Cemetery Ridge. Though undermanned, the Virginia infantry division of Brig. Gen. George E. Pickett constitutes about half of the attacking force. Pickett, ordered by Lee to advance his division toward the enemy through a mile of unprotected farmland, replies, "General, I have no division," but the order stands. During Pickett's Charge, as it is famously known, only one Confederate brigade temporarily reaches the top of the ridge—afterwards referred to as the High Watermark of the Confederacy. This daring strategy ultimately proves a disastrous sacrifice for the Confederates, with casualties approaching 60 percent. Repulsed by close-range Union rifle and artillery fire, the Confederates retreat. Lee withdraws his army from Gettysburg late on the rainy afternoon of July 4 and trudges back to Virginia with severely reduced ranks of wasted and battle-scarred men. As many as 51,000 soldiers from both armies are killed, wounded, captured or missing in the three-day battle. The carnage is overwhelming, but the Union victory buoys Lincoln's hopes of ending the war. With Lee running South, Lincoln expects that Meade will intercept the Confederate troops and force their surrender. Meade has no such plan. Even as Lee's escape is hampered by flooding on the Potomac, Meade does not pursue them. When Lincoln learns of this missed opportunity on July 12, he laments, "We had only to stretch forth our hands & they were ours." Months later, in November 1863, a portion of the Gettysburg battlefield becomes a final resting place for the Union dead. President Lincoln uses the dedication ceremony at the Gettysburg's Soldiers' National Cemetery to honor the fallen and reassert the purpose of the war in his historic Gettysburg Address:

"Four score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth, upon this continent, a new nation, conceived in Liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal. Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation, so conceived, and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met here on a great battle field of that war. We are now have come to dedicate a portion of it as the a final resting place of for those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. But in a larger sense we can not dedicate—we can not consecrate—we can not hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember, what we say here, but can never forget what they did here. It is for us, the living, rather to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they have, thus far, so nobly carried on. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us—that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to the that cause for which they here gave gave the last full measure of devotion—that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain; that this nation shall have a new birth of freedom; and that this government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth."

Wisconsin born man awarded Medal of Honor for actions during the Battle of Gettysburg

There were over 64 men awarded the Medal of Honor for their actions during the Battle of Gettysburg. The last one, Lt. Alonzo H. Cushing was awarded the award by President Obama on November 6, 2014. Cushing was born in Delafield, Wisconsin but was raised in Fredonia, New York.

The President of the United States of America, authorized by Act of Congress, March 3rd, 1863, has awarded in the name of Congress the Medal of Honor to 1st Lt. Alonzo H. Cushing, United States Army.

Medal of Honor Citation reads; "... Confederate forces led by Gen. Robert E. Lee began cannonading 1st Lt. Cushing's position on Cemetery Ridge. Using field glasses, 1st Lt. Cushing directed fire for his own artillery battery. He refused to leave the battlefield after being struck in the shoulder by a shell fragment. As he continued to direct fire, he was struck again -- this time suffering grievous damage to his abdomen.

Still refusing to abandon his command, he boldly stood tall in the face of Maj. Gen. George E. Pickett's charge and continued to direct devastating fire into oncoming forces. As the Confederate forces closed in, 1st Lt. Cushing was struck in the mouth by an enemy bullet and fell dead beside his gun.

His gallant stand and fearless leadership inflicted severe casualties upon Confederate forces and opened wide gaps in their lines, directly impacting the Union force's ability to repel Pickett's charge. First Lt. Cushing's extraordinary heroism and selflessness above and beyond the call of duty at the cost of his own life are in keeping with the highest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself, Battery A, 4th U.S. Artillery, Army of the Potomac, and the United States Army."

Other interesting facts on the Battle of Gettysburg

1. The Battle of Gettysburg was fought in Gettysburg, Pennsylvania, because the town was easily accessible. Ten different roads led in and out of the small town.
2. More generals were killed at Gettysburg than in any other battle of the Civil war. By the end of the day on July 3, nine of the 120 generals present were dead.
3. It is believed that Lee suffered a heart attack the night prior to the battle. Some believe this caused the Confederate loss as it may have impaired Lee's judgement, specifically his ordering of Pickett's charge.
4. Prior to the battle, President Lincoln gave Davis permission to send a negotiator across the Union line to discuss prisoner exchanges as well as more expansive peace terms. However, after his victory, Lincoln retracted his permission upon realizing he had the upper hand.
5. Lee wanted to fight a battle on Northern territory because he thought that it would have a higher chance of leading to a peace treaty. He also knew that if he did not win the Battle of Gettysburg, he would likely not win the war. Lee expected that this battle would be an easy win for two reasons: President Lincoln had just appointed General Meade to command the Army of the Potomac, and Lee's spirits were high after his victory at Chancellorsville just two months prior.
6. Though Meade was victorious, President Lincoln was angry that he did not attack Lee as he and his troops retreated across the Potomac River back into Virginia. Lincoln believed that if Meade would have chased the Confederate troops, he could have demolished them and ended the war.
7. After his loss at Gettysburg, Lee sent a letter of resignation to Confederate President Jefferson Davis. However, Davis refused the request because he believed that Lee was most qualified to lead the Southern army.
8. Many historians consider this battle to be "the high water mark of the rebellion," as the Confederacy's momentum peaked right before this battle, and they were never able to push into Northern territory again with a large army.
9. Confederate President Jefferson Davis dubbed Gettysburg the "most eventful struggle of the war" because it raised Union morale. Prior to the battle, public support for the War in the Union was lagging, but the timing of the Northern victory – just before the Fourth of July – peaked Union spirits.
10. The Battle of Gettysburg utterly destroyed the town of Gettysburg. Prior to the battle, it was quite prosperous, but afterwards it was never able to recover due to the focus on preserving the battlefield. In addition, after the battle, the corpses in the town outnumbered the residents four to one.
11. One of the heroes at Gettysburg was Union General George Custer, the same general who was killed by the Sioux during the Battle of Little Big Horn. At Gettysburg, Custer defeated a troop of Confederate soldiers who had been charged with destroying the Union's supplies.
12. Though the town of Gettysburg itself was under attack and all were in danger, only one civilian was killed – a woman named Jennie Wade.
