Small airport in Shawano continues to grow, improve

Budget continues to be in black as state, federal funds utilized

By LEE PULASKI

City Editor

Big changes are transforming the Shawano City-County Airport, but they're not taking a chunk of local taxpayer dollars.

Doug Engel with the airport commission informed the Shawano Common Council on July 13 that the facility is actually expected to come out ahead of its annual budget, which is $130,625 this year. That is because much of the improvements and future plans come from state and federal funding, he said.

"We are a much bigger thing than the line item on your budget indicates," Engel said. "We are a small item on your budget, but we spend an awful lot of money out there, and it's Federal Aviation Administration money and state money (from the Bureau of Aviation)."

Engel said the airport is working on upgrading its management. He noted that Clarence Schampers, who has been part of the airport for decades, helps to maintain the airport. However, due to changes coming down the line to make it a much more viable part of the community for residents and tourists alike, the commission is seeking someone to handle all aspects of the airport, a task currently undertaken by the commission members themselves.

"We've got to upgrade the leadership of the airport," Engel said, noting there is no staff at the airport beyond mowing and plowing.

About $50,000 has been budgeted for airport management, but the commission has not yet "pulled the trigger," according to Engel, claiming unspecified reasons. That is one of the main reasons the budget is expected to be well in the black by the time the year ends, he said.

The commission sold two hangars jointly owned by the city and Shawano County, according to Engel, noting that the doors on those hangars were too small to be used for certain aircraft. He said the commission also bought a hangar from Tom Wunderlich, who no longer needed his hangar.

"They were outdated and didn't work for our needs, so we did some shuffling," Engel said of the two municipal hangars sold. "We can use this to store transient aircraft in. When people come up for the weekend and want to have their plane indoors, we can actually rent space to them indoors. That moved our strategic plan up quite a bit, because we thought we were going to have to build a building, and that was going to take time and money to accomplish."

Increased activity at the airport means increased activity in local businesses, Engel noted, especially those that cater to tourists.

"We're getting people to fly into Shawano again," Engel said. "The activity is picking up. They're going to the local restaurants and hotels. They're walking off the airport. It's working out pretty well."

The commission is in the middle of a master plan update, Engel said, something that is necessary in order to continue to receive FAA and state funding. While other small airports in the state are pushing back on having to do master plans, Shawano's stepped up to show it can be done, he said.

"We volunteered to do it. The bureau asked us if we'd be the first general aviation airport to get it done," Engel said. "The Bureau of Aviation and FAA are paying for this master plan and reengineering project — a $450,000 master plan update being taken care of for us."

The commission is also working to return fuel operations to the airport. Engel said that it had fueling capabilities when it could all be done manually, but the commission plans to take that back at the beginning of 2023.

There are a number of projects planned for the airport in the future, much of it being paid for with state and federal dollars. This includes a $1 million parallel taxiway, $400,000 for rehabilitating the airport's sea plane base, another $400,000 for snow removal equipment, $250,000 to remove obstructions at the airport and $230,000 to set up runway glide paths.

"It just makes sense for us to manage the fuel system," Engel said. "The city and the county both have fuel vendor licenses and insurance to cover that. There's no reason that needs to be done by someone on the outside."

The airport also plans to hold its second fly-in event in August, with Engel boasting 2,000 people attended the first event last year. This year's plans include combining it with a car show, increasing the number of Warbirds flying in, parachute jumpers and "an award-winning food truck," he said.

"From a tourism standpoint, this is huge," Engel said. "We're going to make it bigger and better."

The commission also plans to expand its Young Eagles program, which helps children ages 8-17 "to fly and experience flight," according to Engel. Nationally, 3 million children have gone through the program; at last year's fly-in, 76 children got to participate.

"We're going to do that again this year," Engel said.

Former Shawano teacher turns to social media

Bougie hopes to bring people together to address concerns with public schools

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

The past few months have shown a deep divide between the Shawano School District and its teachers, families and other community members, with dozens of people speaking out against some decisions made and describing why many teachers and other staff members have left the district.

Most of those people have spoken out at school board meetings, but Cory Bougie — formerly an eighth grade science teacher at Shawano Community Middle School — is taking to social media to tell his story. He wants to encourage others who are frustrated with the public schools to tell their stories, as well.

“I kind of did this on a whim,” Bougie said during a Facebook Live session on July 13 from his personal page that was later broadcast on the Concerned Parents of Shawano Schools and Citizens Listening and Advocating for Shawano Schools pages. “I wanted to get everyone together and just get talking and kind of see what’s going on, give everyone my experiences as a former teacher with Shawano.”

Bougie said it was really difficult for him to turn in his resignation because he enjoyed working with the students, calling them “knuckleheads and a blast.” He started working for the district in late 2020, when COVID-19 had prompted the district to be in virtual learning mode for several months.

Bougie noted that all schools are experiencing difficult times and struggling, but Shawano has some things happening that are unique, in his view. He said information is getting out to people slowly by “small factions,” and he believes more can be done to keep people informed.

“I’ve been kind of sitting back watching and seeing how that’s gone,” Bougie said. “I think it’s time enough that I don’t see anything changing.”

Bougie said he will now be teaching at Wittenberg-Birnamwood High School and, ironically, will have the same boss he had before, as former SCMS principal Stuart Russ has taken over that school after its leader retired. Bougie is still helping with some coaching at the Shawano schools and said he plans to remain in Shawano to fight for the teachers who remain.

Many teachers have stayed silent, according to Bougie, for fear of retribution to their jobs, but that fear lifted when they left their Shawano teaching positions and found employment elsewhere.

“There were a lot of people afraid to talk about things, thinking, ‘Well, is it going to hurt my job? What am I going to do? Can I speak up about this?’” Bougie said. “For me, I was concerned, but I always spoke my mind anyway. I’m very level-headed and speak as respectfully as I can but still blunt and to the point.”

Bougie noted his departure is a minor shift in the organization of the schools, but the loss of many teachers with 20 years or more of experience is devastating. He noted that what’s happening is the second part of the one-two punch that is impacting local students’ education.

“They were the tiptop class of people you could ever meet,” Bougie said. “It’s tough to see them go to other opportunities because they’re fed up with the things that are going on here and not being respected and things like that.”

“That’s been mirrored with a lot of our school board meetings that we’ve had. We’ve had a lot of these meetings where people are going

Former Shawano Community Middle School teacher Cory Bougie speaks during a hour-long Facebook Live session July 13 about some of the issues plaguing the Shawano School District. Bougie hopes to do more sessions to bring people together and provide information about what’s happening. FACEBOOK and saying what’s going on, trying to point out something in the hopes that we can make a change. It’s not a very personal thing for a lot of us teachers and paras (paraprofessionals) and others who’ve gone and talked. We’re frustrated because this is hurting the students a lot.”

Bougie said he is concerned about whether the district will be able to fill so many vacant positions by the time school starts in September, and he is curious about what will be done if the schools are not fully manned by then.

“You’re always going to have some turnover, but nothing like this,” Bougie said. “People have said why, but it’s falling on deaf ears.”

One key issue he brought up was the shift in technology for the district, going from the Chromebooks to Apple products. He claimed that administrators informed staff that the roll-out was happening, even though some meetings were held to seek “input.”

“That’s really what’s been going on in the schools for a good couple of years now,” Bougie said. “Decisions are just made. We have these committees that come together and (administrators) say, ‘Oh, you’ve had a chance to talk.’ They don’t mean anything, because the decisions are already made, and then those committees are expected to just push those ideas and make sure they can work.”

Bougie said a key problem is thinking that all the schools can be run exactly the same, like a McDonald’s or other chain business.

“You can’t do that with schools,” he said. “You have these different schools and different school districts. You have different students with different needs. You can’t go at this like running a big business, and that’s what we’re doing. We’re being compartmentalized, pushed off. Only certain people know certain information.”

Bougie said he didn’t feel like he could get all the concerns whittled out in one Facebook Live session, so he’s hoping to hold them once or twice a week on his page to try and bring everyone together.

Traditional food secrets way to good health

Sioux Chef tells about how easy it is for Menominee to find food on reservation

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

Health issues like diabetes and other maladies have been an issue for Native Americans for decades, but some are pushing for a return to traditional tribal diets that were part of the culture before the tribes were displaced by the American government.

Returning to traditions of hunting food and growing it in the forests of the Menominee Reservation and other tribal lands were at the forefront of the “For the People” conference, which included Indigenous cooking classes and more, and then culminated with guest speaker Sean Sherman, also known as the Sioux Chef, and a community feast.

Sherman is a member of the Oglala Lakota tribe in South Dakota but lives today in Minneapolis, and he is the co-founder for North American Traditional Indigenous Food Systems (NATIFS). He has been traveling the country with his Indigenous Food Lab program, a key part of NATIFS and been showing Native Americans how to combine Native American ingredients with modern technology to make delicious — and healthy — meals for all to enjoy.

“He’s been featured recently as one of the top chefs in the United States and beyond,” said Wade Fernandez, a Menominee musician who played for more than 100 attendees prior to the feast and sat on a panel discussing food and health needs for Native Americans. “The coolest thing is that he’s Native, and he is doing this in a way that respects our medicines, respects our plants, respects our animals and also our ancestors — respecting the food that came and fed our people for so many thousands of years.”

Fernandez and Sherman feel that the way to return to health is to “decolonize” tribal foods, to go back to meals that didn’t include flour, cane sugar, salt and dairy. Sherman said NATIFS is hoping to become a support center, research and development facility and more to help improve tribes’ efforts to create healthy food systems.

“We’re trying to set up a lot of focus on Indigenous education and Indigenous food access,” Sherman said.

American government efforts like the Homestead Act from 1862 and the Indian Appropriations Act of 1871, among other things, took land from the tribes and forced them to be relocated to reservations and stripped of their cultural heritage as children were sent to boarding schools where they were forced to practice Christian ways, Sherman noted. That washing away of Native culture included the knowledge of what to eat to be healthy and thrive, he said.

“All of these things were designed to strip away rights from Indigenous people and make their land access easier to grab,” Sherman said. “It was an intentional situation by the U.S. government to weaken the tribes ... to remove some of their food resources.”

A key factor that has kept the tribes from returning to traditional diets is the lack of acknowledgement and acceptance about the abuses suffered at the boarding schools and other places. Sherman noted that by reinstalling the pride of being Native American, tribal members can return to the old ways without fear.

“We’re still facing so many problems in our own communities,” Sherman said. “We’re dealing with domestic violence, sexual abuse, chemical abuse and all these things.”

The commodity foods programs created many of the health woes that tribes face, Sherman said, and many people are still on diets where the food they eat is artificially preserved and not a part of nature.

“These are not our ancestral foods,” Sherman said as he pointed to images of meat in a can, commodity cheese, flour and other items Native Americans received when they were kept on reservations in the mid-1800s. “This is what’s making us sick. There’s way too many carbs, there’s way too many sugars, and there’s way too much processed food.”

Sherman added that cultures today believe that fry bread is a traditional staple for Native Americans, not realizing it was something they were forced to make with the limited commodities available in order to survive. He believes, in order to spread the word about traditional Native foods, tribes need to open restaurants in cities and towns that showcase Indigenous ingredients.

“We didn’t do fry bread tacos, Indian tacos, Navajo tacos, whatever you want to call them, because there’s so much cooler stuff out there,” Sherman said. “This shouldn’t identify every Native American out there. We’re too diverse. We have too much to share.”

Sherman said he hopes to continue to come back, whether it’s annually or quarterly, to help other tribes and tribal members rediscover their own agricultural roots that can return them to a healthy state. NATIFS opened up a food truck a few years ago, and it was a big hit, he said, which furthers his belief that Indigenous cuisine and foods are not dead yet.

“We all have to work toward food sovereignty in order to have food security at some point,” Sherman said. “We need regional food systems, and we need local control, which means not governmental control. We shouldn’t be following the USDA (U.S. Department of Agriculture) model of what a school should be eating because otherwise we’re feeding our kids pizza and sugary juices.”

Ramthum makes stop in Shawano on campaign trail

Gubernatorial candidate covers topics from election integrity to Second Amendment rights

By LUKE REIMER
Reporter

Election integrity, agency oversight, taxpayer relief and Second Amendment rights were among the key topics touched on July 13 by Republican gubernatorial candidate Tim Ramthum. In a campaign stop at the Shawano County Republican Headquarters ahead of the Aug. 9 GOP primary, the candidate also talked about education in Wisconsin, the importance of agriculture and an end to drug and sex trafficking.

“When I see injustice, I think that I have to go there and help,” Ramthum told the crowd. “I want to be a part of the solutions to address injustice and resolve them.”

Ramthum said he first became involved in public office 12 years ago when he ran for a position on the Kewaskum School Board.

“It was a contentious environment — just like any government body,” said Ramthum. “It was, ‘Just say yes, and everything will be fine.’ I thought, ‘No. I do not work that way.’ When representatives go in front of bodies, they can’t think for themselves. They have to think for the people that they are representing, and that is what I do.”

His first point of emphasis revolved around election integrity.

“This happens to probably be the most important issue in our state and our nation right now, because it affects everything else,” said Ramthum. “Election integrity matters because elections have consequences. You have had the process and people, who are manipulating elections for more than two and half decades, to get what we have today.”

Ramthum said that voters in Wisconsin helped to perpetuate his claim of unfair elections.

“It is because of our indifference,” said Ramthum. “We did not get engaged. We did not ask questions. We did not hold the people in the process accountable.”

He pleaded with voters to not let that same trend continue and to become more informed to find the right candidate for the position.

“Let’s not continue the same practice that continue the problems,” said Ramthum. “If you want something to get better, you have to find somebody who has the leadership, conviction, courage, passion, integrity, honesty and a sense of urgency. There is not a lot of time to fix this stuff.”

Ramthum slammed members of Wisconsin’s government, including Gov. Tony Evers and Attorney General Josh Kaul, saying that he is still confused about their platforms.

“I don’t know what they are running on,” said Ramthum. “What is Evers running on? Is he going to defend a tax reduction that was a part of the GOP plan? I don’t know how they can vote for him; he raised $10 million this quarter. I don’t know how people can give a failing situation money.”

According to Ramthum, if he is elected governor, all of the agencies in Wisconsin will get “an enema.”

“Our state agencies spend tons of money,” said Ramthum. “I do not know of, see any sort of oversight that says how they can spend money without some level of accountability. Where is the return on investments for the taxpayers? I am going to peel the onion of every agency to make sure that the dollars they get are being provided properly across the board. To get this ball rolling, I am going to recommend 10% tax cuts in their budgets across the board. That will rattle them to the core. We can hold them accountable and make them testify about what they are asking for.”

With his position on the Kewaskum School Board, Ramthum said that education is very important to him and a topic that will be addressed if he is elected as the governor.

“Kids are our future,” said Ramthum. “I am going to take common core out of our schools. I am not going to allow for the indoctrination of our students in our schools.”

He said that he has had a thought to eliminate property tax money to pay for schools.

“We can use more of a sales tax approach,” said Ramthum. “If I could take school tax off of all your property tax bills, the bills would drop by about 65%. When you buy something, the sales tax might be a little higher than 5%, but you are making a choice to buy something, instead of getting slammed.”

According to Ramthum, there needs to be more tax relief for the majority of taxpayers in Wisconsin.

“When you reduce taxes, you reduce revenue and when you reduce revenue you effect other programs,” said Ramthum. “Our sliding scales are still too high for what we do with withholding people’s payroll. I want to see the middle scale come down because that’s where most of us are.”

As he was wrapping his speech up, Ramthum said that he is a huge proponent of agriculture.

“If there are no farms, there is no food,” said Ramthum. “Farmers are the salt of the Earth. They have been hurt for too many years with the foreclosure of dairy farms around the state. That will be a priority of mine in my administration.”

Ramthum also talked about the importance of stopping human and drug trafficking in Wisconsin.

“Sex trafficking and otherwise is a big deal in our nation and in our state,” said Ramthum. “It is a pandemic of sorts. Children, women and even men are being damaged for life.”

Talking about opioid problems in Wisconsin, Ramthum said that fentanyl is a major reason why there are overdoses in the state.

“Fentanyl is 100 times more potent than morphine,” said Ramthum. “We need to address the access, the care elements, the source elements — we need to address drug and opioid abuse and fentanyl as a big deal.”

Finally, Ramthum touched on his opinion of Wisconsin citizens exercising their Second Amendment rights.

“I am a huge proponent,” said Ramthum. “I would like to see Wisconsin be constitutional carry, day one. I would like to suggest that if we need to, to make Wisconsin a sanctuary state for Second Amendment rights.”

Survey indicates Pulaski referenda have support

Capital referendum scaled back to address expansion of two schools, other urgent needs

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

The Pulaski Community School District knows from a recent survey that residents support referenda to expand facilities and go past state-established budget caps, but it's also hoping residents will provide some additional details before going out for a vote in November.

The district held two listening sessions on July 18 at Sunnyside Elementary School in the Town of Chase and Pulaski High School in the hopes that people would give information on what projects would be supported if the school board decides to call for a November referendum. According to Superintendent Allison Space, the board would make its final decision sometime in August.

"The board had tasked the administrative team to have a couple more conversations about narrowing the scope, and so we've been working from the findings on the survey," Space said.

Parents are enthusiastically in support of both referenda, with 68% in favor of an operational referendum that would provide an additional $1.9 million annually on top of the established budget, and 64% supporting a $73.5 million capital referendum that would expand two elementary schools, replace major building systems that are aging, improve safety measures and provide additional technical education space at the high school.

However, parents and staff generally make up about 25% of voters at election time, with the other 75% consisting of people who have no children in the schools, according to Clint Selle, vice president for Bray Architects. Once the non-family and non-staff survey results were compiled, it's estimated that 51.5% of the community would favor the operational referendum, while the capital referendum would be on the bubble with 49.75% support.

"This is our grandparents, perhaps retired people, likely people that have no affiliation with our school district," Selle said. "These are the people that are voting."

To that effect, the district scaled back its capital referendum plans to only include the most urgent projects. Sunnyside is expected to reach Sunnyside Elementary School is one of two in the Pulaski School District where an increase in student growth is expected to exceed the building's capacity soon, so the district is holding listening sessions to find out what voters would favor if it asked for a capital referendum in November.

LEE PULASKI | NEW MEDIA

its capacity in a few years, but Hillcrest Elementary School in Hobart is already surpassing its capacity, so those two schools would be seeing expansions if the referendum gets the green light.

"At Hillcrest, there are portable classrooms going in this week to deal with that," Selle said. "As we look at the referendum, it's primarily the elementary capacity we're looking at."

Projects originally eyed for a capital referendum but could be taken off include renovations and expansion of the district's other three elementary schools, Fairview, Glenbrook and Lannoye; updates and renovations to the middle and high schools; adding an indoor turf facility, creating an additional multi-purpose area; and building a swimming pool at the high school. Although those projects had broad parent and staff support, the remainder of the community indicated in the survey it would vote no in higher numbers than yes.

If the capital referendum passes, it would add $1.18 to the tax rate.

The operational referendum, if it were to pass, would allow the school district to continue to make wage adjustments and provide teacher compensation without having to cut the number of staff drastically. Passing the operational referendum would result in an increase of 58 cents in the tax rate for the next five years, district officials estimate.

"This deals with retaining staff and obtaining new staff," said Mark Logan, the district's business services director. "This district has prided itself in low turnover, and when teachers come here, they stay here. That number is slightly increasing in recent years, so we're making sure we are competitive with our neighbors."

Even with the big hike in tax rates should both referenda pass, Pulaski's tax rate would remain below most of its neighboring districts, according to Logan. The current tax rate is $6.32 per $1,000 of equalized valuation, and both propositions would raise next year's rate to $8.18, which means the owner of a property valued at $100,000 can expect to pay $818 in taxes.

The survey received a 20% response rate, as 10,000 surveys were sent out district-wide. Selle noted that might seem like a low number, but any number over 400 surveys (4%, in Pulaski's case) provides validation that the survey results would reflect a future vote.

"We were well above that, and it just reinforces the margin of error, which they had at 2.25%," Selle said.

An operational referendum would go into effect right away, while the capital referendum results would likely not be finished until 2025, as there would still need to be design work into what the expansions and renovations would look like, according to Selle.

The district plans to hold one more listening session at 5:30 p.m. July 25 at Hillcrest Elementary School, 4193 Hillcrest Road, Hobart.

Local resident highlights experience with scam call

Police get several calls a week about scams

By LUKE REIMER
 Reporter

A local resident was on the receiving end of a scam call that stated they won $1.5 million, among other prizes, from Publishers Clearing House.

"They called me three different times," said Shawano resident Dennis Zapp. "We were supposed to meet the Publishers Clearing House van at Walmart. I drove around the parking lot looking for the Publishers Clearing House van, and it wasn't there."

After leaving, he said that he received another call from the same person, saying that Zapp did not meet them at Walmart. He added that the person asked if Zapp was still interested in $1.5 million, a 2022 Ford 150 and $7,000 a week for life.

"What he didn't realize is that I had his number on my cellphone," said Zapp. "I had Walmart look that number up to find out what area code is from. They did that for me and the area code was from Jamaica."

Zapp added that he never entered a contest for the prizes.

"I told them that I never entered a contest, and he didn't call me again," said Zapp.

Shawano Police Department Capt.

Shane Stange said that calls like these are very difficult to pursue.

"We have tried and to be honest it is very difficult," said Stange. "A lot of the times it's not only out of the state, but out of the country. We just encourage the public to contact law enforcement if they ever are questioning anything. If something is too good to be true, then it probably is."

Stange said that calls like this are becoming a problem in Shawano.

"I would say that every week, you get two or three people a week calling the police department with some sort of phone scam or a question that they have on the phone scam," said Stange. "Usually, we just try to inform people in the community how to stay safe with these."

Stange said there are a couple of things to look out for when someone receives a call like this.

"First, they should know that the government is not going to be asking for any of your personal information over the phone," said Stange. "You are not going to be arrested, as well. There is never a good reason to send cash money for a gift card. If they are unsure, just say, 'I am not going to make a decision right now, but you can send more information.'"

YOUR RIGHT TO KNOW

When transparency is treated with contempt

Most of the time, public officials in Wisconsin obey the state's openness laws. Sometimes, they need a little prodding from the courts. The recent conduct of Robin Vos and Michael Gableman is something altogether new, and deeply disturbing.

Both Vos, the speaker of the state Assembly, and Gableman, whom Vos hired at taxpayer expense (more than $1 million and counting) to look for fraud in the 2020 election, have been cited for contempt of court regarding open records requests.

Vos, the architect of a failed 2015 attempt to gut the state's open records law, was held in contempt by Dane County Circuit Judge Valerie Bailey-Rihn, for failing to produce records as ordered or explain why he couldn't. He responded by lashing out at Bailey-Rihn, calling her "a liberal judge in Dane County trying to make us look bad." Bailey-Rihn later opted not to impose penalties for contempt, but Vos (read: taxpayers) might yet have to pay associated legal costs.

Similarly, Dane County Circuit Judge Frank Remington found Gableman's Office of Special Counsel in court proceeding.

Gableman sneeringly refused to answer questions from Christa Westerberg, an attorney representing American Oversight, a group seeking records regarding Gableman's probe, and vice president of the Wisconsin Freedom of Information Council.

Gableman's conduct was "misogynistic" and "an affront to the judicial process and an insult to Atty. Westerberg," Remington wrote in his contempt order. "The circus Gableman created in the courtroom destroyed any sense of decorum and irreparably damaged the public's perception of the judicial process."

Gableman is appealing the $2,000-per-day penalty as "grossly contempt over its handling of records requests and referred the former justice to the Office of Lawyer Regulation for possible disciplinary action for his disgraceful conduct during a disproportionate to the violation."

At a subsequent hearing in which he managed to maintain his composure, Gableman admitted that he has routinely destroyed records he considers not relevant to his investigation.

"Did I delete documents? Yes, I did," he told the court. These include his notes from trips he took on the taxpayer's dime to Arizona to watch the widely ridiculed recount and to South Dakota to hear My Pillow founder Mike Lindell make baseless allegations of electoral fraud. ("I didn't find anything that I could use during that seminar," Gableman testified.)

Indiana attorney James Bopp Jr., representing Gableman's Office of Special Counsel, argued in an April 8 letter that, absent a pending records request, there is no statutory requirement that records be preserved. The Wisconsin Legislative Council, a nonpartisan service agency, had previously determined that this office was required to retain these records.

That's right — Bopp declared from his perch in Indiana that he knew more about Wisconsin's rules than the state itself. Gableman attained the same level of hubris in contending to reporters, "If I had to keep every scrap of paper, I would do nothing else. I would need a warehouse."

Really? A warehouse? How many taxpayer-funded records has Gableman destroyed?

In fact, released records reveal, among other things, that the work for which Gableman was pocketing $11,000 per month (it has since been cut in half) was, in the estimation of Judge Bailey-Rihn, "minimal." Gableman is now being sued again by American Oversight, over his destruction of records.

Clearly, the state Legislature must do a better job of ensuring that those it hires are complying with their obligations under the state's transparency laws. Robin Vos and Michael Gableman should be held accountable for treating these laws with contempt.

Bill Lueders, former editor and now editor-at-large of The Progressive, is president of the Wisconsin Freedom of Information Council, a group dedicated to open government. Your Right to Know is a monthly column distributed by the council.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Arrowood qualified to succeed Tauchen

To the editor:

I will be voting for Craig Arrowood in the 6th Wisconsin State Assembly District Republican primary on Aug. 9. I will do so because I know Craig to be intelligent, hard working and experienced in the functioning of the Assembly. He is knowledgeable about the issues that will come before the Assembly, has a Bachelor of Arts in political science, and he will communicate with his constituents about the issues.

I first learned of him when he started to work for Rep. Gary Tauchen in 2006. Tauchen told me that he found an excellent person to be a staffer in his office. He thought so highly of him that he promoted Craig to chief of staff in 2007.

I got to know Craig personally as I was still on the executive committee of the Republican Party of Wisconsin, and I helped Tauchen in all his re-election campaigns. Craig was always professional, personable, honest and open to the opinions of others.

At one time, Craig was committee clerk for the Assembly on various committees including elections and campaign Reform, small business, and agriculture.

Craig was born and raised in Shawano, knows the people and the issues and no candidate is more qualified to succeed Rep. Gary Tauchen and to represent us in the 6th Assembly District.

PUBLIC NOTICE

The U.S. Department of Commerce, Economic Development Administration (EDA) is considering a request for Federal assistance from Menominee Tribal Enterprises (MTE) to construct a Green Stacker Line and Replacement Building in Neopit, Menominee, Wisconsin to provide continued economic benefit to the Menominee Indian Tribe of Wisconsin into the future. Pursuant to the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 and the National Historic Preservation Act of 1966, as amended, EDA is conducting an environmental assessment (EA) of the proposed project.

The Sawmill Green Stacker Project will replace the existing underperforming, inefficient, high maintenance green stacker line with a new automated, high efficiency stacker line. The new stacker line will be installed on a slab on grade foundation housed inside a new prefabricated metal building. The project will be located at N3580 HWY 47 Neopit, Wisconsin 54135. The purpose of the project is to create new infrastructure that will be capable of housing a new green stacker line to include modern technology and equipment. Shawano Ski Sharks eager to keep up recent success at state

Several individual competitors also eyeing strong finishes

The Shawano Ski Sharks have had plenty of success at the Wisconsin State Water Ski Show Championships over the past few years and are ready to keep the trend going this week.

The Ski Sharks will be headed to South Wood County Park to compete on Lake Wazeecha over a couple of days. Several Ski Shark members will be competing on July 21 before the team competes together during the afternoon on July 22.

Shawano's string of success began in 2017 when the team won the Division 3 state title, which bumped the team up to Division 2 the following year. The better competition didn't intimidate the Ski Sharks, who shocked many by winning the 2018 D2 title.

The Ski Sharks placed 10th at the 2019 D1 championships while taking on teams often double their size. After the pandemic canceled the championships in 2020, the Ski Sharks put up another strong score at the D2 championships last summer, placing second.

"We won in 2018 and that put us up against the big boys in '19 and we were humbled quite well, but we came back last year, second place in Division 2," said team president Dave Passehl before the team's show on July 13. "Our goal obviously is to win. If we get bumped up to the big guys, then we'll see where we place the following year."

"We're hoping to get the title this year," said Carsten McHugh, this year's show director. "Everyone's been doing really great, the talent's been just amazing and I couldn't ask for much more from them. They've been putting the work in."

For those who can't make the trip to Wisconsin Rapids for the free state championships, fans who have attended any of the team's shows this summer can know that what they watched in Shawano is what the team is using at state.

"Everything that happens during the theme show is what we do at state," said McHugh. "We have 60 minutes to run the whole show, we have 20 minutes to set up and 10 minutes to tear down after that. It's really quick and goes by fast, but everyone just has to keep their heads on straight and it goes really well."

Passehl says the team sticks to entertaining its home fans first and foremost, but that by doing that, it also helps the team at the state championships. He added that the increased crowd sizes at this summer's home shows should help the team on the big stage at state.

He added that even though some weeks the team can struggle during its Wednesday shows, they can get to state and be among the best in the state.

"You get to the tournament and you're like, 'Holy cow, we really are good,'" said Passehl, adding that the underdog mentality that the team often takes with them seems to help them out.

"We're very confident when we get there. We roll in with all our beautiful sponsored boats. We pull in like a D1 team, but with a D2 size. We roll in there pretty confident."

Individual competitors

During the individual competition July 21, Faith Passehl and Faith McHugh will compete in the swivel competition.

Passehl placed second in the competition a year ago and is hoping to leave Wisconsin Rapids this year as the top swiveler.

"I have set very high expectations for myself, especially with placing second last year," said Passehl. "You go there and it could be anyone's day, especially in an individual thing like that. I have a very technically difficult routine set up for myself.

"The lineup is always very good, Wisconsin is insanely good with their swivel competitors. Now that I know I can compete with the top people, and have a chance to go to D1 Nationals, it gets my adrenaline pumping. I'm very excited — I'm nervous, but just the idea of taking first and being able to go to D1 Nationals just really makes me more excited and makes me want to work harder."

Faith McHugh also competed in the swivel competition at state last summer, taking ninth.

Carsten McHugh and his cousin Jessa Jochman will be competing in the strap doubles competition, along with Brad Keuschel and Kylie Wallace also teaming up in that competition.

Keuschel and Wallace came in third last year at state, while McHugh and Jochman placed sixth.

Keuschel and Wallace were given a bid to compete at D1 Nationals after their third-place finish last year but instead decided to compete in the D2 Nationals event, because the Ski Sharks were hosting it.

"This year, we hope to do as well or better than we did last year, get our D1 qualifier and then go to D1 and see how well we can do against the best," said Keuschel.

Cody Siolka is also expected to compete in the freestyle competition under the Ski Sharks' name, even though he's not on the team this summer.

Sobiesczyk wins IMCA Sport Mod race just in time

Bennett, Yarie, Van Straten, Westphal secure other feature wins

By SCOTT J. OWEN
Special to NEW Media

Halloween at Shawano Speedway brought the kids out in droves in search of candy. The racing was just as sweet.

Tyler Sobiesczyk lost an engine just as he took the checkered flag for his third win of the year. Joel Bennett held off Ron Berna and Nick Anvelink for his second Late Model win. Marcus Yarie scored his first IMCA Modified win of the year. Travis Van Straten outdueled Dan Michonski for win No. 2 in the IMCA Stock Car feature, while Tanner Westphal nailed down his fourth Mighty 4 win.

Gunner Frank took the lead to start the Late Model feature as Bennett quickly gave chase. Frank's night ended on lap six as he made a hard left turn to pit lane. Bennett took over the lead as Berna and Anvelink applied the pressure in second and third.

Troy Springborn soon broke through the pack and began tracking down the leaders. Bennett ran a mistake-free race in front of two of the best to wheel a Late Model at the Shawano Speedway.

With two laps to go, Berna was glued to the back of Bennett. As the leaders approached the tail of the field on the final lap of the race, Bennett moved to the outside of Shawn Miller to put him a lap down as Miller spun to bring out a caution.

Bennett secured the win followed by Berna, Anvelink, Springborn and Luke Postl.

Yarie started outside row one of the IMCA Modified feature and went the distance, leading all 20 laps of the race. Tony Wedelstadt and Rob Charapata battled for second for numerous laps.

Wedelstadt finished second. Charapata had to settle for third. Jerry Wilinski and Jordan Bartz rounded out the top five.

Vern Stedjee grabbed the early lead in the IMCA Stock Car feature before Dan Michonski moved to his outside to snag the lead on lap five.

Van Straten passed Stedjee to move to second on lap six.

Longtime adversaries, Michonski and Van Straten soon began a high-speed chess match that would last the rest of the race. Van Straten was able to drive in deeper down low in turn one of the the speedway while Michonski raced the high line and continued to lead.

In turns three and four Michonski preferred a lower line. Their side-by-side duel continued until lap 17, when Van Straten took the lead. Michonski quickly crossed Van Straten over and began to run the lowside with Van Straten up high. Michonski continued to pressure Van Straten, but could not muster a pass.

In the end it was Van Straten followed by Michonski, Stedjee, Trent Nolan and Jordan Barkholtz.

Looking to put a season of bad luck behind him with a heat win earlier in the night, AJ Springborn grabbed the lead at the start of the IMCA Northern Sport Modified feature. As he led, Sobiesczyk moved to second.

Springborn's bad luck continued, though, as he spun while leading on lap five to bring out a caution flag and send him to the rear of the field. Sobiesczyk inherited the lead on the restart and was immediately pressured by Jeffery Teske until Teske spun on lap five.

When the race went back green, Sobiesczyk held serve the rest of the event. The final lap of the race Sobiesczyk began to show smoke. As he took the checkered flag, the motor expired in a cloud of smoke.

Travis Rhoades was able to advance from ninth to finish second. Max Oreskovich took third, while Bryce Clements finished fourth. Teske raced back through the field to finish fifth.

In Mighty 4 action, Tanner Westphal rocketed from ninth to first on lap one and never looked back. Lucas Hacker fought his way to second, Jody Cornelius, Lexi Michonski and Carl King completed the top five.

Racing will continue July 23, with $5,000 on the line to win the IMCA Modified feature and $2,500 to win the IMCA Stock Car feature. Full results and more information can be found online at www.ShawanoSpeedway.net.

The Shawano and Bonduel Legion baseball teams split a pair of games on July 14 in Shawano.

Shawano took game one 11-6, which was a completion of a suspended July 4 game. Bonduel then held on late for a 6-5 win in game two.

Shawano led 4-0 heading into the bottom of the fourth inning on July 4 when heavy rains fell in Bonduel and postponed the conclusion of the contest.

The four runs all came in the third inning. Ashton Henning belted a two-run homer to right-center field to plate Carson Popp. Andrew Popp later scored on an error before Jacob Polzin singled home Braedyn Kowalkowski.

Henning was on the mound for the July 4 game and also was pitching when the game resumed. He ended up getting an additional eight outs before being replaced by Polzin, who got the final four outs.

A couple of Shawano errors allowed Bonduel's Jack Johnson to score in the bottom of the fourth, making it 4-1. Shawano got the run right back, with Kowalkowski scoring on a Polzin groundout.

The Patriots tacked on another run in the sixth and looked to be in cruise control when Zac Jurmu scored on a wild pitch, but the Grizzlies tightened things back up with a four-run sixth.

Garrett Engel, Charlie Tauchen and Reece Stoltenow each drew bases-loaded walks, scoring Johnson, Brett Margelofsky and Noah Weier. Cole Anderson earned a RBI the hard way, being plunked by a pitch to force in Mason Bohm.

The back-and-forth affair continued as Shawano put up five runs in the seventh. Polzin plated Kowalkowski on a single for the first run before Dylan Hodkiewicz drove in Carsen Herm and Parker Beyer on a single. A Bonduel error allowed Hodkiewicz and Brady Hannes to each cross home plate.

Most of the damage done in the frame came on well-placed hits.

"If we get down in the count, we're down 0-2, your goal should be to put the ball in play," said Polzin. "You're more likely to get runners moving when you put the ball in play, so as long as we can do that, good things can happen for us."

Bonduel scored once in the seventh, as Weier singled in Margelofsky, but Polzin was able to induce a groundout to end the contest.

Mason Bohm started the July 4 game for Bonduel and worked the four innings. Weier began the resumed game on the hill and got the final nine outs.

home Margelofsky with two outs. Shawano came back with two runs in its half of the second. Kowalkowski scored after a Jurmu single and Bonduel error. With the bases loaded, Bryce Popp scored on a Henning chopper to third, with Jurmu being called safe on a close force play at third. Bonduel scored its final five runs in the third inning. The Grizzlies took advantage of three Patriots' errors in the frame.

Weier scored on the second error of the inning before Johnson drew a bases-loaded walk to plate courtesy runner Mason Zuleger. Anderson drove in Stoltenow on a sacrifice fly for another run before the third Shawano error allowed Margelofsky and Johnson to both score.

After the two-run second inning, Bohm settled in and allowed just one more run in the fourth. Shawano's Carson Popp drove in Hodkiewicz on a sacrifice fly to center, with Johnson making a sliding catch on the play.

Bohm ended up working five innings to earn the win on the hill. "I really struggled there in the middle of my outing today. I started off well, and then things didn't go well, but I got back to it," said Bohm. "At the end of the day, I just got to throw strikes and trust my guys to make plays behind me."

Tauchen pitched the sixth inning for the Grizzlies. The inning started with a single and walk before a fielder's choice play had runners on first and third with one down. Engel, the Grizzlies' catcher, threw out a runner trying to steal second before Tauchen got a strikeout to end the threat.

Cade Johnson worked the seventh for Bonduel to finish off the win. Shawano got within two when Kowalkowski singled in Henning and then within a run when Andrew Popp scored on an error, but Johnson got a flyout to center to end the contest.

Bonduel keeps wealth of history in archives

Volunteers needed, visitors welcome from all over

By NICOLE HIXSON
Correspondent

Nestled on a quiet side street off a busy stretch of downtown Bonduel, the Bonduel Community Archives stands proudly as the entrusted repository of the artifacts relating to the history of Bonduel.

This volunteer-run organization, founded in 1991, is a great resource for anyone interested in learning more about Bonduel and its surrounding communities and past businesses, or those researching genealogy.

Located at 108 S. First St. in Bonduel in a large, two-story home, the archives contain room after room of well-organized and safely preserved documents and object artifacts. Currently, it holds family surname files, donor files, church records, closed business records, photographs, plot books, maps, local newspapers, original census records, cemetery records and a wide variety of other objects and documents.

These records are available for individual research and inspection in person or can be accessed by contacting one of the many helpful volunteers who help make the archives the organization that it is today. The facility offers a photocopy service at reasonable rates. Copies of records and photographs can be mailed or scanned, as well.

When visiting, guests can purchase mementos in the back of the building at the archives' gift shop. Currently offered for sale are past issues of The Historian, the archives' newsletter which shares some of the many stories and photographs of early Bonduel. In addition, reprints of old photographs from Bonduel's early days are offered for sale as unique souvenirs.

Visitors can also meet enthusiastic volunteers such as Mark Jensen, who are excited to share the history of Bonduel and the role of the archives. Jensen is happy to provide a tour of the many rooms and files the archives holds.

"I wish more people would come," he said, noting that when visitors "stumble across something interesting, then they're hooked. It's a lot of fun, and I wish I knew more." Jensen ensures that visitors who are careful will be allowed to handle the materials for closer examination.

Volunteer Mark Jensen searches for business records in one of the many file cabinets at the Bonduel Community Archives.

There is certainly a lot in the archives that is interesting. One collection of materials of particular interest are its collection of Bonduel Times newspapers from the 1930s through the 1970s.

"They would run little town stories about what was going on in the local and personal ads, like who was coming to visit or who had a party," Jensen said. "They would run up to the newspaper in town and get their story in the newspaper."

An interesting piece in the front office is the original 1897 postmaster's desk.

"The railroad came in 1905, and people would come to the post office to pick up their mail," Jensen said. "There were just 20 boxes at that time. It's changed."

The building itself has an interesting history and stories attached to it, as well. Originally belonging to the Froehlich family, it was donated in 1991 to hold Bonduel's artifacts and collections.

Referring to a room upstairs, "The old family that lived here called this the naked room, but we don't know why," Jensen said.

The archives not only serve local residents, but sometimes interested parties from out of state who are looking for help in researching their family history. Jensen tells of a woman from Florida who called just that morning to seek information on her family who used to live in the area. He was able to immediately assist the woman in finding the records she was searching for. Jensen encourages everyone, especially those who are nearby, to come and visit as they are sure to have fun discovering more about Bonduel's beginnings and development over time.

Not only acting as a storehouse for relics of the town's past, the archives also offers events that assist with fundraising and bringing the present community together. On Aug. 7, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. a pie and ice cream social will take place at the archives. In celebration of Bonduel's Founders Day on Sept. 17, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. the archives will be organizing a chili dump.

The year's final planned event, a holiday bake sale, is from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Dec. 9 at Bonduel State Bank, 130 N. Cecil St., Bonduel.

The archives is always in need of volunteers, and there are lots of ways to become involved. Help is needed to staff the archives during open hours and to help organize records. Writers are needed for The Historian, and extra hands for this year's upcoming events are always appreciated.

Jensen acknowledges that "technology is an issue" with the archives as it is trying to digitize some records. But he says they need volunteers to help scan and upload. The goal is to make all of the archives' records accessible online for easy searching. Individuals with an interest in volunteering are encouraged to reach out to the archives directly to make arrangements.

For those interested in providing financial support while learning more about Bonduel's past, a variety of annual and lifetime memberships are offered to help support the archives. All memberships come with a subscription to The Historian and an acknowledgment of support.

The archives are currently open Wednesdays 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Saturdays 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. For information, call 715-758-2687 or visit the archives' Facebook page to find details on upcoming events and to see a selection of photos from their collection.

Stories in the walls of rural schoolhouses

Wittenberg Historical Society to host discussion about them

By EVAN J. PRETZER

Education is something that has changed with time and, on July 24, the Wittenberg Area Historical Society will highlight the way things used to be during a free afternoon gathering with Susan Apps-Bodilly.

The teacher with decades of experience across elementary and middle-school education has written a book titled "One Room Schools: Stories from the Days of 1 Room, 1 Teacher, 8 Grades." She will be discussing her book and the history of local rural schoolhouses at the WOWSPACE.

Carla Strassburg, president of the historical society, said these buildings became the heart of education in the area today, and there has been a lot of interest from local people with first-hand experiences.

"A lot are just gone," she said. "They've been torn down, and they've been gone for a long time. We have pictures of them, and we found out there are approximately 57 one-room schoolhouses that after a while were all combined into the Wittenberg-Birnamwood School District. It has been pretty positive. It has caused quite a bit of conversation. I went to a senior meal site one day, and some were like 'Oh, I never went to a one-room schoolhouse,' but then a couple of the younger ones said, 'Well, I did' ... I think we are going to a positive response and good crowd."

At the gathering, people will have the opportunity to purchase Apps-Bodilly's book and donate old photos, records and other memorabilia from this era which ended in the 1950s and 1960s in Wisconsin. Strassburg says a lot of this sort of material has come in already to a high degree.

"I think we are done collecting things," Strassburg said. "It has been a pretty community-wide effort. We have a couple of interviews with former teachers and are hoping to get some more."

Of course, not all who know history are moved by it. Some dismiss the past and focus on the now. For Strassburg, however, this event is important to the present, too, because it helps show how things today were built on those from yesterday and, sometimes, the past is good to look to.

"It might give a little bit of perspective on education in general," she said. "(Think of) how important people back then thought it was. They were willing to put forth effort to make sure students could learn. Families and neighbors would cut firewood; they would help clean with special events, and it puts a light on what's going on today with our education. Everybody's so up in arms about what we can and cannot teach; maybe this will give a little better perspective."

Apps-Bodilly could not be reached for comment about her upcoming appearance.

The historical society's free event kicks off at noon and runs until 3 p.m., with Apps-Bodilly speaking at 1 p.m. The WOWSPACE is located at 114 W. Vinal St. in Wittenberg.

MLB draft pick teaches baseball in Gillett

Wagner works with clients at New View Industries

By LUKE REIMER
Reporter

A recent Major League Baseball draft pick experienced a different audience of baseball in Gillett recently.

Green Bay Preble graduate, current Clemson University third baseman and 2022 Baltimore Orioles second-round draft pick Max Wagner visited New View Industries on July 12 to teach and play baseball with their clients.

New View Industries provides vocational services to the disabled in Oconto County.

"We just put on a small, fun clinic, so clients could participate in a new baseball experience," said New View Industries case manager Dustin Coopman.

Coopman said the event was organized in order to add another new experience for their clients.

"We always love to give new experiences to our people," said Coopman. "We saw this as a great opportunity to connect with Max and get to learn about his journey. It was nice to get our folks outside and playing some baseball with him."

Wagner said that giving back to the community and seeing others enjoy baseball has always been a big part of who he is.

"Most people are God's angels and always have smiles on their faces, so it is always fun to spend time with others in the community who like baseball," said Wagner. "I was born and raised in Green Bay — I volunteer with the Miracle League — I want to help out small towns who don't get attention. That is the kid that I have always been."

Wagner, along with his father Paul and case workers at New View Industries walked the adults and teenagers through three different stations, including hitting, aiming throws and long toss. Wagner then signed autographs after the field work.

"One reason why I do this is to see all of the smiling faces," said Wagner. "Everyone is in a different situation, so it is fun to see everyone just make the most out of every opportunity. It is just fun to be with them."

Coopman said everyone involved in the event left smiling and talking about how they had a good time.

Max Wagner watches and coaches New View Industries' clients swing and hit whiffle balls off of a tee at Zippel Park in Gillett on July 12. Wagner said that giving back to the community has always been a part of his mission as a baseball player.

"Everyone enjoyed the different stations and meeting Max," said Coopman. "Just doing something physical outside made everyone have a fun experience."

He added that participating in events like this is very important to New View Industries.

"Everyone loves it," said Coopman. "Interacting with other people from the community and learning new experiences is very important to us."

Through Coopman's point of view, he said that he was as excited as those participating in the stations to see their reactions.

"It was really cool to meet Max and to see him interact with our folks," said Coopman. "It was really cool to see how happy everyone was to participate."

Even though Wagner has played two seasons for the University of Clemson and is a recent MLB draft pick, he said that continuing to meet and play baseball with those who may not get his opportunity is still a priority for him.

"I want to be a part of my community and give back where I can" Wagner said.

Coopman said that a goal of New View Industries is to get outside and give clients the opportunity to experience different sports and games.

"We try to be community-oriented, get involved with different events in the community and enrich their lives," said Coopman. "This helps our folks to feel involved and know that they have supports. This gives them the chance to enjoy an opportunity just like any everyday person."

Moving forward in his baseball career, Wagner said that doing things like teaching baseball will help him in the mental aspect of the sport.

"With baseball being such a hard sport, knowing that there are people with smiles on their faces and that are happy helps me in that aspect," said Wagner. "I always come back to working with these kids and adults and they couldn't care less what happens. It is just a bright spot for me."

Wagner, a sophomore who was 2022 Player of the Year in the Atlantic Coast Conference, joins a list of players including former Milwaukee Brewer Ryan Braun as ACC Players of the Year drafted into the MLB.

Bow clubs host 3-D archery, other contests

Area bowhunters will have several opportunities to hone their shooting skills in a wooded setting next month as two archery clubs host 3-D archery competitions.

If bowhunting isn't your thing, you can still shoot in the clubs' field archery contests.

ROSS BIELEMA

Hunters recently rebuilt 17 of its 28 wood-framed field targets, according to club president Jim Schoenike. The frames hold bag-style targets with cardboard deer silhouette targets attached to the front. A sheet of heavy rubber behind each target stops any stray arrows that miss the mark, potentially saving a valuable carbon or aluminum arrow. Club treasurer Mike Bevernitz used his carpentry skills to rebuild the frames, which are designed to be left outside so club members can use them almost any time.

Field archery pre-dates the more recent sport of 3-D archery. As the name implies, targets are three-dimensional and typically animal-shaped, with popular game animals like deer, elk, bears, antelope, bobcats and other critters laid out on an extensive wooded course. Field targets are flat, cardboard deer or other options, and cost an archery club much less than the expensive foam Reinhart or McKenzie targets, which can cost hundreds of dollars each.

Field archery courses normally include known distances from the shooting position to the target, and are marked on stakes. Three-dimensional courses normally do not include distance markings to help bowhunters practice their range-estimation skills in preparation for the shot.

Most high-speed compound bows today have precision sights with closely bundled sight pins; if a bowhunter guesses the wrong yardage and therefore the wrong pin, it's likely the shot will miss by several feet or more. Some clubs allow shooters to use digital rangefinders, while others do not.

Both the Clintonville Bow Hunters and the Shawano Archery Club welcome non-members to the club shoots. These events are a good time to meet club members, fling a few arrows to get the cobwebs off your equipment (and muscles), and perhaps even join.

First up is a Clintonville Bow Hunt-

Clintonville Bow Hunters president Jim Schoenike shoots his compound bow at a club practice field target in preparation for the club's upcoming 3-D archery shoots next month.

ROSS BIELEMA

ers 3-D shoot Aug. 6-7 at the 28-target club course, N11517 Boy Scout Lane, Clintonville. Hours are 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Aug. 6 and 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. Aug. 7. Food and beverages are available. Various categories are available at sign-up, depending on your equipment and age. Entry fee is $10 for adults, $2 for age 14 and under, which includes hot dogs, chips and soda. There are no cash prizes.

Shawano Archery Club has a Two-Man Scramble 3-D shoot Aug. 13 at the club range, N5820 Old Lake Road, Shawano. Each two-person team must register for the 20-target event by 11 a.m., with a shotgun start for the event at 11:30 a.m. Hunter's rules apply. The fee is $40 per team with a 70% cash payback.

The Shawano club will host a unique Cricket Tournament shoot Aug. 26. This two-person event combines darts and archery, with the paper targets resembling a dart board and scored the same, explained club president Rick Habeck. Registration begins at 7 p.m. and shooting is under the lights. Food and drinks are available at both Shawano shoots. The fee is $30 per team with a 70% payback. Contact Habeck at 715-853-6800 for more information.

Clintonville Bow Hunters offers its second 3-D shoot Aug. 27-28, again featuring the club's 28 targets but with a fresh set-up. Hours are the same as the Aug. 6-7 event. Entry fee is $10 for adults, $2 for age 14 and under, which includes hot dogs, chips and soda. The club also features its reverse raffle on Aug. 27, with only 300 tickets sold. All tickets are drawn and placed on a large board. Every 10th ticket wins $50, the 100th and 200th tickets drawn win $200 and the last ticket wins $1,000. Those present for the 6 p.m. drawing can enjoy free beer.

The club, currently at 35 members, is trying to gain new members. In addition to the club ranges, members may hunt on two land parcels totaling 353 acres for a modest fee after a one-year probation period, Schoenike said. His grandfather, John Schoenike, founded the club and donated the land for the club's range and hunting woods. At one time, John Schoenike's Stalker Archery Co. in Clintonville was the largest archery shop in Wisconsin.

"He was right on Highway 45 on the way up north for the bowhunters," his grandson said. "He sold thousands of bows and many thousands of arrows." John, an avid bowhunter, died in 1996, but his legacy lives on with the club.

In 1940, John was one of only five hunters to kill a deer with a bow. He received a personal letter from state natural resources staff congratulating him on his harvest. That letter remains one of Jim's most prized possessions.

Wisconsin was the first state to have an archery deer season. Bill McCrary's book, "The History of Wisconsin Bowhunting," includes a section about John Schoenike. The book is available through Wisconsin Bowhunters Association in Clintonville and online.

Kitty Werner explains to the Oconto County Genealogical Society how to access information on its website, which also provides information on family history and is in the process of digitizing the county's newspapers for anyone researching the history of the area.

KATHRYN HENNES

County's past can be found with click or two

Genealogical society makes it easy to find history, dearly departed

By KATHRYN HENNES
Correspondent

Efforts to preserve local history through digitization were laid out July 14 during a meeting of the Oconto County Genealogical Society.

The goal of Digitize Oconto County is to preserve the history of the county for future generations, one page at a time collecting information from early newspapers, to make county history accessible to everyone online, and to make newspapers searchable.

The speaker, Kitty Werner, is from Oconto and is the webmaster for the Oconto County Historical Society, the genealogical society and Digitize Oconto County. The genealogical society website can be found at <https://www.wiocgs.org>.

Werner gave information on what the contents contained and how to use the website. Categories on the website include cemetery information, Digitize Oconto County, family history, schools, newsletters, research help and more.

To find the location of the burial plot of someone who has died, users can click on cemetery information and then click on cemetery transcriptions. The site will give users several options to use to search for people whose remains are buried in a particular cemetery. There are several ways to search for a name such as exact match, start with, sounds like, and contains. The "exact match" search may not give a person the results as easily as another search format might.

On the list of names that appears, if the record number is red, that means there was an obituary. If the number is blue, no obituary was found. Users can click on the red number to view the information of what newspaper it was printed, the date it appeared, and the birth and death dates of the deceased.

If a search does not give users the information needed, they can try Find A Grave, the national cemetery data base.

The Digitize Oconto County section of the OCGS website contains digitized copies of newspapers from 17 different publishers. The oldest digitized newspaper is from 1859, and the site has a search area to enter information.

Jay Merline, president of OCGS, collects articles from old newspapers from around the area depicting historical events. The articles are submitted and digitized for family members or the general public to view or obtain a copy.

There is a donation of $3 per issue for a copy. For information, please send inquiries to: digitizeoconto@gmail.com or wicgs@gmail.com or visit the Oconto County Genealogical Society Facebook page.

Sharie Merline, Jay's wife and secretary for OCGS, updates and maintains the genealogical records and the family history room at the Suring Village Hall.

Spreemans surprised by new barn quilt

Ken and Linda Spreeman have sponsored Shawano County's 388th barn quilt, which now adorns their barn at N5027 Oakcrest Drive, east of Shawano. The name of the quilt pattern is "Diamond Cross."

Neither of the Spreemans were home when the quilt was mounted on their barn. When Ken saw it for the first time, he said, "It's the prettiest one I've seen yet."

"We just love the vibrant colors and how much it stands out on our barn," Linda added.

The farm was established in 1850. In 1874, a warranty deed was issued by Michael and Caroline Friend to Carl Marquardt. Later, Julius Marquardt took over until he sold it to Arthur and Tomah Backhaus in 1920. They owned it until they sold it to Leo and Hilda Uelmen in 1943, who then sold it to David and Gladys Uelmen in 1962.

Ken Spreeman grew up on a farm just north of where he and Linda now live. So when they were able to purchase the farm in 1994, they were especially excited since it adjoined Ken's home farm. On the home farm, they had a herd of about 60 Holstein milk cows, which they sold about seven years ago.

After Ken and Linda moved to their farm in 1994, they raised the heifers for the home farm. Now, their daughter Erica, her husband, Jason Eggert, and their three children raise several steers, some chickens and goats. Most of the cropland is rented out.

Ken and Linda love the fact that their daughter and her family live next door.

"They help a lot with upkeep on the farm and also have a garden," Linda said.

Erica is a nurse in the surgery department at ThedaCare Medical Center-Shawano, and Jason teaches technology education at Shawano Community High School.

Along with their daughter, Ken and Linda also have a son, Jaken, and another daughter, Holly. Jaken also helps on the farm whenever he is needed.

Thinking about their farm upbringing and the experiences their grandchildren are getting, Linda said, "The old family farms/barns are absolute. We want to preserve our heritage of farming and are very proud to be able to do that."

JIM LEUENBERGER

Ken and Linda's barn quilt is the second one on a Spreeman barn on Oakcrest Drive. The first one is on Ken's home farm at N5133 Oakcrest Drive, which was put up in October 2011.

The Spreemans' barn quilt was painted by the Shawano County barn quilt committee and was put up by LeRoy and Keenan Raddant, who work for Raddant Electric in Shawano.

CMN, NWTC sign off on teaching degree plan

The College of Menominee Nation and Northeast Wisconsin Technical College signed an articulation agreement in June. This agreement will provide an easy transfer process for students from NWTC who wish to further their education to enter CMN's Bachelor of Science degree in elementary/middle school education.

Students from NWTC must successfully complete their associate degree in early childhood education, meet the admission requirements from CMN, declare their major for the Bachelor of Science degree and meet any other requirements outlined by the teacher education department. This agreement will take effect Aug. 1 — just before the beginning of this academic year.

"There is such a need for highly qualified daycare, Head Start and licensed school teachers, and this articulation agreement gives NWTC graduates an opportunity to effortlessly continue their educational journey at the College of Menominee Nation," said Dr. Kelli Chelberg with the CMN teacher education department.

"The articulation agreement shows a working partnership between our two institutions that is in the best interest of our students," said Geraldine Sanapaw, CMN chief academic officer. "This agreement will serve as a pathway to creating more agreements that will benefit our communities."

CMN has offered a bachelor's degree in early childhood/middle childhood since 2012, but the teacher education program has recently received approval from the Wisconsin Department of Public Instruction to offer an elementary/middle school license. Additionally, CMN's education degree has seen an increase in popularity due to a higher demand for licensed teachers.

Yearly Review

Plenty of memorable moments during 2021-22 seasons

This special All-Region Review section marks the end of 2021-22 coverage of high school athletics in the area. What a year it was.

MORGAN RODE

The reason this section originated was to help shine an even brighter spotlight on area sports athletes and teams. Let me tell you, I had no idea how difficult it would be to determine athletes and teams of the year, but that just goes to show the amount of talent in the area.

It seemed that no matter what sports were being played, there was always an area team or two vying for the conference title. Every season included multiple conference players of the year, and there were a handful of area coaches that were also recognized for their team's strong seasons.

With the entire year now wrapped up and having some time to reflect on it all, I thought it would be fun to revisit some of the top moments and games.

Let's begin with the fall season. While the temperatures were beginning to drop, the sports action was just heating up.

The high school football season was incredible, with several teams in the hunt for conference titles and some really intense regular season games along the way.

I came into the school year expecting a fun and exciting year and was treated to a thrilling contest between Oconto Falls and Oconto for my first football game. It was a low-scoring, defensive battle, with Oconto Falls prevailing in the final minute with a couple of clutch plays.

I got my first look at the Wittenberg-Birnamwood football team a couple weeks later and quickly learned that the Chargers would not only be one of the top teams in the area, but also the entire state. It was a blast getting to cover the Chargers during their deep postseason run, which included one of the top games in the state when Witt-Birn edged conference foe Amherst.

While area football teams were making postseason runs, the Pulaski boys soccer team was doing the same, with three shutout wins earning the team a regional title.

Witt-Birn and Gresham served as the top volleyball teams in the area, with each team winning conference titles. The talent didn't stop there though, as just about every area team had at least one player that I deemed must watch.

CONGRATULATIONS ATHLETES, COACHES, AND TEAMS!

Cross-country runners and teams continued to impress in the fall, with several eventually qualifying for state. It isn't often I get too overwhelmed trying to capture photos of area athletes at events, but state cross-country was one of those because of the amount of athletes across several different teams.

Girls golfers in the area continued to shine, with several qualifying for sectionals, while Pulaski's Taya Schmidt capped a solid year for girls swim teams with an individual state appearance.

The winter season was a mixed bag of emotions, with plenty of triumphs and some absolutely heartbreaking finishes.

We'll start with the positive of Oconto Falls wrestler Clayton Whiting. What a treat it was to get to watch him wrestle over the past four years, and it was extremely satisfying to see him stand atop the state podium a fourth time after learning of all the work and time he puts into the sport.

Whiting was just one of 16 state qualifiers in the area, so that was another time where it got a touch overwhelming to keep track of all the area athletes. A number of those wrestlers placed at state, putting a bow on yet another successful season.

While there wasn't a whole lot of team success for boys basketball, the individual talent was off the charts. It was always fun to watch opposing teams try to take away those players, only for adjustments to be made and big games still achieved.

Girls basketball teams enjoyed a little more success, with Bonduel and

Gillett's Alex Peterson, center, lines up for the 3,200-meter run during the State Track and Field Championships on June 4 at Veterans Memorial Stadium in La Crosse. MORGAN RODE | NEW MEDIA

Gresham tying for conference titles.

As you might know, the Bonduel program has turned in several deep postseason runs over the past few seasons, and they did it again in the winter. The Bears took down a nemesis in Crandon on their way to a sectional title game, which might have been the most intense sporting event I covered this year.

Bonduel fell behind early on but battled all the way back to tie it in the final moments, only to have a last-second heave from Westfield win it (video is posted on the NEW Media Inc. Sports YouTube page). It was absolutely gut-wrenching to watch it happen live, but was one of the few times I could safely say the losing team left it all on the playing surface and really should have no regrets.

In the pool, Pulaski's T.J. Shaw swam his way to state for the top moment in the boys swim season.

Connor Heezen and Eric Sperruto continued the theme of Pulaski athletes qualifying for state this spring when they made it to the big stage for boys tennis.

On the softball diamond, the girls from Bonduel carried over their success from the basketball season, turning in a perfect regular season before claiming a regional title. The Bears were part of another one of the top events I got to witness, but came up short in a tight sectional semifinal contest.

Shawano and Marion each won conference titles for baseball. Shawano and Lena went on to win regional titles. The Hawks' run at a state bid fell short after a seventh-inning rally in a sectional semifinal game fell just short.

Another top sporting event from this spring ended in a loss for a local team, but it wasn't for lack of effort. The Pulaski girls soccer team battled 100 minutes with Green Bay Southwest in a sectional semifinal match before eventually falling in penalty kicks. I don't think I've ever been more nervous at a sporting event than I was that evening.

On the golf course, there was good individual and team play. Many of the area's golfers traded top finishes throughout the season before a few teams and one individual qualified for sectionals. That individual, Witt-Birn's Calvin Scheurer, ended up representing the area at state to end the season.

The state track and field meet quickly became something I looked forward to every year, and there were plenty of headlines made at state this spring. Several individuals and a relay team finished on the podium, and a number of them barely missed out on state titles.

All in all, it was an incredible year of sports across the three seasons.

While some of the heartbreaking finishes stick out, they also serve as stories of grittiness and show that the area is more than capable of producing some of state's top teams. Only one team can stand victorious at the end of it all, so don't let that diminish the fun and memories you made getting to those points.

For the athletes that have graduated and are moving on to the next phases of their lives, best of luck to you. To the remaining high school athletes, enjoy the rest of your summers, and then let's get back to making more memories this coming year.

Shawano's Lowney named top boys athlete

Athlete starred in football, basketball and track and field

By MORGAN RODE
Sports Editor

Shawano Community High School athlete Elliott Lowney endured an up-and-down finish to his high school athletic career.

Lowney battled through some adversity and was a big contributor in all three sports he competed in, helping him earn the NEW Media Inc. Boys Athlete of the Year honor.

"What helped me be successful in all my sports was the dedication during the summer and not let anything distract me from what I wanted to accomplish," said Lowney.

Lowney, a Bemidji State University football commit, had big expectations for himself and the Shawano football team coming into the season.

Things got off to a strong start for the Hawks when Lowney scored a touchdown in the first quarter of a game against Denmark, but the star receiver was tackled in the end zone and he suffered a broken collarbone.

A couple days after sustaining the injury, Lowney tweeted, "I have decided to have surgery and am out for 6-8 weeks cutting it close with the end of the season."

"After I broke my collarbone, I wasn't even sure if I was going to have a senior football season, but after a quick surgery and some convincing to my doctor, I got to get back and got to help the team make the playoffs for the third year in a row," said Lowney.

Lowney returned to the field against Winneconne — only missing five games — and immediately got back to producing for the Hawks, but not without some fear in the back of his mind.

"When my doctor gave me the OK to play I was a little hesitant because it still was not fully healed and I was not even fully cleared to lift weights so going in to the first game I knew I just had to get past that first hit and then I knew I was going to be OK," said Lowney.

Lowney had three catches for

MORGAN RODE | NEW MEDIA

34 yards against Winneconne, but dominated the rest of the regular season.

Against Seymour the following week, he caught nine passes for 181 yards and two scores. He caught seven passes for 172 yards and two more scores against Fox Valley Lutheran and then hauled in 11 passes for 130 yards and a score against Menasha.

So in his four games and opening quarter, Lowney still managed 32 receptions for 627 yards and six touchdowns, still putting him among the top receivers in the state. His 125 yard per game average was second in the state.

As Lowney mentioned, he helped the Hawks make the playoffs for a third straight season. Shawano had just three playoff appearances ever when Lowney began his high school career.

Lowney then turned his attention to the basketball season and helped the team to a strong 16-9 overall finish and third place tie in the tough Bay Conference.

Lowney served as the primary point guard for Shawano. He attacked the basket often, averaging 6.6 points per contest to go along with 3.4 assists.

He was a pest on defense, often picking up opponents full court and disrupting their offensive flow. He averaged 3.1 rebounds and 2.2 steals a game.

Lowney capped his athletic career at Shawano competing on the track and field team in the spring.

He primarily competed in the 100- and 200-meter dashes. During the regular season, Lowney was consistently earning top finishes, despite taking on some of the area's and state's best sprinters.

After making state in Division 2 as a junior, the competition stiffened for the Shawano athlete this spring when the team was back in Division 1 action. It didn't bother Lowney much, as he still qualified for state in both sprinting events.

At state, Lowney made the finals in each event and then placed sixth in the 200 and eighth in the 100 in the finals.

It was a strong finish to Lowney's athletic career, especially considering the injury concerns he had in the fall.

"With the uncertainty I really wasn't sure what I was going to do but I accomplished everything I wanted to and I had no regrets for my high school sports career walking off the track in La Crosse," said Lowney.

Honorable mentions

There was no shortage of impressive boys athletes in the area that also enjoyed strong athletic years.

Wittenberg-Birnamwood's Ben Wesolowski was one of those athletes, starring in football, basketball and baseball for the Chargers as a senior. Wesolowski was the Offensive Player of the Year in the Central Wisconsin Conference-Large Division in football, a first teamer in the CWC-East for baseball and a second-team selection in the CWC-East for basketball.

Lena senior Logan Shallow also played football, basketball and baseball. For football, he landed on the MONLPC first team on offense and second team on defense. Shallow made the second team in the Marinette & Oconto Conference for basketball and M&O first team for baseball.

Pulaski's T.J. Shaw was an individual state qualifier in cross-country and boys swim. He capped his strong year competing in track and field, with a third-place finish in the 3,200 at the Fox River Classic Conference as a highlight.

Bowler's Emmitt Kietlinski was the quarterback for the Bowler/Gresham football team, making the Central Wisconsin Conference 8-player honorable mention team. He landed on the CWC-North first team for basketball and then placed second in the high jump and third in the triple jump at the state track and field meet.

Gillett's Alex Peterson was a state qualifier in cross-country and track and field, placing 10th in cross-country and sixth in the 3,200 at the state track meet. He also played on the basketball team.

Bonduel's Noah Weier made the Packerland Conference list for football at two positions. He then made the CWC-East second team for basketball before landing on the first team during the baseball season.

Oconto Falls' Clayton Whiting isn't the multi-sport athlete like some of the others listed, but his dominant wrestling season and career more than warrants him a spot here.

Whiting went 50-1 this winter season and won a state title. For his career, Whiting earned a 163-5 record and won four state titles.

Witt-Birn's Rogowski the top girls athlete

She was on volleyball, basketball, track and field teams

Reese Rogowski has been a star since her freshman year at Wittenberg-Birnamwood High School.

Rogowski turned in her best year yet as a junior and it helped her earn the NEW Media Inc. Girls Athlete of the Year honor.

"I was consistent with my workouts and continued to work hard to get better in all my sports that I compete in," said Rogowski.

Rogowski began the year helping the Witt-Birn volleyball team to another strong season. She was named the Central Wisconsin Conference-East Division Player of the Year after helping the Chargers win a conference title.

The outside hitter accumulated 352 attack kills during the season. She also was credited with 33 blocks.

Rogowski's strong play didn't stop there. She was also the team's leader in digs with 299.

As if that wasn't already enough, she also served 44 aces and had 208 service points to her name.

"In volleyball, my coach (Becky Rew) knew my strengths and knew where I would be best on the floor which helped to maximize my success," said Rogowski.

After the fall season ended, with Witt-Birn appearing in a sectional semifinal match after winning a regional title, Rogowski's attention turned to basketball. While the basketball team wasn't as successful as the volleyball team, Rogowski led the way again.

In 27 games, Rogowski averaged 18.6 points, the most in the CWC-East. She was named to the all-conference first team unanimously.

Rogowski, who shot 41% overall and 34% from behind the 3-point line, was 14th in the state with 5.3 assists per contest. The junior also averaged 4.6 rebounds, 3.4 steals and 1.6 blocks per game.

"My coach (Nick Mechelke) for basketball helped by scouting other teams to find their weaknesses and came up with ways to position me and the team offensively and defensively so we could be efficient," said Rogowski.

Rogowski and the basketball team won a pair of playoff games to advance to a regional title game before being eliminated, at which point Rogowski's focus shifted to the spring track and field season.

Rogowski ran in the 100-, 200- and 400-meter dashes and also competed in long jump. Despite the heavy workload, the junior was simply dominant all season, winning just about every time she competed.

After winning CWC-Large conference titles in all four events, the competition stiffened in the postseason, but Rogowski was still able to qualify for state in all four events.

She ended the season and her standout year placing second at state in the 200 and 400, seventh in the 100 and 10th in the long jump while also vowing to work even harder to improve those marks as a senior.

“My coach (Mike Balliett) for track helped by pushing me every practice and meet to keep me going in a strong direction,” said Rogowski.

While track was more of an individual effort for Rogowski, she also recognized her teammates in all three sports for helping her achieve the success she did.

“My teammates challenged me and pushed me of course, but most importantly they helped me when I was having an off day which encouraged me to come back stronger,” said Rogowski.

As you can imagine, Rogowski didn’t have too many off nights of competition during any of her three seasons, which led to strong showings and a growing confidence.

“Having one strong season definitely motivated me for the next sports season because I had high expectations for myself following each season,” said Rogowski.

Honorable mentions

There were a number of multi-sport girls athletes that also enjoyed strong seasons during the 2021-22 school year.

Gresham’s Valarie Cervený competed in volleyball, basketball and track and field. She was the Player of the Year in the CWC-North for volleyball and Co-Player of the Year in basketball.

She also had a solid spring season, winning the shot put, taking third in high jump and being a part of a first-place finishing 4x100 relay team at the CWC-Small Meet.

Suring’s Christine Sleeter competed in the same three sports. She made the Marinette & Oconto Conference second team in volleyball and was a first teamer for basketball. She won a M&O track and field title in high jump, was second in pole vault and third in the 400. Sleeter made it to state in the high jump and pole vault, tying for second and placing 17th, respectively.

Lena’s Natalie McNurlen also was a force in the M&O. She was an honorable mention selection in volleyball and first teamer for basketball. She then won a M&O track and field title in triple jump while also placing second in the 400 and third in the long jump. McNurlen also made it to the state track meet, placing sixth in the triple jump.

Bonduel’s Brenna Hertzfeldt was yet another star in volleyball, basketball and track. She made the CWC-East second team in volleyball before earning a first-team spot in basketball. Along with placing ninth at state in discus, Hertzfeldt was on a first-place finishing 4x100 relay team at the CWC-Large Meet. Individually, she was second in the shot put and third in the discus at the conference meet.

Oconto Falls’ Alexis Euclide played golf, basketball and softball as a senior. She earned first-team selections during the basketball and softball seasons.

Gillett’s Carleigh Kaczmarek ran for the cross-country and track field teams, while also playing basketball. She placed second at the M&O meet for cross-country and then made the first team all-conference in basketball. She placed first in the 1,600 and second in the 800 and 3,200 during the M&O Meet this spring.

Witt-Birn named School of the Year

Chargers turned in strong seasons throughout year

By MORGAN RODE
Sports Editor

There was no shortage of strong teams in the area throughout the 2021-22 high school sports seasons.

Wittenberg-Birnamwood had a number of teams enjoy plenty of success in the fall, winter and spring seasons, and earned the NEW Media Inc. School of the Year honor for its collective effort.

"Success has become an expectation at Wittenberg-Birnamwood," said WB athletic director Chris Nier. "The main reason I believe that Wittenberg-Birnamwood teams are successful is because the athletes buy into preparing in the offseason and the coaches are committed to seeing that happen. The majority of our athletes are committed to strength training, speed work and agilities, along with attending contact days, open gyms, summer leagues and clubs."

Witt-Birn boasted two of the area's top teams during the fall season in its football and girls volleyball squads.

The Chargers' football team turned in a 6-1 record in the Central Wisconsin Conference-Large Division to place second, losing only to Amherst. Witt-Birn got its revenge on Amherst in the postseason, knocking out the state power in an epic level three playoff battle in Amherst.

The Chargers rallied from several deficits during the game, including a seven-point deficit with just over three minutes to play. Witt-Birn scored with 86 seconds to play to get within a point, and then converted a two-point conversion to snatch the lead.

Witt-Birn's magical postseason run came to an end the next week after a hard-fought loss to Aquinas, but it didn't diminish the incredible season the Chargers put together.

Witt-Birn's volleyball team continued its recent dominance in the CWC-East, posting a perfect record to claim the conference title. The Chargers then won nine of 10 sets across three matches to win a regional title. The team's postseason run came to an end against Oconto in a sectional semifinal match.

"Starting the year off with a conference and regional championship in volleyball and making it to the fourth round in football helped kick off the year setting a positive mindset for winning," said Nier.

"However, the success of the previous year prompted the success of this past fall season. During the 20-21 year, WB had conference championships in volleyball, girls basketball, girls track, softball and golf. Along with that we had a regional championship in boys basketball and softball, helping to motivate athletes to continue working hard in the summer leading to success this year as well. Success breeds success."

The girls swim team also had a solid fall season. The Chargers placed fourth in the Bay Conference despite having one of the smallest rosters.

The Witt-Birn boys basketball team was in the hunt for a CWC-East title most of the winter season, eventually settling for second place. The Chargers also earned a playoff win.

Had it not been for several close losses, the girls basketball team would have had an even better season than it did. The team tied for third in the conference and won 17 games overall, including two playoff wins.

The Witt-Birn wrestling team placed second in the CWC after having one individual champion and eight second-place finishers. Pierson Potrykus and David Gauderman represented the team at state.

The Chargers' baseball team was in the CWC-East title hunt this spring, eventually taking second. Witt-Birn won 19 games overall and appeared in a regional title game.

Witt-Birn's boys golf team placed second in the CWC. Calvin Scheurer then represented the team at state.

The girls track and field team also placed second in the CWC-Large. Reese Rogowski and Jalynn Horacek won conference titles and both ended the year competing at state.

On the boys track and field team, Simon Schairer was part of two conference titles and also made it to state.

While it's the athletes that have to perform on the playing surfaces, Nier also made sure to recognize the men and women leading the teams and athletes.

"The great thing about Wittenberg-Birnamwood is the coaching staff," said Nier. "We have a ton of coaching experience. Our staff works well together regardless of the gender or sport they are coaching."

"Largely, we agree on the need for strength, speed and agility, and we work together to help create multi-sport athletes. When not in season, our coaches are often seen at other events, whether reffing, doing the book and clock or just spectating. Basically there is buy-in all the way around."
