Cold coffee not just for summer

I was drinking cold coffee before iced coffee was even cool.

Full disclosure here, I never mean to drink cold coffee. It just seems to work out that way.

When I worked at the Mall of America, the shop next door sold hot, fresh coffee. I like mine with cream — not to cool it off, but because I like the way it tastes.

MIRIAM NELSON

On the mornings when I wouldn't buy a cup, I would have no one in the store until lunch.

On the days when I really needed that kick of caffeine and wanted to savor every hot sip, I would be blessed with customers needing my undivided attention for hours on end. Maybe it was the aroma of the fresh coffee that drew them in, or maybe it was Murphy's law. All I know for certain is that I never drank a hot cup of coffee the entire time I worked there.

When I first moved home 15 years ago, I had a coffee pot and would start the day with good intentions. But by the end of the day, I would usually find a half pot of very strong, very bad coffee and a cup or two abandoned in various locations in the house.

My sister moved me into the 21st century by getting me a purple, one-cup brewing machine. Now that I'm working out of my home, I generally find my coffee cup still in the machine an hour or two after I intended to drink it.

The microwave is just a step away, but for some reason I just don't like reheated coffee. Maybe it's just that I've learned to drink cold coffee over the years, and it seems to be the lesser of two evils.

There are mornings when I actually get a sip or two while the coffee is still hot, but those mornings are rare, and I never get to the bottom of the cup while it's still warm.

I suppose that fact that I like a large cup of coffee so I have room for a lot of cream doesn't do me any favors. If I really wanted and needed hot coffee,

I would stay standing by my machine and drink my coffee the minute it finished brewing, but that will never happen.

I'm a wanderer, and I like bringing a cup of coffee into any room in the house. I have coasters spread throughout so that I always have a place to set my coffee. This probably doesn't work in my favor, either. It encourages me to put down my cup of coffee and wander off again.

I do know that if I ever want hot, fresh coffee, I can go to a restaurant where a waitress will top off my cup the minute I pull it away from my lips. It's almost impossible to drink a cold cup of coffee, unless it's a very bad restaurant.

At this point in my life, cold coffee is just something I've learned to embrace. I suppose I could take my cold coffee and put it over ice and be hip like the rest of the summer time coffee drinkers, but we all know that won't happen.

New bus driver familiar face for district

WBSD hires Lettau to transport students

By MIRIAM NELSON
News Editor

WITTENBERG — The Wittenberg-Birnhamwood School Board approved the hire of Gene Lettau as a full-time bus driver at the July meeting.

Last year, route nine was divided and added to two other routes due to not having enough full-time drivers. Lettau will now drive that northern route.

According to Paul Yaeger, WBSD transportation director, another full-time driver would allow them to reunite route three as well. There are 12 routes in all.

Lettau graduated from Witt-Birn in 1971, and he's been on several bus trips with his wife, Terry, who has been driving bus for the district for 40 years.

"I basically know what to expect regarding the behavior of the students and what to do to keep them safe," said Lettau.

He retired from Greenheck and keeps busy on weekends with his polka band, II edition. The polka band features him on the trumpet and Terry on the concertina. To fill the week days he decided it would be a good idea to follow his wife's lead and drive bus.

"I just thought it would be fun for us to go to work together," said Lettau. "I'm looking forward to it."

According to trainer Russ Howard, WBSD is one of the few places that has an active training program. Howard has been driving bus for Witt-Birn for four years and shares the bus driver training program responsibilities with fellow bus driver Jodi Zmudka.

"There's a lot to it," said Howard. "We offer six two-hour sessions of training."

Drivers need to get a commercial driver's license (CDL), and pass the written test for the bus driver certification. WBSD pays for the training and reimburses the cost of the CDL, which is $150, and the written test, which is $30, after a driver has worked for the district for six months.

Yaeger noted that he needs board approval for any full-time hires, but part-time drivers may be added at his discretion. Drivers are paid $15.30 per hour upon hire, $15.90 after six months, $16.41 after one year and $17 after two years. He said finding people who can work both the morning and afternoon shifts, five days a week as required for a full-time position is challenging and generally those positions are filled by retirees. No insurance is offered to bus drivers.

Witt-Birn school teachers Waylon Resch, Troy Ostrowski, and Mike Balliet have been doing morning routes for years. It works out well for them and helps with the scheduling, said Yaeger.

Superintendent Garrett Rogowski went through the training and is able to fill-in when needed. A lot of the sporting and extracurricular events, which require transportation, are covered by spouses of the coaches. This works out well according to Yaeger, but he is mindful that as coaches leave or retire, he will need to have replacements ready to fill the gap in coverage.

Reality bites when former TV stars reunite

I thought I would be reading a western when I selected "Return to Casa Grande" by Michael Carlon, but the only thing western about it was the California location. Although it may not be what I expected, it was entertaining.

Twenty-five years ago a TV show named "Casa Grande" was all the rage. It featured the lives of a wine growing dynasty with a stern matriarch, troublesome son, mischievous daughter, loyal vineyard manager and his devastatingly handsome son. It was a soap opera of the highest order and fans were outraged when it was canceled in favor of a more "youth oriented" program.

Its stars are mostly forgotten when a fluke brings them back into the spotlight. Allison Hart is a Harvard Business School grad with plenty of ambition. Her job at UPC is both challenging and frustrating as she's expected create a "program" that will give maximum exposure to a sponsor's products.

That's how she became acquainted with T-Bang aka Thaddeus Stevens. He's the 18 year old son of a former TV star and he's become famous for his many over the top antics in Hollywood.

Allison has created a show that would use minimally invasive cameras to follow T-Bang and his entourage on their escapades. The sponsor's body products are prominently placed and well used in each episode. The show quickly becomes a smash hit and sales soar.

Now Allison's boss wants her to come up with another hit. As she racks her brain to find a viable idea a chance event sets things into motion for her next project.

Blaze Hazelwood was once the star of Casa Grande. Unlike his co-stars, he'd held onto his money and was still working doing voice overs for cartoons. He longed to get back in front of the camera, but his useless agent hasn't found him much work, though he often suggests doing reality TV; Blaze detests reality TV and flatly refuses.

One night his neighbors have a big party and one of his windows is broken. He goes out to confront the neighbor and ends up being part of T-Bang's "Bling it On" show. Within hours, he's popular again.

That's when Allison decides to create a show that features the cast of Casa Grande as they return to the mansion and recreate various scenes from the original shows. Viewers would vote for the best actor in each episode. The other actors are eager to sign on.

One has an alcohol problem. One is being evicted. One's been stuck in an old folks home because he occasionally strips naked and walks away. One hit rock bottom and ended up as a priest, but he's been framed for breaking his vows and has been defrocked. Only Blaze holds out until he meets Allison.

There's an instant connection between them that surprises both of them. Things become laughable and crazy when UPC gathers the actors at the mansion for public relations interviews. Simple questions get unexpected answers. Comments quickly become nasty and past secrets burst into the open.

When the melee is over many truths, both good and bad are revealed. In the end, we see that real life can be far more interesting than any reality show.

If you like stories that are real, the nonfiction section at your public library has plenty to choose from. All you have to do is drop by and check it out.

Get ready to rock and roll with Jackyl

Ho-Chunk Gaming Wittenberg is bringing the heavy rock, heavy metal and southern rock sounds of Jackyl on Aug. 30 at 8 p.m. Advance tickets are $40 or $50 at the door.

The '80s rock-inspired youth group Bad Habit opens the show at 6:30 p.m. Following the concert, the Crankin Yankees will be on the casino floor.

Jackyl provides an interactive concert with their most notable songs — including a fan favorite, "Lumberjack," where lead vocalist, Jesse James Dupree, performs a chainsaw solo. The band of four consists of lead vocalist and guitarist Dupree, guitarist Jeff Worley, bass player Roman Glick and percussionist Chris Worley.

An autographed guitar and other swag bags including Jesse James' signature bourbon whiskey will be given away.
