Dance team attends camp

DISTRICT NEWSLETTER

Witt-Birn ready for new school year

It's hard to believe, but the summer season is closing on us fast. This is true especially for students making their back-to-school plans, as Monday marks the first day for the start of the 2019-20 school year! Fall sports are in full swing and with all the construction and building improvements going on, there has certainly been much activity and foot traffic throughout the buildings all summer long.

Our new teachers started in the district Aug. 19, and all staff returned Aug. 20. We would like to extend a warm welcome to the following new teaching staff:

Jody Cieslewicz, Birnamwood special education; Alexandria Exworthy, Birnamwood art; Jessica Fischer, Birnamwood special education; Paige Peterson, Birnamwood first grade; Chris Kulas, Birnamwood third grade; Kyle Mrozinski, Wittenberg special education; MiKayla King, Wittenberg first grade; Ashley Hedtke, Wittenberg fifth grade; Dustin Ruleau, high school special education; Kelly Carlson, high school special education; Caleb McPhail, high school tech ed.

In addition, we would like to welcome all other staff joining our team throughout the district: Gene Letteau, bus driver; Michelle Martinez, ESL paraprofessional; Jennifer Wiskes, custodian; Tarrie Beran, high school paraprofessional.

As we enter this 2019-20 school year, I am confident and excited for our returning and new students, for the energy our community has rallied to provide in the form of support and confidence in our work and commitment to student success and for the opportunities that exist in our small and positive school district. We are ready to kick off another great school year! Get ready to take those back-to-school send-off pictures. See you soon!

Garrett Rogowski is superintendent for the Wittenberg-Birnamwood School District.

CORRECTIONS

Accuracy is important to the Enterprise & News, and it wants to correct mistakes promptly. Call errors to our attention by phone at 715-526-2121, ext. 7018.

What's so funny about being funny?

Music may be the universal language, but there is a lot to be said for humor.

I watched an interview with John Cleese of "Fawlty Towers" and "Monty Python" fame. He said on one of his trips to Asia, he came across a "Fawlty Towers" episode on TV dubbed in the language of the country. He knew the sight gags would be funny but marveled at why the dialog of the story would appeal to that market.

When so much of a storyline or even a punchline can get lost in translation, I'm sure there are also times when the translation surpasses the original.

We all want to relate to the human condition. Even though many of us go through life worried our flaws and insecurities will be exposed to the judgment of our peers, we take great delight when we're watching a comedian bare his or her soul to the delight of others.

I've been following a British comedian online, and after I wipe away the tears from laughing so hard, I try to analyze the why. His delivery goes against many of the theatrical trainings I've had. He speaks way too fast and keeps that frenetic pace throughout the show. By the time the show is over, you feel as though your brain has sprinted to the edge of the world, and you can only hope the rest of you catches up.

He also paces quickly from one side of the stage to the other. If you watch him with the sound off he looks like one of those ducks or bunnies you try to shoot out in a midway arcade game. You rarely think a moving target would be fun to watch when you're trying to absorb the verbal message, but there it is and you can't help laughing.

There's another comedian who pokes fun at the English language or rather, our use of it. With his thick eastern European accent, he lists the way we'll use a certain swear word in a variety of ways to convey very different meanings.

Wherever I've worked or whatever board or organization I've been involved in, I've always worked best and enjoyed it most when the people around me have the same sense of humor or at least appreciate mine.

I think back to my very first job as a travel agent. The owner of the agency was the most humorless man I had ever met. I adored the other two women in the office, but I could not wait to leave the agency.

When I worked as a temp on a project at a major airline with a major IT consulting firm, I stayed three years — partly because I kept trying to get a permanent job with either company, but also because I had a built in audience for my sense of humor.

Not everyone has a universal understanding or appreciation of humor, but those who do help make the world a better place to live. We all exit the same way. We might as well have a laugh while we're still here.

BOOKS & STUFF

'Pizza Prophet' provides humor to tale involving wise guys

I only had time for a short story this week. "The Pizza Prophet" by David Belisle is actually listed as a novella, and it is hard to describe. It was a satire on wise guys, a commentary on gullibility and tongue-in-cheek funny.

JAN JONES

The action takes place in and around Lead Pipe Joe's Pizza Parlor, a longtime staple in the neighborhood. Sixty-nine year old Kosma Stankowicz is one several delivery drivers working for Joe's. He's a good husband, loyal employee and devout man who wouldn't dream of questioning the will of God.

One afternoon, a limo belonging to Jimmy "the Weasel" Fratianno arrives. Jimmy plans to have his 23-year-old son Tommy take the open position at Joe's. Tommy isn't interested in working. He'd rather play on his iPad and sweet talk pretty girls.

His father wants him to become a tough guy and affect Philly mob swagger and dialect the way he and his "bodyguards" Rocco and Carmine do. None of them have even been to Philly or met a real mobster.

Shop owner Mutazz Muhkitmuk (blame Mr. Belisle) agrees to hire the kid. The poor man has five daughters, Iyeetah, Valveetah, Faheetah, Lastweekah and Ilykah (again, blame Belisle), so Tommy is immediately interested.

Kosma likes to think of himself as a philosopher and sage. Soon he is explaining the "ideology" of bringing food to the masses. He shares his belief that each slice of pizza is an integral part of the whole pie, just as each person is a special part of the whole population. Nothing he says makes sense to Tommy, but that doesn't bother Kosma.

At the same time, Devine, the large and in-charge hooker, is ordering a pizza to be delivered to the street corner she's working. What happened next sets off a series of laughable incidents.

A runaway sign causes a car to swerve and nearly hit Kosma's car. The close call causes Kosma to momentarily collapse. While everyone is trying to help Kosma, Manny Dingo the pimp grabs a bag of money from the armored truck in front of the bank and hides it inside of a pizza delivery bag.

When Kosma recovers, he takes the bag to the customer, who just happens to be Devine the hooker. He thinks that she is The Devine One, sent to guide his prophesies. From then on, the pizza bag/stolen money go on a wild trip around the city, surprising and pleasing everyone who opens the bag. Kosma does his best to interpret the things Devine tells him — usually with hilarious results.

It is obvious from page one that this book was not written as serious fiction, so the punny names, unlikely events and zany characters work perfectly to create a strange but happy ending.

Sometimes it's good to take time for an utterly goofy book. School's back in session, so you'll need something to read while you are waiting and waiting and waiting due to student activities. Just get into your public library and check it out.

Spices are topic of library talk

HATLEY — An informational session that covers the different spices from around the world, as well as instruction on how to create spice blends, will be held from 5:30-7 p.m. Sept. 10 at the Hatley branch library, 435 Curtis Ave.

The free program is open to all, but space is limited. For information or registration, call 715-446-3537.

Kekula receives award for teaching

WITTENBERG — Joann Kekula, band director at Wittenberg-Birnhamwood middle and high schools, received the Lawrence University 2019 Outstanding Teaching in Wisconsin Award.

Kekula, of Bowler, earned her Bachelor of Music Education from the University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire in 1985 and her Master's of Music Education from UW-Stevens Point in 1995.

She has taught at Wittenberg-Birnhamwood since 1986. She has membership in several national honor societies, including Alpha Kappa Lambda (music), Kappa Delta Pi (education) and Phi Kappa Phi (scholastic achievement). She also belongs to Sigma Alpha Iota, a music fraternity for women.

Kekula is on the regional executive board of the Wisconsin Education Association and is active with the National Band Association. She has been on the Wisconsin Ambasadors of Music staff since 2006 and has been a leader on student performance tours in seven European countries.
