Board receives revised $37.3M building plan

New Oconto Falls middle school proposal expected to go to voters Nov. 8

By WARREN BLUHM

Editor-in-chief

The Oconto Falls School Board got their first look Aug. 8 at a scaled-down referendum proposal whose centerpiece is building a new middle school.

Voters in April rejected a plan to borrow $49.9 million to replace the aging Washington Middle School and perform a variety of upgrades and repairs that were seen as necessary at the district's three other school buildings.

An expanded planning committee has submitted a $37.63 million question that focuses on the new school and demolition of Washington, which was mostly built in 1957 but has areas as old as a century and additions from the 1980s and 1990s.

As for Oconto Falls and Abrams elementary schools and Oconto Falls High School, the only upgrades that remain from April are construction of more secure building entrances and some needed roof repairs.

"Ultimately the most important thing is that we get a new middle school for our kids and our staff, and that our kids and our staff are safe," planning committee member Emily Trudell told the board. "None of the other stuff matters if we still have to send our kids into Washington and the rest of our buildings are not as safe as our current climate requires."

A community survey this summer indicated voters are willing to get behind a referendum "if the ask is reasonable," Trudell said. They also felt the board needed to communicate the needs better.

Most of all the community seems willing to support the new middle school, Trudell said.

"You'd be hard-pressed to find many people who have stepped one toe into Washington and still think we can get away with operating in that building," she said.

The committee carved more than $12 million off the proposal by eliminating items like an improved drop-off area for students at Oconto Falls Elementary School, a new cafeteria at Abrams Elementary School, and improvements to the agriculture and technical education areas at the high school.

"I want to make it clear to the board and to people listening that this total was based on facts — needs, function of each need, dollars behind each need — that this decision was not made without some major heartburn by a lot of us," Trudell said.

Kate Pytleski, one of two incoming seniors who joined the committee, said her own education is an example of why increased security is necessary in this day and age. She was a first-grade student at St. Anthony School when a disturbed individual set fire to the building, and she spent the rest of first grade and all of second grade learning in basements and portable classrooms.

The new school building opened when Pytleski was a third-grader.

"Returning to a new, beautiful building that was made exactly to our needs and our learning style made my education soar," she said. "I was eager to learn, and that is because I was in an approachable learning environment."

Washington Middle School, on the other hand, is not an "approachable" learning environment, Pytleski said.

"Students are not learning when tiles are melting in their classrooms because the boiler system is dangerous but on the other side of the building students wear mittens and hats because the heat doesn't get to all parts of the building," she said. "We need a school for the modern middle-school teenager. This school was designed for the 1950s high schooler."

Pytleski urged the board to get students involved in the new referendum. As an active student, she said her lack of knowledge about the previous measure was enlightening.

"I was surprised how uneducated I was on the subject, because it mainly affects me as a student," she said, suggesting that students be included in the discussions so they can tell their parents about the needs: "Communication starts at the kitchen table."

By state law the board must make a decision by Aug. 30 to get the question on the Nov. 8 ballot. Although some board members said they were ready to vote at the Aug. 8 meeting, board Vice President Bryan Baumier suggested giving the board time to review the proposal and get feedback from community members who were hearing about the plan for the first time that evening.

"I don't think there's any question the board is going to go," board president Clint Gardebrecht said, but agreed with taking some time for review and feedback.

The board plans to meet Aug. 22 to make a final decision.

Livestreamed board meetings to be saved

By WARREN BLUHM

Editor-in-chief

Livestreamed meetings of the Oconto Falls School Board will be saved from now on, beginning with the just-held session of Aug. 8.

Superintendent Dean Hess noted that although the meetings could be accessed while they were happening, no recording remained on the school district's YouTube channel.

Hess said he personally believes the best way to attend a meeting is in person but added he can see both sides.

"Watching something occur live is different than watching it on video," he said. "By the same token, if you're not going to come at all, watching the video is better than not coming at all."

Board member Ken Harter noted that communication with the public was an issue during the failed referendum in April.

"One of the criticisms of the school district has been a lack of transparency," Harter said. "This will take care of that in a positive way."

Bryan Baumier, vice president of the board, said having a recording of the meeting would be an improvement over the current practice.

"It's good for those with busy schedules," Baumier said. "They can go back and see what occurred in the meeting itself, so I can see it as a good tool to have for community members."

Hicks updates Gillett on fire department

By LUKE REIMER
Reporter

Gillett Fire Chief Curt Hicks provided the Gillett City Council with his monthly fire update during the council's meeting on Aug. 4.

"We have been busy," said Hicks, who spoke specifically about a barn fire in Gillett. "We had 50 firefighters plus on scene at that call. We went to unified command. Everything went immensely well. We were able to contain things. Between the departments that were there, we put on about 250,000 gallons of water."

Hicks said that putting out the barn fire took from 5:30 p.m. to 2 a.m.

"We were able to knock things down," said Hicks. "It went really well. It shows how the system works. We were able to get resources in from different departments close to us, which was nice."

In terms of training in the department, Hicks said that they are involved in driver operator safety with the Gillett EMS department.

"We are getting more and more involved with EMS as it goes," said Hicks. "Let's say that two gals respond to a call and they have to work on the person in the back then they need someone to drive the ambulance. We end up, a number of times doing that and that's fine. But, technically, you have to have this training to be certified to do that."

Hicks said that five people went on the first training session and that he plans to go to the second training session.

"We will be certified to assist and drive the ambulance," said Hicks. "We do driver's ops for fire every year. It is just expanding what we can do and how we can help our community."

Gresham woman faces 16 counts of identity theft

Straughter faces 6 years in prison, $10K fine for each count

By LUKE REIMER
Reporter

A 47-year-old Gresham woman is facing 16 counts of identity theft after law enforcement had charged her on Aug. 2.

Fala Straughter faces six years in prison and $10,000 in fines for each count if convicted.

Straughter was charged Aug. 2 in Shawano-Menominee County Circuit Court, where Judge William Kussel Jr. set a cash bond of $10,000 and a signature bond of $20,000. A status conference for Straughter was scheduled for Aug. 10.

According to the criminal complaint, on July 25, a Stockbridge-Munsee police officer was notified of a fraud complaint with enrollment in Bowler. Nathaniel Hammed had allegedly received an enrollment card after using their brother's information for tribal gas discounts. The brother was allegedly not aware that the enrollment card was obtained, using his information.

According to the tribal worker who filled out the application, Hammed's mother, Shellie Samuel who filled out the card, said that Straughter had possession of the enrollment card.

On July 25, a Stockbridge-Munsee officer met Straughter at her residence, where they stated that they were retrieving the enrollment card from her. She allegedly stated that she had to find it from her husband's stuff.

The officer allegedly left while Straughter searched for the card. When another officer returned to Straughter's residence later that day to retrieve the card, she did not answer the door, according to the complaint.

In a July 25 interview with Hammed, he allegedly said that "you'd have to talk to my attorney" in reference to a question about if they used their brother's identity to apply for the card.

In a July 26 interview with Samuel, she allegedly stated that on March 2, she went with Hammed to get an identification card, so he would not continue to use hers for a discount on gas. She stated that she allegedly thought that Hammed used his brother's information because he did not want his name out there, due to Hammed's previous charge in Florida. When asked who used the card once it was given to Hammed, Samuel allegedly said that she did not believe that Hammed was using it, but Straughter was using it.

In jail audio from July 27, it was stated that Hammed allegedly said that they needed the card for identification and not for the tribal discount.

Veterans should never become political pawns

Congress is known for its partisan bickering and its inability to get anything done. The legislative branch of our country, in the last couple of decades, is known for one side of the chamber pointing at the other side and screaming, "Demon! Demon!" Which side of the chamber does so varies, depending on the issue.

That's why it was a pleasant surprise recently to wake up and see that the U.S. Senate passed the Honoring our Pact Act by an 86-11 vote. The bill allows for health care resources and benefits for those veterans who, during the service, were exposed to burn pits and exposed to toxic chemicals and conditions. It's estimated that about 3.5 million veterans are suffering ill effects from the burn pits, including cancer, mental defects and more but the Department of Veterans Affairs was not addressing their illnesses until this act came about.

Anytime you can pass a bill that isn't restricted to party lines, either Democrat or Republican, is a rarity. Anytime that bill is a benefit to a huge segment of the population, the odds are akin to coming across a unicorn in Times Square being led via a golden bridle by the tooth fairy.

This is not one of those times. It should have been, considering the bill addressed the men and women who step up and become part of our armed services, who protect us from the countries who see the good things in America and consider them abomination. Many people proudly enroll in our military, whether by land, sea or air, and vow to keep the rest of us safe — often doing so with little acknowledgement and low pay but with a sense of pride that they're part of something bigger than themselves.

While many finish their service in as good a shape as when they started, others are not so fortunate. Aside from those who die in service to our country, there are many who come back with lost limbs, blind, paraplegic, etc., and then it should be this country's responsibility to take care of them. Period.

However, we're a little behind the times when it comes to caring for our veterans, and it's important that, when we find out something is not being done to heal and comfort our men and women who wore the military uniform, steps are taken to correct that mistake. The Honoring our Pact Act does this, and it should have been a slam dunk to get this through all the bureaucratic red tape. It was for the House of Representatives.

It wasn't for the Senate. While it ultimately did the right thing for our veterans in the end, the bill turned into another political football, with our veterans being treated as pawns by bureaucrats, most of whom never spent a day serving on a military base or fighting for their lives in a war zone.

The recent vote to pass the bill was preceded by political posturing from 25 Republicans a week earlier, who had voted to support the measure in June but blocked its passage at the end of July. That brought out protesting veterans, celebrities and others who considered this a slap in the face to veterans.

Take this statement from Jon Stewart, former talk show host turned veterans activist, about the delay in approving the Pact Act: "Eventually is not OK. Tell someone with cancer that's been fighting this for years, that eventually they'll get the help that they need. That is not an acceptable answer. It is despicable to continue to use Americans, men and women who are fighting for this country, as a political cause for anger you have about separate issues."

The Republicans in question were dicker over the fact that Democrats announced they had reached a deal on a major tax and climate bill, according to The Guardian, putting them through the budget reconciliation process that allows the measure to bypass Republicans. A different bill caused those 25 Republicans to act like schoolyard bullies, according to Stars and Stripes, with Sen. Ted Cruz of Texas fist bump-ing Sen. Steve Daines of Montana after he cast a no vote.

Fist bumping over being cruel to our veterans — how do these politicians sleep at night? Doing this sort of thing as many veterans are lying in hospital beds because of their exposure to these burn pits and others are at home worrying about how the medical bills will get paid instead of focusing on healing is reprehensible.

Don't get me wrong. The Democrats don't come off as angels in this saga due to the tax and climate bill shenanigans. However, Republicans could have figured out a method of political comeuppance that didn't hurt our veterans, the folks who fought for their freedom to be stupid, petty and cruel.

In the end, the veterans are getting the help they need, and for that, we should be thankful. Under the normal rules of engagement in Washington, the veterans could have just as easily still been waiting for deliverance from their agony as ignorant politicians continued their despicable gamesmanship indefinitely, so the fact that the solution has been reached is a miracle.

Still, the fact that it took a week of Congress being Congress to reach this point should not be ignored. Our veterans have suffered long enough, and they deserve much better gratitude than the politicians are exhibiting.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Teachers make difference; what do you make?

To the editor:

The dinner guests were sitting around the table discussing life. One man, a CEO, decided to explain the problem with education. He argued: "What's a kid going to learn from someone who decided his best option was to become a teacher?"

He reminded the other dinner guests what they say about teachers: "Those who can, do. Those who can't, teach."

To stress his point, he said to another guest: "You're a teacher, Bonnie. What do you make?"

Bonnie replied: "You want to know what I make? Well, I make kids work harder than they ever thought they could. I make a C-plus student feel like the Congressional Medal of Honor winner. I make kids sit through 40 minutes of class time when their parents can't make them sit for five minutes without an iPad, game cube or movie rental.

"You want to know what I make?

I make kids wonder. I make them question. I make them criticize. I make them apologize and mean it. I make them have respect and take responsibility for their actions. I teach them to write, and then I make them write. I make them read, read, read. I make them show all their work in math. I make my students from other countries learn everything they need to know in English while preserving their unique cultural identity.

"I make them my classroom a place where all my students feel safe. I make my students stand to say the Pledge of Allegiance to the flag, because we live in the United States of America. Finally, I make them understand that, if they use the gifts they were given, work hard and follow their hearts, they can succeed in life.

"You want to know what I make? I make a difference. What do you make?"

Those who can teach, teach. Those who can't, engage in some less significant profession.

Herbert Grover, Gresham

Centennial hymn sing planned in Lena

The Village of Lena Centennial Committee and Lena Seventh-Day Adventist Church are teaming up to sponsor an old-fashioned community hymn sing at 3 p.m. Aug. 13, on the Lena Library green area.

Such hymn sings were common occurrences in years gone by and are still enjoyed by many. The public is invited, including those from surrounding communities. Visitors should bring their own lawn chairs and join in the singing of historic hymns of the Christian faith.

The church will provide song sheets and bottled water.

Meanwhile, the committee is seeking entries with a "Centennial Spirit" for the Sept. 13 DairyFest parade in the village. Antique and classic cars, trucks and tractors are welcome, in addition to floats or other units which display an historic or nostalgic element.

DairyFest is an annual late-summer tradition, sponsored and organized by Lena Lions Club. Contact Lena Lion Steve Carlin at 920-373-4092 for parade registration information.

The festival weekend marks the official close of the centennial celebration that began last Dec. 6. Featured on DairyFest Saturday will be a free pancake breakfast from 8-10 a.m. sponsored by Lena Seventh-Day Adventist Church, historic parade entries, open hours at the Lena Historical Museum and a centennial display tent on the St. Anne's picnic grounds.

"Celebrate 100!" will close Sept. 14, with a "Blessing of the Village" at the Lena Library green area at noon, acknowledging God's blessing of the village. All centennial activities have been coordinated by a volunteer committee and have been supported by many businesses and individuals of the Lena community.

Jordan Love shows development at Family Night

QB highlights night with 54-yard TD pass

By LUKE REIMER
Reporter

Green Bay Packers quarterback Jordan Love talked about his development, as well as how Family Night can prepare the team for preseason games after their biggest practice of the year was held Aug. 5 at Lambeau Field.

Love, who is entering his third year in the NFL, has only appeared in six games over the past two years in supporting Aaron Rodgers in back-to-back MVP seasons.

“Jordan has done a nice job,” said Green Bay Packers head coach Matt LaFleur. “It has been promising — he has been doing a good job, and I think he did it again tonight. Jordan has shown a lot of growth in my eyes.”

One of the biggest highlights of Family Night came when Love connected with rookie wide receiver Samori Toure for a 54-yard touchdown down the middle of the field.

“That was one of those plays where it should be a big play if everything works out,” said Toure. “We had cover 4, which put me one-on-one with the defensive back, and I just used my speed, made a good break and Jordan made a great throw.”

Love walked through the play call of the touchdown pass, as well as what he saw when completing the pass.

“We had a deep post on the back side, and we had the coverage where the safety was cheating the three receiver side,” said Love. “It was just one of those things where I let the ball go. I think that the defensive back was guessing it was going to be a shorter route, and he cut it.”

Due to Family Night being just a practice, pass rushers did not tackle or hit Love when he threw the strike to Toure. He used this throw as a developmental stepping stone from last year.

“Going back to the Lions game last year, I had a throw with a guy in my face that I missed,” said Love. “It could have been a big play. That is something that I looked at in the offseason to get better. I have to stand in the pocket, take hits and still be able to make those throws. There is still growing room in those passes, though.”

He acknowledged that such a throw would probably be tougher with real opponents.

“If that pass was in a live game, it may have been different,” added Love. “I would definitely be taking a shot right there. But as long as I can get it out there and make some type of throw, then they will be able to make plays on it.”

Love went on to talk about what happens as a quarterback when the pocket collapses.

“When you have pressure, it is just about making a good decision,” said Love. “Obviously you have to be as accurate as you can. Whether I am taking those shots downfield or throwing a check down, I am trying to focus on that throw to make it as accurate as possible.”

Much like LaFleur and Toure, Juwann Winfree shared positive thoughts on Love's NFL progression.

“I have really been impressed by Jordan's poise out there; he looks like that he has been there before,” said Winfree, a wide receiver. “This is his third year, and the growth has been tremendous. I am excited to see the player that he is becoming, and it should be a good future.”

Love showed his excitement for being able to play against other teams, as opposed to going against the Packers' defense day after day.

“You are always looking forward to that,” said Love. “You get in these situations in practice, where everyone is telling you that that play would have been a sack, but in a live game they might not have gotten me. So it is just exciting to getting back to live.”

Finally, Love shared his excitement about playing under the lights at his second Family Night. During his rookie year, the 2020 Family Night was canceled amid the pandemic.

“My first year being the COVID year, that was tough,” said Love. “Being able to see this and to see the atmosphere at Lambeau is awesome. Driving in, I am thinking that this is a just practice, but the place is sold out. There are not too many places like this.”

Having a practice in front of a home crowd can only boost the team's preseason preparation, Love said.

“I think that a practice like this in front of fans is a different vibe,” said Love. “There is a little more energy, juice and crowd noise. It is nice to see what a game is really like out there.”

HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL

Rieck replaces Holsey as Witt-Birn coach

Team coming off deep postseason run

By MORGAN RODE
Sports Editor

The Wittenberg-Birnamwood High School football team will have a new head coach this season after one of its best showings in school history.

Bernard Holsey was the head coach for the Chargers last season when the team finished just one win short of a state appearance. Jason Rieck, the team's former offensive coordinator, was tabbed the team's new coach for the upcoming season after Holsey resigned to take the defense line coaching spot with the Arkansas Attack of Major League Football (MLFB).

"He is a highly-committed coach," said Witt-Birn athletic director Chris Nier of Rieck. "He has been an assistant football coach since 2017 under coach Holsey and was strongly recommended by Bernard at his time of resignation."

"Jason is also the head baseball coach and has taken it upon himself to lead our strength, speed and agility program in the summer," Nier continued. "He is an active official in basketball, line judge in volleyball and often works the clock for JV and varsity basketball games. He basically will do anything needed in the athletic department."

Along with his experience as an assistant for the Chargers, Rieck also coached in Stevens Point. He was an assistant varsity coach for Stevens Point Area Senior High, ran the football program for grades 7-9 and was the coach for a ninth grade team.

Rieck took over as Witt-Birn's baseball coach this past spring and has coached the Legion team a couple of summers, including this year when the team qualified for state. He still plans to coach the baseball team in the spring but could possibly pass the Legion coaching duties off to someone else in the future if the right candidate were to emerge.

He's excited to try and continue the football success that Holsey and the Chargers have recently achieved.

"The program is in a great place right now," said Rieck. "We did lose some seniors but also had a lot of younger players get experience last year that will pay off this year."

Jason Rieck, third from left, addresses the football team during a Division 5 state semifinal game against Aquinas on Nov. 12 in Wisconsin Rapids. Rieck has taken over as the Chargers' head coach.

TINA BACON

They saw what needs to be done and the work it takes to get that far in playoffs. Everyone is excited for this season, and I hope to continue the progress the program has made the last couple years."

Even though the team will have some turnover after the loss of some impact seniors, Rieck doesn't plan to make many drastic changes to how things are run; he's anticipating a smooth transition to his role as head coach.

Rieck said that he wants his teams to be built on "teamwork, hard work, great effort, pride in our athletic program and school and themselves."

Under Holsey, Witt-Birn made it to the postseason four times.

Witt-Birn had made the playoffs 17 times in its history before Holsey took over, but the current team was also struggling to win more than a game or two a year. It didn't take Holsey long to turn the team into a playoff contender again, with last year serving as the highlight of his run as the head coach.

Holsey called the 2021 season "an extremely special thing to me," as he was able to deliver on a promise he made when he took over to help the team return to consistent winning seasons.

Bernard Holsey takes the field prior to the football team's Division 5 state semifinal game against Aquinas on Nov. 12 in Wisconsin Rapids. Holsey resigned as the team's head coach after the 2021 season.

team bounced back by winning a defensive battle against Stratford and then hit its groove by winning the rest of its regular season games, followed by three playoff games.

Holsey added that the most recent team was willing to do whatever it took to come away with wins, while always being confident in the plans laid out for them and that they could beat anybody they faced.

Unfortunately for Holsey, there was a financial issue that halted the MLFB. Even though the coaching opportunity didn't go exactly as he'd hoped, Holsey had no regrets.

Holsey, who played the defensive line professionally for four NFL teams, said he took the position to challenge himself. He knew he could coach high school athletes, and he wanted to see if he could also help out players with college or even some professional experience.

He said he didn't have to change any aspects of the way he coached, and reports from the team's training camp were that he was turning the position group into a tenacious one.

While his immediate future isn't exactly known, Holsey is hoping to get back into coaching in some fashion.

Red River Riders gets help from benevolent groups in Shawano County, seeks volunteers

The Red River Riders recently held an open house at its facility on Cherry Road in the Town of Richmond that highlighted not only its impressive facilities and riding demonstrations by students, but also the many volunteers who make it a unique therapeutic horseback riding venue.

Open house attendees were treated to demonstrations by volunteers assisting students through the paces of a typical class.

"We work with them on exercise. We play games. We try a little trotting," said Chris Baldwin, executive director. "Classes are an hour long, and incorporate mounting the horses, doing some walking and limbering up."

Baldwin founded the program in 1985 after networking with similar organizations in Wisconsin.

"This is only our second open house," Baldwin said. "We had one in 2019, but with COVID, this is our first chance to do it again."

"We've been lucky to have great volunteers. We've had to cut back (on classes) because there are not enough volunteers. If we had more volunteers, we could expand to at least three days a week. Right now, we have four riders per class and have requests from more potential participants."

Explaining the requirements for volunteers, Baldwin said that most volunteers come without horse experience.

"The horses go through our rigorous screening," she said. "They are very calm and quiet, easy to manage, enjoy people and have a sixth sense about the people that are around. It's a good place for someone to learn about horses for themselves, but also to help other people."

Linda Grignon started as a volunteer about four years ago. She volunteers once a week, and one of things she enjoys is "getting out and smelling horses."

"I have a lot of friends who do therapeutic horse activities," Grignon said. "When I retired, I knew that I wanted to give that a shot, and I found Red River Riders. I called, and they were having a volunteer meeting that night, so I came over."

Kara Muthig is the mother of Gavin, 20, and Grant, 17, who are both students with Red River Riders.

Sherry Blohm stands ready with Zephyr, a horse used in one of the open house demonstrations for Red River Riders on July 30 at its facility outside of Red River. Blohm side-walks the horses during classes while the students are riding, as a way to keep the horses focused and the riders safe. "This year is my first year," she said. "I've known about Red River for quite a few years. I like the program here, and they do a good thing for a lot of kids."

LYNN ZAFFRANN

"Gavin has been doing this since he was about 7," Muthig said. "He loves it and looks forward to it. It's one of the most exciting parts of his week. My younger son, Grant, definitely likes the movement of the horses. He gets very relaxed when he's here. Both of my boys have autism. Grant used to need more side-walkers. Now he's become more independent with just one. You can just tell he's comfortable up there."

Being able to witness the students' improvements is mentioned frequently by the volunteers at Red River Riders.

Carrie Barribeau has volunteered on and off since the start of Red River Riders, being at the Tuesday and Wednesday night classes and serving on the board for the program.

"Watching the students' progress — some start out pretty timid, then watching them gain confidence learning they can trust the horse and how it helps them physically," Barribeau said. "When they start out, there might be some stiffness, for example, depending on what their challenges may be. Then, after they ride, they are looser. They can move, and there's their interactions with what I call our equine therapists. Their interaction with the horses is what's

Debbie Towler has volunteered for about four years, starting out as a way to get involved in the community.

"I had a horse many years ago, and this was the best of both worlds for me," Towler said. "I usually lead a horse and occasionally side-walk. The horses are very well commanded verbally. I come out once a week and do two sessions. For me, the greatest pleasure is watching the development of a particular rider from one season to the next, or to the next year."

The only paid employee is Jennifer Keller, herd manager and head instructor, who started volunteering as a teenager. She went for certifications for being an instructor.

"It's very fulfilling work; it's fun. The riders come and get better," said Keller.

Baldwin said some students may only come for one six-week session, while others come for all three sessions. Even year to year, she and the other helpers see improvements.

"Balance, muscle strength, core strength, interactions between riders and volunteers, sitting up straight, learning to follow directions and think a problem through, there are so many aspects of it that are aiding and helping riders, and we make as many adaptations as we need in order for us to help each person get what they particularly need," Baldwin said.

Bowhunters tune gear, shoot practice arrows

A little book called “Zen Bow, Zen Arrow” by John Stevens tells the story of Japanese master archer Awa Kenzo, arguably the greatest bow shot in his enlightenment.

“With each shot, see your nature,” Kenzo taught his many disciples. “Shoot with your character. To see your true nature in each shot is the Great Way of Peace. That is all you need.”

Kenzo often used unorthodox techniques and advice to help his students think beyond accurate shots, but for most of us, the goal is striking the center of the target or taking down a deer this fall.

Although I’m bucking the trend of technology this season by moving away from ultra-compact, high-speed compound bows and arrow-throwing machines called crossbows, the need for practice before the Sept. 17 archery-deer opener is a universal one.

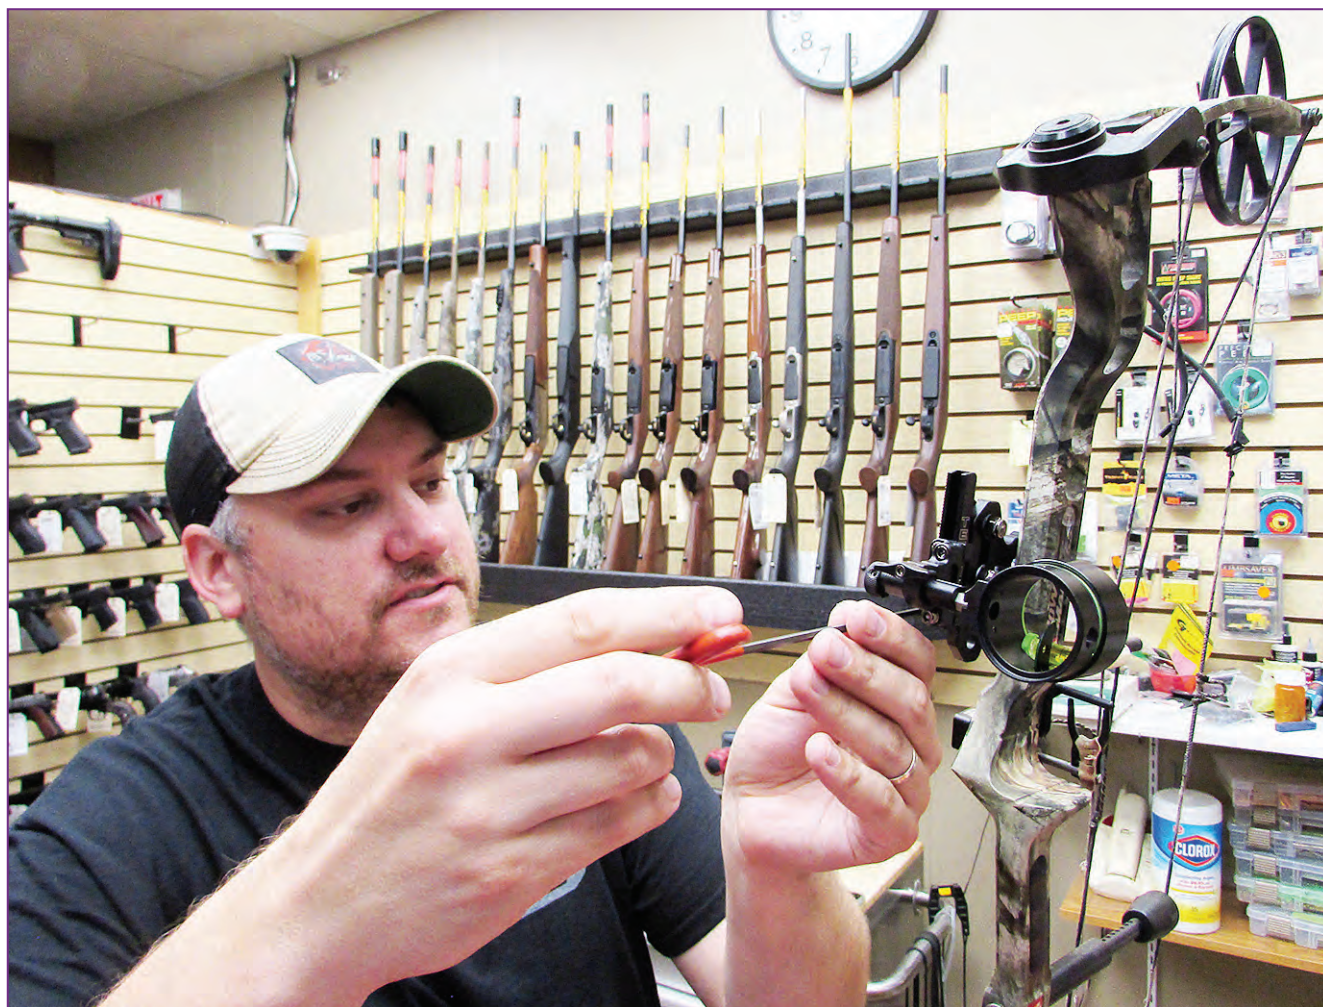

I checked in last week with one of our local experts, Justin Steinke, general manager at Butch’s Archery in rural Embarrass. He was just wrapping up a collection of about 40 customer bows and crossbows that needed new strings, cables, sights or other professional fixes.

His sparkling-clean indoor archery range was quiet, except for employee Brock Smejkal, who needed to fire a customer’s Ravin crossbow in order to release the trigger box mechanism from the cocking belt so that it could be worked on.

To say that today’s compound bows and crossbows are complex is like saying Kim Kardashian has too much body Bondo. Some of these devices cost $1,000 (compounds) to $4,000 (high-end crossbows) and can fling arrows at 400 to 500 feet per second. Compare that to a traditional longbow or recurve that shoots at 160 to 200 fps. Strings on the latter can be replaced in the field in seconds, without a mechanical bow press.

Steinke is surprised that more bowhunters don’t use his air-conditioned, bug-free range in the summer. Many outdoor 3-D archery shoots country during the early 1900s. Kenzo used the bow to not only supply his family food and provide protection, but also to teach a martial arts form and even as a device leading to spirituality and Justin Steinke, general manager at Butch’s Archery in rural Embarrass, installs a new sight on a customer’s compound bow in preparation for the Sept. 17 archery deer season opener. The demand for pro-shop bow and crossbow work is expected to increase at Butch’s and other area archery shops in coming weeks.

are continuing this month at clubs in Shawano, Birnamwood and Clintonville (check their Facebook pages for details) to give bowhunters practice on foam game animals in a wooded setting to simulate actual bowhunting conditions (including bugs and heat).

As always, hunters often procrastinate when it comes to getting their weapons either fixed or equipped with new sights, arrow rests and other improvements.

“The crossbow shooters tend to wait till the last minute,” Steinke said. “Everyone needs to remember that Wisconsin isn’t the only state with an archery season, and western states start earlier.” The nationwide demand for bow and crossbow parts will be filled first in western states, meaning it’s typically a two-week minimum wait for parts here in Wisconsin.

Butch’s is a stocking dealer and repair center for most popular brands, including Bear, Mission, Diamond, Elite, Mathews, PSE, Bow Tech, Hoyt and Prime for bows and Excalibur, Wicked Ridge, Ten Point, Mission, Ravin and Centerpoint for crossbows.

If you buy the new sights, arrow rests and other goodies there, installation is normally free, but if you order online, expect to pay for installation.

Depending on how much you shoot your bow or crossbow, you should expect to replace your strings and cables every three to four years on a bow and about every three years on a crossbow (Ravin specs call for string/cable replacement every two years, but Steinke recommends every 18 months).

Bowhunters can help their gear last longer and perform better with a few inexpensive maintenance items and some common sense.

Keep those bow and crossbow strings waxed with rub-on tubes of bowstring wax. (Butch’s even has their own branded version at the front counter.) When your string starts looking fuzzy, it’s time to wax.

Crossbows need to use rail lube such as Rail Snot or Scorpion Venom every 10 to 12 shots. Butch’s has their own version of that at the front counter, too.

If you hunt in the rain or otherwise get your gear wet, be sure to dry off your bows, crossbows and broadheads to avoid rust, which can damage bearings and bolts. Steinke likes to use an air compressor to blow the moisture away, even in those tiny nooks and crannies.

Be sure to check your sights and scopes to see they are dialed in for the various ranges you plan to shoot and also shoot a few broadheads, not just target points, especially if you shoot fixed-blade heads. Although expandable heads generally will fly similar to a target point, they don’t necessarily fly the same. I’ve not had good luck getting fixed-blade heads to fly straight with my recurve bows but am planning to try an expandable/fixed blade hybrid head I picked up at Butch’s.

Good luck can help us all this fall, but tuning your gear early and properly and practicing a few arrows a day till the opener will take most of the need for luck out of the successful hunting equation.

New barn quilt where farm 'used to be'

Doug and Barbie (Walla) Omernik have sponsored Shawano County's 391st barn quilt that is on a shed on a 6-acre plot they purchased in 2019 from Ken and Maddy Holmes at W3476 Hofa Park Road, Pulaski.

The quilt pattern they selected is called "Carolina Lily."

"Since purchasing our home, we have enjoyed meeting people who tell us stories about our property and what 'used to be' there," Barbie said. "This is the favorite opening line by those who have shared the history of our homestead."

The Omerniks have heard often how what is now their wildflower field and was used by neighbors' honeybees and a multitude of wild-life "used to be" a cow pasture. The old well that was used daily to pump water has been capped and turned into a shrine with a statue of the Virgin Mary and an angel. The old hand pump is still next to the old well.

The hill in the back was used to drive a tractor into the hay mow (and which now has a wishing well on top) is where the barn "used to be," according to the Omerniks. They said the round base of a silo that "used to be" there now displays an old combine and an old kitchen wood stove that serve as reminders of simpler times.

Other reminders of what "used to be" are spread among the wild vegetation along a walking trail — including an old plow, seeder and disk.

"We know there was a lumber mill on our property, too," Barbie said. "At one time, in the field, there was a large commercial fishing boat painted as Noah's Ark. It's no longer there, but is still fun to hear about, but maybe biblical times are too far back in history to talk about here.

"We are proud to be part of the Shawano County barn quilt trail with our beautiful quilt and are proud of our homestead history."

The barn quilt was painted by the Shawano County barn quilt committee and was put on display by LeRoy and Keenan Raddant, who work for Raddant Electric in Shawano.

Doug and Barbie (Walla) Omernik are shown with Shawano County's 391st barn quilt on their property at W3476 Hofa Park Road, Pulaski.

Trout Unlimited

At its July meeting, the Oconto River Chapter of Trout Unlimited awarded the Don Wagner Memorial College Scholarship to Kayla Reed, of Sobieski. The $500 scholarship is awarded to a student anticipating a career in a conservation-related field. Reed is majoring in aquatic science and fisheries and water resources at the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point. She is a graduate of Pulaski High School.

Applicants are judged by their academic records, community involvement and commitment to a conservation related field of endeavor. Reed has received several academic honors and has worked in the field of her major. These work positions were provided through universities and the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources. Chapter members congratulate Reed on her achievements and wish her the best of luck in her future conservation efforts.

Also reported at the July meeting was the successful stocking of approximately 1,150 rainbow and brown trout in the main Oconto River. A mix of keepable trout (10- to 14-inch) were placed into a stretch of the Oconto that has less than ideal cold-water reproduction potential. A DNR fish stocking permit is required. Stocking locations were at public access landings at Suring, Hintz, Underhill and Pulcifer. The Suring High School Trout in the Classroom students were able to witness the stocking in the river at the Suring bridge.

The stocking was made possible by the chapter's Go Fund Trout program with a startup of $1,000. The fund collected $2,900 in donations from members and friends of trout fishing. The chapter would like to thank those clubs and individuals that contributed to this project. This is the chapter's eighth consecutive year of stocking trout, and it has been one of the most popular and appreciated programs of all the many in which the Oconto River Chapter participates.

Play offers perspective on dementia

The play "In the Garden," which focuses on a family facing a crisis because of dementia, is part of a special resource fair and lunch scheduled for noon to 3 p.m. Aug. 15 at Oconto Falls Performing Arts Center, 210 N. Farm Road, Oconto Falls.

Another performance will take place at 5 p.m. the same day at Franklin Park, 235 S. Washington St., Shawano.

The live performance may be meaningful to the families of individuals living with dementia, professionals and the general public in our community, who would like to learn more about dementia, caregiving and the family dynamics involved when caregiving, said Mary Jo Ruleau, dementia care specialist with the Aging and Disability Resource Center of the Wolf River Region.

The play, produced by The Remember Project from Minnesota, features a family — a recently deceased mother who was caring for her husband with apparent dementia and three adult children with varying personalities. Ruleau said the story is intended to garner conversation about how to support families, caregivers and individuals needing care so that the caregiving experience becomes a positive experience for all involved.

"Under normal circumstances, families do not often think to plan for the future of caregiving needs," Ruleau said. "We do not sit down to Sunday dinner and discuss what happens if Mom or Dad develop dementia or other long-term illness which require support. We do not discuss who is going to carry out these caregiving duties or even how they will be paid for. Instead, we chat about the Packers or the Brewers and oftentimes, when someone needs care and support, there is no plan with adult children left wondering what to do next."

Doors open for a resource fair, lunch and registration at noon, with the play scheduled to begin at 1 p.m.

The free event is made possible by the funding from The Forget Me Not Fund, Shawano County Human Services, ADRC of the Wolf River Region and the Menominee Nation. A box lunch will be provided to all registered participants before the play, with a discussion, and questions answered following the performance.

Registration is available online through Event Brite at <https://wolfriver-garden2022.eventbrite.com> or by calling the ADRC of the Wolf River Region at 855-492-2372.

To register, send by Aug. 20 the registration fee of $30 to SAHS, P.O. Box 85, Suring, WI 54174. The cost of the dinner is $30 per person, tax and tip included.

For information, call Adelaide Boettcher at 920-842-2041 or Helen Heimerl at 920-842-2400.

Welcome to the Oconto County Youth Fair

Zippel Park bustles with activity and family fun all week

By WARREN BLUHM
Editor-in-chief

It's not the Oconto County Fair. It's purposely called the Oconto County Youth Fair — a celebration and culmination of all the work the young people in 4-H clubs and FFA put themselves through to get to this weekend every August.

And it's a time for young people (of all ages) to have fun, together with their families.

This year's Oconto County Youth Fair is scheduled for Aug. 18-21, with a number of events also set for the morning of Aug. 13 (See Page 6). As has been the case for decades, the fair is based at Zippel Park in downtown Gillett.

"It is one of a few places where a family can go to have fun together for almost no cost," said Wayne Boos, vice president of the Oconto County Youth Fair Board, ticking off the reasons to come and enjoy. "There are a variety of animals for family members to see up close. There is free music provided that family members can listen to and even dance to, if their feet so move them. There is a wide variety of exhibits to see: farm equipment; quilting and handmade items; and fruits and vegetables grown by local youths. There is a horse show, a tractor pull, a horse pull, a pony pull and a truck pull that can be viewed for a low cost."

Boos said the group is also trying to expand the carnival area and rides to cater to all age groups.

Area organizations also help cut the cost of pre-sales of carnival ride tickets, added fair treasurer Cliff Gerbers.

Dairy cows are always among the stars of the Oconto County Youth Fair.

FILE | NEW MEDIA

The opening ceremony at 6 p.m. Thursday, led by area veterans, and including Wisconsin Fairest of the Fairs Jackie Rosenbush, but the exhibition buildings will be bustling with activity all week. Non-animal exhibits are checked in and judged Monday and Tuesday, and the animal exhibition buildings start filling up on Wednesday — poultry, rabbits, sheep, goats, swine and beef, with the dairy cows moving in Thursday.

Even before the official opening, the swine and sheep shows are scheduled Thursday morning, and the Tri-State Amusements carnival rides and midway open for the week-end at 5 p.m. Thursday.

Longtime fair goers may notice a few improvements. Bingo is back after a successful trial at the 2021 fair; the schedule will be posted near the box office at the main exhibition building. Pony pulls have been added to the popular Saturday morning horse pull. Increased lighting has been added toward the parking lots to address a safety concern, and the handicapped parking area has been upgraded.

"Each year, we have a suggestion box and are always asking for feedback," Woods said. "This year we took a closer look at some of those suggestions and tried to make improvements."

This year's fair will highlight Oconto County's emergency services agencies, Boos said.

"The County's Emergency Communication Center will be available for fairgoers to tour and see firsthand how the center can aid in emergency and disaster situations," he said. "Area fire, EMS and rescue departments will be at the fair to explain and, in some circumstances, demonstrate the services they offer to their community."

We hope to have specialized rescue equipment at the fair."

The Oconto County Sheriff's Office and area police departments will provide K-9 demonstrations at various times throughout the fair, Boos said, and representatives of area law enforcement agencies plan to be on hand and available to talk about concerns in their communities and what is being done.

Fairgoers can expect close to a full recovery from the coronavirus pandemic, which led to the fair's cancellation in 2020.

"Last year in 2021, we were as close to normal as we could," Woods said. "We are currently planning to do the same again this year."

One aspect of the traditional fair that the board hopes to bring back next year is the Fairest of the Fair, the official ambassador of the Oconto County Youth Fair.

"Our Fairest of the Fair Committee has been working for the past two years to bring this amazing opportunity back for our county fair," Boos said. "By no lack of their work and efforts, they had no applicants for 2022."

In hopes of increasing interest, the program was changed to a Fairest/ambassador position with participation open to both female and male contestants. The ambassador can be anyone age 18 or over with no age limit.

"We're hoping these changes may increase some interest and help overcome the old fallacy that only young, pageant queen-like contestants need apply," Boos said.

People interested in serving as ambassador for the 2023 Oconto County Youth Fair can learn more at ocontocountyfair.org.

By NEW MEDIA STAFF

The Oconto County Youth Fair is so big, it can't be contained in a single weekend.

A few years back, some of the competitions were spun off into a separate exhibition that takes place on the Saturday before the main event. This year those shows are scheduled for the morning of Aug. 13 at Zippel Park in Gillett.

The small animal and caged bird show is set to begin at 8:30 a.m., the horse show at 9 a.m., the cat show at 9:30 a.m. and the dog show at 11 a.m.

Registration for the smaller animal shows begins 30 minutes before the program.
