Board gets update on referendum discussion

Operating referendum discussed as possibility for school district to prevent future school closures

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

The school closure has been taken off the table for closing next year's $2 million budget gap, but it might still be coming down the path eventually if the Shawano School District's student count continues to tumble.

The Shawano School Board held a work session March 31 for an update on what has been discussed in the district's stakeholder group regarding future needs in the schools. According to Sue Peterson, a consultant with La Crosse-based ISG, the four existing schools can house just over 3,000 students comfortably with a maximum capacity of 3,560. The current student count in Shawano's public schools is 2,278, and that number is expected to drop by 2,119 in 2026 and dip below 2,000 in under 10 years.

ISG is planning to craft a survey in April and then later send it out to the community to gauge what people are willing to pay for. There were already plans for a capital referendum to help pay for aging infrastructure and expand some facilities, including fine arts and athletic accommodations, but there is also talk of possibly asking for an operational referendum in lieu of closing one of the schools.

Currently, the district estimates it will need to take care of about $25.3 million in deferred maintenance in the next 10 years. Along with plans to upgrade athletic facilities and fine arts areas, as well as improve libraries and other projects, the cost for capital work swells to over $51 million.

Josh Swanson, district finance director, told the board that doing just the needed upgrades would result in keeping the property taxes even or dropping them, as the district is about to pay off all its debt for building Hillcrest Primary School in 2010 and all the work it put into upgrading Shawano Community Middle School in 2015.

"The variable piece is, what does the athletic side look like? What do the fine arts, what are the other building improvements and things we could add from the want list to get to a flat mill (tax) rate?" Swanson said.

There are plans to potentially ask voters in November for a capital referendum and an operational referendum, depending on what the survey results reveal. Peterson noted that the board can apply the brakes on plans at any time if it looks like there could be trouble on the horizon.

Superintendent Randi Anderson noted that the operating referendum would not keep taxes low, and it would only be a temporary solution to the district's budget woes. Over the last few years, the tax rate has stayed steady around $9.58 per $1,000 of equalized valuation, which means someone with a property valued at $100,000 pays $958 in school property taxes.

"If you go for an operating (referendum), you don't have that flexibility," Anderson said. "Operating is for five years, and then you'll have to go out again. Remember that the $2 million is about right-sizing the organization, based off of the student population that we currently have."

Board member Chuck Dallas recommended that the district avoid asking for the capital referendum if it was still planning on cutting programs or staff or closing one of the schools in the future. Dallas compared it to people losing their job, "but stopping by CoVantage to ask to build a half-a-million dollar house."

"The dynamic we have right now is awfully hard for people to understand," Dallas said. "When you're down $2 million, cutting teachers and talking about taking out a building, and then asking for a large capital referendum, we'd better sharpen our skills at communicating, because otherwise, there will be a lot of effort for nothing."

Board president Michael Sleeper acknowledged that the optics didn't look good currently, but the students that still are going to Shawano public schools still need the best education possible.

"We're looking at about 2,000 students by the end of this decade," Sleeper said. "That's still 2,000 students that deserve the very best education we can provide, so that's another side of the equation."

Board member Diane Hoffman told her colleague she is not a fan of asking for an operational referendum. Such referenda have been asked by Bonduel and Lena, and Gillett and Tigerton are asking permission to exceed their budget limits through an operational referendum in April.

"It has to be specific to an area, and they have to understand that that's what it's going to be every year," Hoffman said. "It won't affect other things because that money can't just move. It's staying in the avenue that you chose. We have to be very clear about it. You don't know what the next two years are going to bring, and it's not like we're doing this to put (funds) where you want."

Anderson noted that nothing has been set in stone as far as where to go on taking care of the schools.

"It's important to remember that we're looking at every option, and we want the board to see every option," Anderson said. "There has been no decision. I want to be clear that there has been no decision that has been made other than what is the best way to set the district up for the future."

ELECTION 2022

Menominee school referendum victorious

Newcomers win seats on county, school boards

By NEW MEDIA STAFF

The Menominee Indian School District saw a request for a $35 million referendum sail to victory on election night, and there will be some changes on the Shawano County Board of Supervisors, the Shawano School Board and other government entities after voters brought in some new blood.

The MISD referendum had 769 votes in favor, with 284 against between Menominee and Shawano counties, so officials will have the green light to proceed with building a new high school on 40 acres of land behind Save-a-Lot in Keshena. Work is still being done on the final design for the school, but once it's built, the district can move its middle school to the current high school building and make it for grades 5-8, giving Keshena Primary School a little breathing room.

The referendum was the first one the district had sought in decades and is expected to increase property taxes by $2.99 per $1,000 of equalized valuation for the next five years and then drop. Growth in its student population, combined with the landlocked status of the existing middle school in Neopit, prompted the move by the district.

In Shawano, Jeana Winslow will be the newest member of the Shawano School Board after getting the most votes, 1,457, in the April 5 election. She will be joining incumbents Mart Grams and Chris Gull on the board after they retained their seats with 1,102 and 1,030 votes, respectively.

Longtime board member Diane Hoffman found herself the odd person out with 803 votes, possibly as a result of recent controversy in the school district over sudden announcements that a $2 million budget gap in the 2022-23 school year would result in potentially closing a school, eliminating some staff positions or cutting some programs.

There was also a registered write-in candidate, Crystal Phalen, who entered the race after the official ballots were printed and brought in a strong showing with 481 votes.

On the county board, there will be several new members. James Przybylski will be representing District 11 after winning against Richard Ferfecki, who recently passed away. Przybylski had 140 votes in the race,

There will be a new Menominee Indian High School after voters in Menominee and Shawano counties approved a $35 million referendum posed by the Menominee Indian School District on April 5.

while Ferfecki had 67.

Incumbent Deb Noffke is out in District 14 after Jeremy Gretzinger narrowly beat her out with 85 votes, compared with 74 for Noffke.

David Heideman will be the newest board member for District 16 after getting 116 votes, while Dawn Bahr received 91 votes. The incumbent, John Ainsworth, decided not to run for reelection.

District 2 had no one on the ballot after incumbent Mark Bolin also decided not to run, but Mart Grams received 15 write-in votes and will be the city of Shawano's newest representative.

Other referenda and competitive races results from the April 5 election include the following:

- The Town of Morris asked for the town clerk and treasurer positions to be appointed by the town board. Voters voted 57 in favor, 23 against, on the clerk position and 58 in favor, 22 against, for the treasurer.

- The opposite result came out of similar questions by the Town of Washington. Voters voted 134 against, 87 in favor on the clerk question and 133 against, 88 in favor, on the treasurer question.

- The Town of Red Springs found its non-binding "We the People" referendum easily pass with 196 votes in favor and only 25 against. The question, similar to one asked by area municipalities in years past, asked to stop the spread of corporate person rights and with it, the influence of unlimited political contributions and spending.

- Dennis Bergbaken will hold onto his seat for the Bonduel School Board after getting 494 votes, compared to challenger Kimberly Strayer's 280 votes.

- There will be two new members on the Gresham School Board. Incumber Joe Ejnik received 275 votes, and he will be joined by Ethan Schmidt, who got 260 votes, and Jerritt Lyons, who got 238 votes. Incumbents Alpha Crea-peau and Doug Huck lost their bids with 212 and 169 votes, respectively.

Fisheries biologist Brent Ritter plants a PIT tag into a Great Lakes spotted musky fingerling.

Muskies have new home in Shawano Lake

Fish stocking goes high-tech with insertion of PIT tags

By GREG SEUBERT
Correspondent

An electronic device the size of a grain of rice is helping fisheries officials monitor recently stocked muskies in Shawano Lake.

Crews from the state Department of Natural Resources stocked 2,500 Great Lakes spotted musky fingerlings last fall. The fish were collected as eggs in May from the Fox River in De Pere, spent the next five months at the Wild Rose State Fish Hatchery and now have a new home in Shawano Lake.

"We've been stocking muskies into Shawano Lake for quite a while now," said Jason Breeggemann, a fisheries biologist based at the DNR's Shawano office. "Stocking is a way that we're able to sustain the population. Every other year, we stock about 2,500 of these large fingerling muskies in Shawano Lake."

Breeggemann was part of a team that headed to the hatchery in October to prepare the fish for stocking. Shawano Lake received 1,500 fish that averaged 11 inches in length Oct. 21 and 1,000 more the following day.

Ready for stocking

The process included installing tiny electronic devices called passive integrated transponders, or PIT tags.

"It's a small microchip tag," Breeggemann said. "We have a small, hollow needle and we embed it just under the skin of the fish. We scan them with a barcode scanner that activates that number. Every single fish that leaves the hatchery today will have a tag that has its own unique, identifiable number. Ten years from now, we can track that fish back to the exact date it was tagged, when it was stocked and things like that."

Each person working on the project had a job, including measuring fish, recording information and inserting PIT tags.

"We try to streamline it the best we can to minimize the stress on the fish," said Joe Gaber, the hatchery's fish culture biologist. "The shorter amount of time we keep them knocked out and handled, the better. Each person has their specific duty to do just to get those fish back in a tank."

Breeggemann said there's a good reason for stocking the fish in the fall.

"It's mostly to maximize their size, so they get to be as large as they can before we stock them," he said. "We don't typically keep them overwinter in the hatcheries. When the water temps cool off, they don't really grow anymore and we don't have anywhere to put them."

"They handle it really well with this cooler 50-degree water," Gaber said. "If we were to do this when it's 70 degrees out, they don't do quite as well. That's another reason for waiting until fall to handle them."

The fish were raised in a building at the hatchery before being transferred to ponds.

"They grow really fast, 11 inches in five months," Gaber said. "It's all temperature-based, so the warmer the temperature, the faster they grow."

"We collect them out of the ponds and use AQUI-S to anesthetize them a little bit," Breeggemann said. "We inject a PIT tag in them, measure them and we also give them a fin clip to note their stocking origin in case they lose their tag. We still know they are from a stocked fishery. We put them in a tank to recover and then they're going to go into a truck and up to Shawano."

"We're trying to manage for about 600 adults or so. It has some good growth potential. We've caught muskies up to 50 inches in our surveys. Habitat, size and forage all contribute toward making it a good fishery."

JASON BREEGEMANN, fisheries biologist based at the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resource's Shawano office

“It definitely fills in a gap for some of the issues that we have with some of the natural populations.”

JOE GABER, fish culture biologist at the Wild Rose State Fish Hatchery

The Great Lakes spotted strain is the native strain for the Lake Michigan basin, Breeggemann said.

“Shawano Lake is connected to the Wolf River, which drains down into the Winnebago System,” he said. “It’s part of the overall Great Lakes watershed. We are trying to stock the native genetic strain to the basin. That’s why we’re stocking the Great Lakes spotted fish: it’s the watershed that we’re in.”

Dark spots make Great Lakes spotted muskies look a little different than other muskies, which often have vertical stripes.

“They’re just a different genetic strain of musky,” Breeggemann said. “Muskies do have different coloring patterns. You’ll even see variations within a genetic strain.”

Quality fishery

Shawano Lake covers more than 6,200 acres and has a varied fishery that also includes northern pike, walleye, largemouth bass, smallmouth bass and panfish.

It also has a 40-inch minimum size for musky.

“It’s managed primarily as a trophy musky fishery, so we keep the density a little lower, about one fish per 10 acres of surface water,” Breeggemann said. “We’re trying to manage for about 600 adults or so. It has some good growth potential. We’ve caught muskies up to 50 inches in our surveys. Habitat, size and forage all contribute toward making it a good fishery. It’s a large lake with some nice musky habitat. It’s a popular musky fishery, so we want to provide fishing opportunities.”

Breeggemann said it’ll take several years for the fish to reach Shawano Lake’s 40-inch size limit.

“The growth rates can be highly variable,” he said. “It could be seven, eight years. It could be 10 years for some of the males.”

Fisheries biologists don’t know how many muskies leave Shawano Lake and enter the Wolf River through a narrow channel that connects the river to the lake.

“There are plenty of fish that stay in the lake to create a fishery,” Breeggemann said. “We don’t have exact data on how many of them go downstream.”

The PIT tags will help answer that question. The DNR’s Shawano team has used the tags to monitor flathead catfish in the Wolf River

Joe Gaber, fish culture biologist at the Wild Rose State Fish Hatchery, empties a net full of Great Lakes spotted muskies into a tub at the hatchery. Gaber was part of a crew that stocked 2,500 fingerlings into Shawano Lake last fall.

“We capture them 10 years later, so we can see how much they’ve grown,” Breeggemann said. “If we get enough information, we can try to estimate survival based on recaptures. We can get a lot of really good data off of them.”

“One of the things we can look at is see how many of the (Shawano Lake muskies) that we tag actually get captured downstream,” he said. “This is the first year that we’re tagging fish when they’re small. We don’t really have any data to really know how many of them move around.”

Besides being caught by anglers, the DNR also captures muskies during netting or electrofishing surveys.

“We scan them for these PIT tags,” Breeggemann said. “We do have adults that we’ve caught out there in previous surveys that are tagged. If they don’t have a tag in them, we’ll give them a tag out in the lake when we’re doing our surveys.”

A new home

Instead of releasing the muskies at a boat landing, the fish were taken out into Shawano Lake and released near their preferred habitat.

“It’ll take a little getting used to,” Gaber said. “They’ve never seen a weed before. They’re used to these rubber-lined ponds. One good thing about boat stocking is you can put them over that prime habitat and get them away from the shoreline and other predators.”

Breeggemann said the fish will learn to adapt in order to survive.

“They have to. Otherwise, they’ll get eaten,” he said. “A bigger musky or large pike could potentially eat them, but they seem to adapt quickly.”

“They tend to stick around for a while,” Gaber said. “Give them a week and they’ll find their own place to call home.”

State-operated hatcheries and stocking programs provide more opportunities for anglers, Breeggemann said. Gaber said.

“Without stocking, we wouldn’t have a musky fishery in Shawano Lake,” Breeggemann said. “There’s no known or very little musky reproduction out there, so we use hatcheries and stocking to provide a nice, quality musky fishery in a situation where it wouldn’t exist otherwise.”

“It definitely fills in a gap for some of the issues that we have with some of the natural populations,” Gaber said. “It fills a niche that needs to be filled to provide that opportunity for more fishermen and help re-establish some of these natural populations like our lake sturgeon program.”

Shawano plans new TIF for downtown area

Part of downtown plaza, Huckleberry Harbor projects included in TIF District 9

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

The city of Shawano is planning a new tax increment finance district for the downtown area to replace the one expiring later this year.

The Shawano Plan Commission voted March 30 to recommend approval of the boundaries for TIF District 9 to the Shawano Common Council, which would include properties along and near Main Street from the city's northern border to Oshkosh Street.

"Tax increment financing is our primary economic development tool that we utilize in the city," said Ed-die Sheppard, city administrator. "In order to do that, we need to establish these boundaries, and there are a number of tests they have to go through, a number of things we have to create to make sure we can spend those funds within the district."

Much of the proposed new TIF district is currently part of TIF District 4, which has been used to help rehabilitate businesses and make improvements. The expenditure period for TIF District 4 ends Sept. 30.

"We've been pretty strategic with creating this district," Sheppard said. "We've outlined some areas that have already been improved, so they're not included, but we've included primarily the downtown area in which we intend to make funding available for future development."

Included in TIF District 9 is $300,000 of the proposed $2.5 million plaza project planned south of Division Street, $200,000 for the new boat dock planned for Huckleberry Harbor and $600,000 for a revolving loan fund. In the future, the city plans to create development incentives totaling more than $2.7 million.

The district will be considered a rehabilitation and conservation district, according to John Cameron, a consultant with Ehlers Public Finance Advisors based in Waukesha. In order for the district to be established, at least 50% of the properties in the boundaries have to have the potential for rehabilitation, which Cameron said the city met the criteria.

When a TIF district is created, the taxes for the established property value go to their standard entities, which include Shawano County, Shawano School District and the technical college district, but the taxes for any increase in value from resulting development go to the TIF district, according to Cameron.

"We're estimating, over the district's 27-year life, approximately $15.1 million in new taxable value within the district," Cameron said.

The hard debt for the district could be paid off as early as 2035, according to Cameron.

TIF districts have been a benefit to the city as various projects have taken place. Sheppard noted that many of the downtown projects were made possible by TIF District 4, and the recent TIF District 7 was able to bring out Belmark, 200 apartments through S.C. Swiderski, and the relocation of Reinhart's, now known as Performance Food-service.

"In the downtown, a lot of our projects are smaller, storefront-type deals that we've been doing through the RDA (Redevelopment Authority) to help some business come in and reinvest a bunch of money to do a building that might have to be torn down," Sheppard said, noting that the Cornerstone Chiropractic project done a couple of years ago was an example. "Main Street needs to be touched up on the public side."

Mayor Bruce Milavitz said he supported the idea of a revolving loan fund being put in place to help new and existing businesses locate to Shawano.

"Who knows what's out there for people to expand or bring their businesses or build or whatnot," Milavitz said. "I think it's going to be an open palette here."

Board urged not to cut staff, programs

Community packs library to urge support of teachers, finding solution to loss of students

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

Parents, students and community members spent nearly an hour April 4 urging the Shawano School Board to listen to the people they serve, to find cuts somewhere other than teachers and support staff to close a $2 million budget gap, and to stop initiating new programs that are going to cost the district money until the budget is balanced.

Over 100 people packed the library at Shawano Community High School, and with each speaker delivering a different message, the applause emboldened people to speak out about what some consider to be an atmosphere of mistrust in the schools.

Megan Pyaskowit told the board that spending needed to be halted until there was a full account from the administration on how the district found itself in the red. By continuing to spend on new programs and Apple equipment, she said the board is sending the message that things are more important than people.

"I would point out that there have not been efforts to recover our open-enrolled students. Why not?" Pyaskowit said. "I am not willing to accept any downsizing, because that is what 'right-sizing' really is, unless a real assessment is made of our enrollment and an effort is made to reclaim our students."

Chris Marcks, who'd previously worked at the district office in human resources, noted that a lot of students are going to neighboring districts or the parochial schools, adding she opted to keep her son, who is in kindergarten, at Sacred Heart Catholic School after the teacher she'd hoped to pair him with left the school district shortly before the school year began.

Marcks said that there are 74 students from Shawano in the Menominee Indian School District, contradicting a claim by officials with that district in March that the number was 88. She said there are also 25 students with the Gresham School District and that Bonduel is "maxed out" on its open enrollment numbers, with the bulk of them from Shawano and Pulaski. St. James Lutheran School has a waiting list for some grades, Marcks claimed, and the Wolf River Home-schoolers have welcomed 25 new families in the last two years.

"It's easy to say that it's going down all over the state," Marcks said about enrollment. "Well, our little neck of the woods, it's going up — everywhere but here. So what's going on?"

Betsy Henning, a teacher at LEADS Primary Charter School, remembered that, when she started her teaching career in Marion, Shawano School District was the place to be for education in the area. Then in 2008, she got her opportunity to be part of the local schools.

"This already was a destination district," Henning said, pointing out the charter school, the performing arts programs and other things that made people want to enroll their children in Shawano.

Shawano is no longer that crown jewel she saw two decades ago, she noted. Initiatives are rolling out so fast, it makes it difficult for teachers to keep up, and it seems like the district is being reactive instead of proactive, dismissing the concerns of teachers, even as they are leaving Shawano in greater numbers.

"Resignation letters are thrown into a pile, and they get a 'If you don't like it, leave' attitude," Henning said, noting she plans to also leave, even though she had planned to work in the district until retirement.

Kris Going, a literacy coach at Hillcrest Primary School, noted she has taught with the district for nearly 30 years, and she asked last October about early retirement because of what she described as a "toxic environment."

"I was told that would be in the best interest of the district financially to do that and that it would be presented to the board," Going said. "That hurt. It still hurts."

Jackson Smits, a senior at SCHS, noted that every teacher and every program in the district has some level of importance. He is the senior class president and will graduate a valedictorian, and he noted that he would not be where he is without the opportunities that have been offered.

"I, myself, am a puzzle of many pieces — music, athletics, academics — pieced together by our phenomenal teachers and staff," Smits said. "Not every puzzle that walks our halls is the same. Many of them are made of pieces of the wood shop, the arts department, machining, welding, auto shop and the list goes on."

Preston McKinnies, another SCHS student, noted he'd been home-schooled for nine years before enrolling in the high school as a freshman. Even though he was in a bad place, the teachers helped him and have had a lasting impact, he said.

"While it might seem a good short-term solution to be cutting teachers, staff and programs, this district, this administration and this board is nothing without our teachers and our staff," McKinnies said.

SCHS junior Leslie Lemerond, dressed in costume for the upcoming school play that was in rehearsal as she was speaking, said the programs being cut were a benefit to her, and the teachers facing layoffs have made an impact.

"These are the people I run to when I need help," Lemerond said. "These are the places I go when I need to express myself."

Parents, children, teachers and former employees with the Shawano School District fill the sidewalks of downtown Shawano on April 2 as they walk in support of school staff and against plans to potentially cut positions to balance the 2022-23 budget, which is expected to be $2 million lower due to declining student enrollment.

Walk shows support for local teachers, staff

Supporters say they're not backing off administrators until solution found for schools crisis

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

The last gasp of winter didn't deter more than 70 parents, children and community members from a walk in support of Shawano School District teachers and staff April 2 through downtown Shawano.

Many carried signs showing their love for the educators who teach their children and their disappointment in district administrators. It was recently reported that there will be a $2 million cut in the 2022-23 schools budget, and officials listed reducing staff as one of the potential options to stop the district from hemorrhaging red ink.

For many in the crowd, it was hard to believe that the teachers who'd taught so many children were feeling demoralized, with many of them planning to leave at the end of the school year or retire early. Michael McKinnies, a local pastor with a son at Shawano Community High School, was one of the first to speak out against how district administrators were informing staff and the community about budget woes — with closing a school being one option, until recently. He said he is hopeful others will join the effort to show how valuable educators are in Shawano.

"I think the turnout is great, in spite of the weather," McKinnies said as snow was turning to sleet in the local skate park on Elizabeth Street, the starting point for the walk. "I truly believe that it shows the support that our schools and our teachers have from the community. I couldn't be more proud of what's going on today."

McKinnies believes that administrators and the Shawano School Board are slowly starting to get the message that they can't arbitrarily make decisions like staff layoffs and school closures without considering the impact on local families.

"We believe that they are hearing us," McKinnies said. "As long as we stay on topic, the board's going to hear what we have to say, and I believe they know how supportive we are to our schools and our teachers. We want what's best for them, as the board does, and so I appreciate that they're opening the tables of communication to us."

He added that board members are starting to see how important it is to include parents in the conversation, as he and others have been diligent about attending board and committee meetings. Individual board members have recently been trying to include the community conversation on agenda topics and talking with people after meetings to make sure everyone understands what's happening.

"I think it's making a difference," McKinnies said. "The big thing is we want the teachers and the community and the board to all work together for a viable solution to our financial deficit."

For McKinnies, the recent situation has also been a wake-up call to the community about what happens when they're not involved in the schools.

"I think eyes have been opened to where we're at, and a little more attention is going to be paid moving forward to our board meetings, the information that's being disseminated from those meetings and taking an active role," McKinnies said.

Sheila Aumann has recently found herself transforming into an activist after hearing that the district might close either Olga Brener Intermediate School or Shawano Community Middle School. Even though administrators have taken the option off the table in light of public outrage, Aumann feels the community should keep the pressure up to ensure transparency.

"We need real answers. We need people who really care and not just say they care," Aumann said. "Too many words and not enough action. It's been lacking. I'm a parent turned community activist in just 10 days. I don't know what happened."

Aumann said the walk and other recent things uniting community members against drastic budget cuts have shown that residents are not going to let major decisions like this go unchallenged. At the same time, she said she's dismayed that some on the school board believe the community will support whatever the administration does.

"To talk to so many board members this week, and for them to still say, 'We haven't heard that from the community,'" Aumann said. "What rock are you living under? How do you not hear it? It's bizarre."

While she finds fault with local officials for the way the budget deficit was dropped on the community, Aumann believes that the state shares some of the blame because of the way it responded to the coronavirus pandemic by shutting down schools across Wisconsin for three months and then continuing to push for schools to close when COVID-19 cases were believed to be too high.

"I think we need to take a long, hard look at how our state responded to COVID and what it's done to our schools and to our children and to our teachers," Aumann said. "Enrollment goes down, what happens? Teachers leave, but those kids still need an education. Where do they go?"

Mart Grams was the only current school board member who attended the event, often being the lone opposing vote on certain actions by the administration. He expressed disappointment in the lack of support for the event from both his fellow board members and from administrators.

Sheila Aumann, right, is among many community members who leapt to action when news first broke that a school could close in order to plug a $2 million hole in next year's Shawano School District budget. Aumann said she plans to keep asking questions and demanding answers until a solution is found.

"You'd think there'd be a principal or somebody out here. I mean, they're going to lose their jobs, too," Grams said, indicating that teachers aren't the only employees in danger of being laid off. "Luckily, we got the building (closure) taken off the list, but the next two options are worse."

The two options to which Grams alluded were to simply cut staff and increase class sizes, or cut programs like technical education, which would likely include some layoffs, as well. Grams said he felt cutting technical education would be a mistake, given the need in the workforce for more people trained in various trades and industrial skills.

"In a community like this, or anywhere in the United States, only 10% of high school kids need to go to college — the doctors, the lawyers, the teachers, the engineers," Grams said.

"If you look at tech, 60% of the kids who graduate need to go to some tech school — the plumbers, the electricians, the carpenters, the landscapers, the folks who are tearing up my road. Why would you even think (cutting technical education) is an option?"

Grams noted that board members have been in the dark on the financial situation until recently, and that it's on Superintendent Randi Anderson to keep the board informed.

"We don't get the information until she gives it to us," Grams said. "Part of her reasoning was, she claims, that she didn't want to upset the community during COVID."

While enrollment has been on the decline for Shawano's public schools for years, Grams said that was no guarantee that it would perpetually drop. With 200 apartments being built on Shawano's Engel Drive and more businesses potentially wanting to locate in the city, that means more families might bring their children here and boost enrollment, which would equate to more money for the schools.

"We look at problems after they happen instead of looking beforehand," Grams said. "We've increased the central office, but yet we're cutting teachers."

Reed sentenced to 10 years for arson

Two accomplices to be sentenced later this year

By KEVIN MURPHY
Correspondent

The first of four people charged in connection with trying to conceal a fatal drug overdose by burning a car with the victim inside was sentenced Monday in federal court to 10 years in prison.

Emerson K. Reed III had previously pleaded guilty to arson in connection with a federal felony involving the 2020 death of a Green Bay woman whose charred remains were found in a vehicle on the Menominee Reservation.

The months-long investigation to learn the identity of the suspects involved two dozen grand jury subpoenas and was helped by the GPS bracelet the alleged drug seller, Timothy M. Snider Jr., wore when transporting the corpse to the reservation.

According to court documents, Snider called Reed, 35, to help him dispose of Stephanie Greenspon's body after she fatally overdosed on heroin she obtained from Snider. Reed then asked Keith D. Wilber Jr., 27, formerly of Shawano, to help him with a "cold one," which Wilber later said he understood to mean an overdose victim. Wilber also told investigators that he told Reed and Snider to drive the vehicle with Greenspon's body and meet him on S.E. Bass Lake Road on the reservation, where they were to dispose of it.

Reed and Snider drove separate vehicles from Green Bay to the reservation on Aug. 4, 2020, with Greenspon's body in the passenger seat of one vehicle, according to court documents. They were joined by Wilber and Kayla M. Childs. Snider was wearing a GPS tracking device since he was recently released from custody in Brown County. Reed then drove Snider to a Shawano restaurant where Snider met his girlfriend. Snider's GPS tracking data indicated that he had been on S.E. Bass Lake Road and had returned to Green Bay on Aug. 4, 2020.

Surveillance video also showed the vehicles traveling the route that would have taken them from Green Bay to the reservation.

Snider wanted Greenspon's body cut up and buried, according to court documents; instead, Reed, Wilber and Childs drove to a remote spot, and Reed and Wilber set fire to the vehicle still containing Greenspon's body. Snider paid Reed in drugs and cash for taking part in the crime.

Two weeks later, the charred vehicle was discovered. At the site, authorities found bone fragments, two spent 9-millimeter shell casings and a license plate. The vehicle's registered owner said his girlfriend, Greenspon, had been driving his vehicle in early August 2020. He also gave the name of a person he believed Greenspon had visited at that time.

Greenspon's cell phone records and Facebook messages indicated she traveled to Snider's residence on Aug. 3 after arranging to get heroin from him.

Reed, Snider, Wilber and Childs were indicted in connection with the arson.

Wilber committed suicide last July, and charges of concealment of a felony and arson were later dismissed.

Snider and Childs have pleaded guilty in connection to the arson and are to be sentenced on May 6 and July 7, respectively.

At Monday's sentencing, Brenda Forbes, a spokesperson for Greenspon's family, asked Judge William Griesbach to impose a 15- to 20-year sentence on Reed, saying the facts of the case "is the stuff nightmares are made of."

"The absolutely heinous acts after her death were unnecessary and only served the defendants," Forbes said.

Reed faced a sentence of 10 years to life, but Assistant U.S. Attorney Andrew Maier joined the defense in recommending a 10-year sentence reduced by the 17 months Reed has been in custody.

After being indicted, Reed fled the state but later returned and corroborated the evidence investigators had against his co-defendants. He also seemed to express genuine remorse, Maier said.

Reed apologized for the loss to the Greenspon family.

"It was wrong. Drugs aren't an excuse," he said.

Griesbach said Reed's crime, the desecration of a human body, "is a terrible thing." He also noted that Reed's criminal record is "atrocious" and involves a prior fatal drug overdose and numerous breaking and entering offenses, likely related to his drug abuse.

Reed was on probation for a state charge which was revoked for fleeing the state and committing a federal offense. Griesbach said he wouldn't reduce the sentence he imposed by the 17 months Reed has been in custody.

"His revocation was for reasons beyond this crime, and he's been revoked so many times before," the judge said.

"The absolutely heinous acts after her death were unnecessary and only served the defendants."

Allergies should prompt folks to plan ahead

As the temperature in northeast Wisconsin continues to rise, allergists at Prevea Health are encouraging spring allergy sufferers to come up with a strategy to combat the upcoming season.

From diagnosing preexisting allergies to recommending medications, allergists say now is the time to prepare for the start of the allergy season beginning in April or May.

"We encourage our patients to come up with a plan before the allergy season starts," said Dr. Bradley Locke. "Preventive strategies like knowing which allergies trigger you and securing medications before the season starts can make a big difference because often times it can take a couple of weeks for medications to be effective."

Most people's seasonal allergy and asthma symptoms are triggered by pollen. The types of pollens that trigger symptoms vary by person and region. Pollen is produced by most trees in the spring, grasses during late spring and summer, and ragweed and other late-producing plants in late summer and early fall. Many aller-gists, including Locke, agree pollen counts are increasing on a yearly basis and the trend will likely continue.

Beyond medication, here are some additional tips from Locke for allergy sufferers:

- Do not dry your clothes on a clothesline, as the pollen in the air will stick to them.

- Keep windows closed and use air conditioning during peak pollen seasons.

- If you have asthma, avoid cutting grass or wear a mask.

- If you are outdoors during the day, shower at night and change your clothes.

- If you are bothered by hay fever or asthma, keep your grass cut short or replace it with a ground cover, such as Irish moss, bunch grass or dichondra. These options do not produce a significant amount of pollen.

- If you are purchasing trees for your yard, choose a crepe myrtle, dogwood, fig, fir, palm, pear, plum, redbud or redwood. Female cultivars of ash, box elder, cottonwood, maple, palm, poplar and willow trees are also good options.

Jehovah's Witnesses meeting in person again

Meetings will continue to be available as hybrid option

By LUKE REIMER

Reporter

Members of the Jehovah's Witnesses in Shawano County, as well as around the world, now have an opportunity to meet in person.

For the first time in two years, Jehovah's Witnesses are meeting in person. These meetings were suspended as the COVID-19 pandemic ramped up in early 2020. Open meetings started again on April 1.

"The reaction of our congregates has been jubilation," said Jehovah's Witnesses spokesman Aaron Purvis. "We have had a strong desire to be back together. There have been so many things that we have missed."

Purvis said that people of all demographics have been affected by the COVID-19 pandemic.

"The pandemic has affected the young and old, the rich and poor, people of different education levels and people of different races," said Purvis. "There have been a lot of things that we have missed out on, where people may need support, like a death of a family member."

When the COVID-19 pandemic started, Purvis walked through the decision to suspend in-person meetings.

"It all has to do with safety," said Purvis. "When we first went into a lockdown, where we suspended our in-person meetings and our in-person ministries, it was actually March 20 of 2020. There were just so many unknowns. It was too dangerous. We based that decision of safety on love. It is really just a simple principle that people follow in the bible."

Purvis said that the Jehovah's Witnesses wanted to respect everyone's gift of life.

"We thought at that time, that that was the safest thing to do," said Purvis. "We can honestly say it did work. We can honestly say that not one person caught COVID-19 from our meetings or ministries."

He then explained why April 1 was the right date to start meeting in person again.

"The reason why it is changed now, is just simply because we have better understanding of COVID-19 — we figure it is safe now," said Purvis.

He said that the Jehovah's Witnesses were planning to get back in person last year, but was halted due to variants of COVID-19, including delta and omicron.

As the pandemic continued, Purvis said that the Jehovah's Witnesses in 239 countries were able to stay united.

"We have the same guidelines, which are the Scriptures," said Purvis. "When everyone has the same guidelines, they can stay on the same page a lot easier. Many may have handled the pandemic differently, but as a group, many put their needs and wants aside and looked at what was the best for the entire group."

From left, Shawano residents Andrew, Zane and Terra Fletcher prepare to enter the Kingdom Hall on April 1 for their first in-person meeting in over two years.

CONTRIBUTED

Purvis said that even though many people were affected negatively during the COVID-19 pandemic, there were some silver linings.

"We did get a better use and understanding of technology," said Purvis. "In the United States branch, we have 1.3 million Jehovah's Witnesses, but our two meetings that we hold during the week, we have 1.5 million people who attend. The use of technology gave some the opportunity to attend our meetings, without being uncomfortable in person."

He believes that Jehovah's Witnesses will continue to use technology in their programs.

"Moving forward, we will have a hybrid meeting, where people can come in person if they feel comfortable, while keeping Zoom going," said Purvis. "For those who can't make our meetings, this will give them the opportunity to attend."

Purvis reiterated that getting back to in-person meetings is important for Jehovah's Witnesses, because of being able to congregate with their friends and family.

"Young people have not been able to be with their friends, the way that they want to be," said Purvis. "For older people, it has been very challenging. One of the big features at our meetings is singing. Everyone has been singing alone in their home. God gave us arms for a reason; there is now a chance where people can just hug each other again. That human interaction is important."

He said that getting back to in-person meetings will help to invigorate everyone.

"I think everyone is just ready to be back together," said Purvis. "It will give them a breathe of fresh air. It is one that they need. Technology served its purpose, but it is not a replacement for human contact."

Purvis said that, eventually, Jehovah's Witness members will go back to knocking on doors.

"The reason that it is not happening immediately, is because coming to our meetings is really about choice," said Purvis. "When we go and knock on people's doors, we take that choice away. We feel at this time, it is just not the right time. Some may feel uncomfortable."

Purvis said that if people wanted to learn more about Jehovah's Witnesses, they can visit jw.org.

"Anyone can download anything that they want free of charge," said Purvis. "On the website, we have Bible literature in 1,053 languages. There are also things for teenagers, children and families as a whole. If someone is interested in attending meetings or special events, there is a spot on the website where people can find the closest kingdom hall."

The Kingdom Hall in Shawano sits at N4764 Willow Lane. Jehovah's Witnesses have begun to host in-person meetings again as of April 1.

Rough-legged hawk easier to identify on the wing

High in the sky is a soaring bird we've trained our binoculars on studying its shape and colors as it wheels above the fields, wings widespread. It's the underside of those broad wings that seals the identification as a dark morph rough-legged Hawk.

CATHY CARNES

According to The Cornell Lab of Ornithology All About Birds website, www.allaboutbirds.org, like many hawks, the rough-legged hawk has a dark and light morph. The color pattern on the underside of the wings of the dark morph is distinctive; a band of dark brown along the forepart of the wing edged by bright white along the wing's trailing edge. On a light morph, the undersides of the wings are mostly white with only dark patches at the bend of the wing. If seen from the top or back or while perched, the bird is mostly brown.

Their legs are well feathered providing needed warmth during frigid days spent in the far north. Look at the head of the hawk to determine its sex: Females have pale heads along with dark belly patches; male coloring is similar but more mottled. It's hard to identify this hawk while perched, so wait until it flies as the striking black-and-white wing patterns will provide a vital key to its identification, as will the V-shape of its long wings in flight. Watch the tail as well; when caught by the sun, it flashes white at the base and is tipped with black.

While the birds are beautiful to see in flight with their long outstretched wings tracing lazy circles in the sky, they are intriguing to watch as they hunt. Head down, they search for prey and can exhibit another characteristic that helps with their identification — hovering. Facing into the wind they can hover over one spot while preparing for that lethal drop onto their prey. They also hunt from perches high in trees, or from the top of utility or fence posts or haystacks.

According to The Cornell Lab, they overwinter in Canada and most of the United States, where they can be found in more open habitats such as prairies, shrub steppes, semi-deserts, fields, marshes, bogs and dunes. Here they find mice, voles and shrews to eat. Look for them when driving the back roads. Our rough-legged hawks will soon head north to their breeding grounds in the arctic, both in North America and Eurasia. There they nest on cliffs and outcroppings and raise their young.

JOEL TRICK

The rough-legged hawk is an interesting bird to study. According to the U.S. Geological Survey's Bird Banding Laboratory, research has found that adult females winter further north than males for reasons yet unknown. Females are larger than males; the reverse is the usual the case (males larger than females). Male and female plumage is also different; this is not the case with other species closely related to this hawk. This is an intriguing bird from which we are learning much and will learn more as research continues.

The population of rough-legged hawks appears to be stable according to The Cornell Lab. This is good news as we can hope to see more of them come next fall when again their migratory journey south brings them to us. Pay attention to those soaring hawks, and hopefully you too will spy one or more rough-legged hawks before they head back to their arctic breeding grounds.

As endangered species coordinator for the USFWS, she helped conserve and recover federally listed threatened and endangered species in Wisconsin.

OPINION

YOUR RIGHT TO KNOW

Pull the plug on shadowy business courts

Anyone who doubts that secrecy in government breeds poor public policy should take a look at the Business Court Pilot Project launched by our Wisconsin Supreme Court.

For the last five years, the project has granted large commercial interests outsized influence over our court system's handling of their cases, exactly as intended. The business court pilot debuted in 2017 in Waukesha County and the eighth judicial district (encompassing Brown, Marinette, Kewaunee, Oconto, Door, Outagamie and Waupaca counties). It was expanded to other districts and, in a surprise move, to Dane County in 2020.

Here's how it works: The chief justice, currently Annette Ziegler, receives recommendations from big business and selects a limited number of business court judges. These hand-picked judges then receive training out-of-state from special interests aligned with big business. They follow court procedures drafted by big business lawyers.

The process largely bypasses the voter-controlled and otherwise random judicial assignment of cases. It creates a two-tiered court system — one controlled by business interests and one for everybody else.

It began in September 2016, when then-Chief Justice Patience Roggensack formed the "Business Court Advisory Committee" to develop a specialty court proposed by big business, for big business. Ignoring the Supreme Court's own internal operating procedures designed to promote transparency and diversity of opinion in appointing court committees, the chief justice stacked the committee with lawyers representing business interests.

The committee included no labor or consumer advocates, no one representing the viewpoints of the public and no one speaking for other stakeholders in our circuit court system.

Working privately, the advisory committee soon hatched a petition to establish and control the business court, which it filed with the Supreme Court on Oct. 26, 2016. Less than two weeks later, the court adopted the petition by a 5-2 vote, with no public hearing, no opportunity for public comment and no public notice that the petition was even scheduled for a vote.

Thus, out of public view, our Supreme Court rapidly and fundamentally changed our circuit courts' democratic structure for handling big business commercial litigation, simultaneously degrading judicial independence and corrupting a cardinal principle underpinning our court system — that everyone should be treated equally when he or she comes before the court.

The business court model was forced onto the Dane County circuit court system beginning in July 2020. The Supreme Court is now weighing a petition to extend the pilot program, set to expire on June 30, 2022, for another two years.

The big business takeover of circuit court commercial litigation wasn't the first time our Supreme Court displayed a penchant for secrecy.

For example, in 2012, the Supreme Court majority voted to close administrative rules conferences to the public, reversing an open meetings policy that had informed Wisconsin voters on important court matters for years. "To sit out here in public and philosophize," said Roggensack, "is really not the best use of our time."

A more transparent approach might have led to a different outcome on the Business Court pilot project. It's not too late to comment on the request to expand the project for another two years. Written comments can be submitted to Attorney Laura Brenner at lbrenner@reinhartlaw.com, and should be received by 4:30 p.m. April 8.

This time, transparency may produce a better result — a return to normalcy for our courts.

Attorney Richard G. Niess served as a Dane County Circuit Court judge from 2004 to 2020, including 13 years as presiding judge of the civil division. Baby shop opens in downtown Shawano

Local owners also operate expanded business in Howard

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

Anyone looking for baby gifts or clothing won't have to travel beyond downtown Shawano after Thornberry Cottage Baby and Gift recently opened.

The business, located at 152 S. Main St., next to 'Til the Cows Come Home, held a soft opening in mid-February but is now fully operational for the community. It is an extension of the business that now-Shawano residents opened in Howard four years ago.

"We were traveling back and forth to Green Bay, which isn't a big deal, but sometimes we wished our store was closer to us," said Suzette Hackl-Kroll, who co-owns Thornberry Cottage with her sister, Sandra Laskowski. "When we looked at the property, it was actually our husbands' idea to bring the baby (shop) here."

Hackl-Kroll added that the business in Howard does a lot more than baby stuff, noting that home decor and gourmet food are sold there, too, along with a lot of other stuff.

"When we had the opportunity to open in Shawano, we asked what can we do in this space, and it turned into an adorable boutique," Hackl-Kroll said.

When folks first come into the shop, a brightly lit tree catches people's attention. It's decorated for spring at the moment, with a few Easter eggs adding a little color, but the owners plan to decorate it for a variety of different seasons and holidays.

"I think that it's a staple for our store," Hackl-Kroll said. "The little ones think that it's really magical."

Opening the Shawano shop gave the women the opportunity to expand its products to include toddlers, as well. Hackl-Kroll noted there are some home decor items also.

"We have custom Shawano Lake pillows," she said. "We tried to do some custom Shawano items in the store."

Signage is still in the works, so it has been a little difficult for people to find Thornberry Cottage, but once people found out they were next to 'Til the Cows Come Home, people have been very receptive. The two shops are complementary, the owners noted, as 'Til the Cows Come Home offers baby toys.

"We've had very good traffic, a lot of people stopping in to say hi and introduce themselves," Laskowski said.

Besides baby clothing and shoes, new parents can also buy a variety of books to read to their little ones, according to Hackl-Kroll, as well as books helpful to first-time parents in how to care for their child.

"We're starting to have a moms and grandmothers and parents section," Hackl-Kroll said. "If you're getting a gift for a mother or grandmother, we have a whole section."

Laskowski added that there are also gifts for baptisms, confirmations and other religious occasions.

The pair are planning to add more items in the coming months. Summer swimsuits for the little ones are on the way, and toddler clothes will also be added.

Beth Schaefer has been named the Wisconsin Farm Bureau's Agriculture in the Classroom coordinator.

Schaefer holds an undergraduate degree from the University of Wisconsin-Madison in agriculture education and a Master of Science in agriculture and biology education from the University of Wisconsin-River Falls.

"Beth's experience working directly with education and promotion programs, engaging volunteers and collaborating with stakeholders will serve her well as she leads

BETH SCHAEFER

Wisconsin's Ag in the Classroom program," said Wendy Kannel, Wisconsin Farm Bureau Federation's senior director of member relations.

Schaefer most recently served as a regional program manager for the Dairy Farmers of Wisconsin. Prior to that, she was an agriculture teacher and FFA adviser in Merrill and Oconto Falls. Schaefer is a graduate of the Wisconsin Farm Bureau Leadership Institute, American Farm Bureau Communications Bootcamp and served on the WFBF Young Farmer and Agriculturist Committee.

"K-12 students are our future farmers, consumers and agriculture stakeholders," Schaefer said. "AITC provides a platform to equip teachers and volunteers with accurate, meaningful lessons and resources to engage students in the amazing opportunities available to them in agriculture — whether they are seeking a job or simply understanding how food, fiber and fuel are produced. I am excited to guide Wisconsin Ag in the Classroom and continue building our reputation as a trustworthy source for educators seeking unique and engaging lessons in agriculture."

Schaefer and her husband, Matt, live near Brandon and have four children. She began her duties on March 21.

The Wisconsin Farm Bureau Federation is the state's largest general farm organization and is made up of 61 county farm bureaus. WFBF represents farms of every size, commodity and management style.

The Wittenberg-Birnamwood High School girls and boys track and field teams turned in the top finishes among five area teams competing at the Rosholt Badger Invite on April 1 in Stevens Point.

The Witt-Birn girls placed second with 42.125 points, only behind DodgeLand (47.75). Suring (20) placed ninth, while Bonduel (17.125) was 10th and Gresham/Bowler (7.125) took 19th. There were 26 girls teams that scored at the indoor invite.

On the boys side, Witt-Birn took eighth with 25 points, with New London (57) taking first. Gillett (22) tied for ninth, Gresham/Bowler (16) tied for 13th, Bonduel (13.5) claimed 15th and Suring (8) tied for 18th. A total of 27 boys teams scored at the invite.

Witt-Birn

It was Reese Rogowski who led the Witt-Birn girls to their strong finish.

Rogowski won the long jump with a top leap of 16 feet, 8 inches and the 400-meter dash with a time of 1 minute, 0.46 seconds. She claimed second in the 60 dash (8.25).

Rogowski was also a part of the sixth-place finishing 4x400 relay (4:50.08). Allison Linke, Kit Stewart and Faith Resch filled out the team.

"I felt like I ran a pretty strong 400 but was a little fatigued going into the 60 right after it, so I wish I could have performed stronger for that race," said Rogowski on her night. "I'm looking forward to the outdoor season as it allows me the opportunity to compete on the longer track."

Resch also scored for the team in the high jump and 60. She took fourth after clearing 4-11 in the high jump and was seventh in the 60 with a time of 8.65 seconds. Stewart tied for eighth in the high jump (4-5).

Suring's Olivia Noack, front right, and Bonduel's Ashlyn Kurey, front middle, compete in the 800-meter run at the Rosholt Badger Invite on April 1 in Stevens Point.

Jalynn Horacek earned a pair of seventh-place finishes for the Chargers. She posted a time of 11.17 in the 60 hurdles and a leap of 15 feet in the long jump.

Simon Schairer led the Witt-Birn boys with a pair of top-five individual finishes. He won the 400 (54.96) and was fourth in the triple jump (41-2.5).

Schairer teamed up with Alex Centeno, Connor Groshek and Craig Wendel on the second-place finishing 4x400 relay (3:48.69).

Jacob Tomlinson was the other

Charger to score on the boys side, finishing seventh in the shot put with a throw of 41-0½.

Bonduel

A total of seven Bonduel athletes placed in the top eight to score for their team.

On the boys side, Gaven Vance placed third in the 60 dash (7.42) and was sixth in the long jump (18-8).

"It was for sure a big confidence booster knowing that I can compete with bigger schools," said Vance, who added he was hoping for higher finishes in each event. "Hoping that I can do even better in the outdoor meets for the rest of the year."

Karter Schroeder also scored for the boys team, tying for fourth in the high jump after clearing 5-10.

Ashlyn Kurey led the girls team with a fourth-place finish in the triple jump (32-2) and fifth-place finish in the 800 (2:41.26).

Kendra Troxel placed fifth in the long jump (15-2), while Ava Pleshek was fifth in the 60 hurdles (11.06). Brenna Hertzfeldt also took fifth, doing so in the shot put (33-3).

Kerry O'Harrow tied for eighth in the high jump (4-5).

Suring

Four Suring athletes scored during the invite, with Christine Sleeter leading the girls team and Jeremy Hensel guiding the boys.

Gresham/Bowler's Ireland Jensen runs her leg of the 4x200-meter relay during the Rosholt Badger Invite on April 1 in Stevens Point.

MORGAN RODE | NEW MEDIA

Sleeter cleared 5 feet in the high jump to take second place. She also tied for fourth in pole vault (7-0).

"Well, placing second tonight in high jump out of at least 30 girls is definitely something I'm proud of, especially going against all these talented girls from bigger schools," said Sleeter.

"Making 5 (feet) tonight in high jump is definitely something that will push me the rest of the season now, knowing I can do 5 for sure. Hopefully when I get outside things will start to become a little more normal and I can hopefully get higher this season."

MacKenzie Bailey was one of the girls Sleeter tied for fourth with at 7 feet in the pole vault. Olivia Noack claimed fourth in the 800 (2:40.2).

Hensel finished third in the pole vault (11-6) and was seventh in the 400 (56.77) to account for all of the boys team's scoring.

Gresham/Bowler

Bowler's Emmitt Kietlinski scored in three events to lead the boys co-op.

He broke his own school record after clearing 6-4 in the high jump and placed second. Kietlinski also placed fifth in the triple jump (41-1) and seventh in the long jump (18-7).

"This early in the season, even the best jumpers have inconsistent performances, so I try not to get too disappointed when I don't perform up to my standards," said Kietlinski. "My long jump and triple jump aren't where they need to be yet, but my high jump is where I hoped I would be at at this point."

"I'm looking forward to getting outdoors where I can work more on technique. The UWSP meet is a great building block for the outdoor season."

Bryson Nelson also scored for the boys team after finishing seventh in the 3,200 (12:19.25).

The girls 4x200 relay team of Hannah Cerveny, Willow Demaskie, Valarie Cerveny and Ireland Jensen teamed up for a sixth-place finish in 2:02.7.

Individually, Valarie Cerveny placed seventh in the shot put (32-3½). Jensen tied for eighth in the high jump (4-5).

Maddie Haffner placed sixth in the 3,200 (14:40.17), while Cami Gourley took eighth (18:20.57).

Gillett

The Gillett boys turned in their best finishes in the distance events.

Alex Peterson came in second in the 3,200 (9:59.62), just 0.32 seconds off the first-place finisher, Iola-Scandinavia's Charlie Vater.

"Going into the 3,200 race today, I didn't really know what my time was going to be, so I stuck to what my coach told me to do and it worked out in the end. Just stick right behind Charlie Vater and the rest will take care of itself," said Peterson.

"Even though I didn't win the race, I broke 10 minutes in the 3,200 for the first time which I am ecstatic about! I love running this race, and it was a super fun one tonight!"

Connor Hanson placed second in the 800 with a mark of 2:11.52. Evan Peterson came in third in the 1,600 with a mark of 4:53.11.

No Gillett girls took part in the invite.

ATHLETE PROFILE: ISABEL ROLOFF

Senior track star hoping for best season yet

Shawano's Isabel Roloff is no stranger to success during her high school track and field career. She's hoping for one more big season this spring before she takes her talents to UW-Milwaukee, where she plans to continue competing in the sport.

Her best high school season came as a junior when she qualified for state in the pole vault and 100-yard dash. Roloff took second in the Division 2 pole vault field after clearing 11 feet, and she was fourth in the 100 with a time of 12.34 seconds.

She was the Bay Conference champion in the 100 and pole vault as a junior.

According to the school's record books, she owns the top mark in the 100 (12.22) and pole vault (11-0) and sits in third in the 200 (26.84).

Q: When did your interest in track and field begin?

A: My interest started my freshman year of high school when I decided to try track. After a fun and successful first year, it became one of my favorite activities.

Q: What is your favorite part about the track and field season?

A: My favorite part of the season is at the end of May when conference, regionals, sectionals and state meets are happening. I love the excitement of track meets that qualify you for a bigger meet.

Q: What has the sport taught you over the years?

A: Track and field has taught me perseverance even through challenges. Last year I had a hip injury during the end of the season, but I still managed to run well and go to state.

Q: What is your favorite event to compete in, and why?

A: My favorite event is the pole vault because there is always something to be improved. I enjoy the combination of running fast on the runway and being coordinated in the air.

Shawano's Isabel Roloff competes in the girls pole vault competition during the Division 2 WIAA State Track and Field Championships on June 25, 2021, at Veterans Memorial Stadium in La Crosse.

Q: You are headed to UW-Milwaukee to compete in track and field. With that in mind, what goals have you set for yourself in your final high school season?

A: I hope to go to the state meet again this year and possibly place higher than I did last year. I also hope to set PRs (personal records) in all of my events this season that I can improve upon at UW-Milwaukee.

Q: How did you prepare for the track and field season?

A: I prepared for track in the winter by staying active with competitive dance and practicing at an indoor pole vault facility.

Q: In this early portion of the season, what are you focusing on the most?

A: In the early part of the season, I'm focused on building strength and endurance. Working hard now allows me to be a competitive runner at future meets.

Q: Before competing in an event, do you have any routines or rituals you go through?

A: One ritual that I created at the end of last year's season was to drink a Body Armor at every meet. Other than that, I try to do the same warmup before every race so that I can get in the sprinting state of mind.

Q: What's your favorite memory of competing on the Shawano track and field team?

A: One of my favorite memories with the track team is being escorted out of town last year on our way to state. All the people in town cheering for us and the fire truck and police cars made it very exciting. It was definitely a moment to remember.

Q: Favorite movie, TV show and musical artist?

A: Movie — "High School Musical 2." TV show — "Jane the Virgin." Music artist — Rex Orange County.

Q: Name one thing about yourself that not many people know.

A: I have also showed market lambs since I was in third grade. My family and I travel to livestock shows around the Midwest, and I compete at the state fair and the county fair.

Q: What are some things you hope to accomplish after graduating high school?

A: Along with all of my track and field goals for college, I also hope to earn a master's degree in accounting. My ultimate goal is to one day open a business of my own.

ATHLETE PROFILE: JEREMY HENSEL

Suring senior eyes school record in pole vault

Suring High School's Jeremy Hensel qualified for the state track and field meet as a junior last spring. This year, he's hoping to make a return to state while also breaking the school's record in pole vault.

Hensel cleared 12 feet at state to finish in 12th place. He won the Marinette & Oconto Conference title in the pole vault after clearing 11-6.

Suring's school record is held by Mitch Stegeman at 14-6.

Hensel already has several strong finishes to his name after a few indoor meets. He won the 400-yard dash and took fourth in the pole vault at the Oshkosh Boys Invitational on March 17.

He had the top mark in the pole vault during an indoor meet at Oconto Falls on March 22. Hensel placed second in the 200-meter dash and fourth in the 45-yard dash that night, too.

Hensel scored all of his team's points during the Rosholt Badger Invite on April 1 in Stevens Point after a third-place finish in the pole vault and seventh-place finish in the 400-meter.

Q: When did your interest in track and field begin?

A: My interest in track began in sixth grade. I always loved running when I was a kid, so I decided track was the best sport for that.

Q: What is your favorite part about the track and field season?

A: My favorite part about track has to be meeting new people and pole vaulting.

Q: After making state last spring, what are your goals for your senior season?

A: My goal for this year is just to get to the school record, which is 14 feet, 6 inches.

Q: Pole vaulting isn't for everybody. What drew you to the event, and what makes it fun to compete in?

A: You're right when you say it isn't for everyone. But what drew my attention to the event was that falling from high heights and landing on a soft mat is fun. And what other event to do that in besides pole vault?

Q: In this early portion of the season, what are you focusing on the most?

A: As of now I'm really focusing on my sprints due to the weather outside. I can't get outside to vault and we don't have a pit inside, so it's tough right now.

Q: Before competing in an event, do you have any routines or rituals you go through?

A: I just stretch and listen to my music to get my mindset on what I'm doing.

Q: As a senior, how do you try and help lead the team?

A: I try leading the team by just trying to help whenever possible and always cheer my teammates on in their event.

Q: How did playing football and basketball prepare you for the track and field season?

A: It just kept me conditioned really well.

Q: What's your favorite memory of competing on the Suring track and field team?

A: Definitely has to be going to state or placing first at sectionals last year.

Don't try to make a pudding. Don't even start to try. It will burn inside the pan, and make you want to cry.

Buy a good canned pudding and scrape it into a glass claim you made it by yourself and have your self a laugh!

IF guests want that skin that pudding gets at times, Elmers glue is edible, and it sets up just fine.
