Sports complex pledges, donations reach $450,000

Jerry Aanonsen, a former coach, teacher, athletic director and dean of students, gives an update on the sports complex fundraising campaign at Wittenberg-Birnamwood High School on June 22.

Wittenberg fundraising deadline probably will be extended

By LUKE REIMER

The campaign to raise money for a sports complex in Wittenberg is starting to pick up steam.

Wittenberg-Birnamwood Superintendent Garrett Rogowski informed the Wittenberg Area Development Committee about the progress of the complex at the committee's meeting Sept. 17.

"As of right now, there is about $450,000 in donations and pledges," Rogowski said.

The tally is up $150,000 since Jerry Aanonsen — former Witt-Birn coach, teacher, athletic director and dean of students — gave an update in June.

With Aanonsen and others continuing to look for donations and pledges, Rogowski said he was going to discuss the Witt-Birn school board's role with the sports complex at the next school board meeting.

"I am meeting with the board in closed session on the 27th to determine what the board's support would be," he said. "We know that they are going to have to be involved, too."

Rogowski said Aanonsen has more information, but the whole process might be delayed.

"We will extend the pledge season beyond October, November," said Rogowski. "A few key players have said that they are still not certain."

WADC member Dick Beversdorf said that he knows one source that may not be able to make donations or pledges until 2022.

"That is fine," Beversdorf said. "As long as they express an interest — that is a step in the right direction."

Rogowski added there is some reluctance from the school board, due to the referendum not passing. The sports complex was originally part of a referendum in 2018. This was voted down by community members in the school district.

"They want to be very careful about saying the community voted it down, but we are going to take a backdoor approach," Rogowski said. "They just want to be mindful about that."

Beversdorf said that the WADC did not want to put the school board in a bad position.

He also added that it is a positive sign to see the pledges and donations continuing to grow.

"I am glad that the sports complex is not dead," said Beversdorf.

Resch Lanes set to host junior bowling league

Owner: League helps to build a strong future for children

By LUKE REIMER
Reporter

Kids are preparing to start bowling again in Wittenberg.

Resch Lanes is running their junior bowling league again starting Oct. 3.

“We hold this league for a number of reasons,” owner Jason Resch said. “We need to develop kids. If you don’t develop them young, they won’t bowl when they are older.”

Resch added that this bowling league gives kids of all ages and interests a chance to build their skills.

“Some kids aren’t as athletic as other kids,” said Resch. “This is something that everybody can do. I have had kids with autism who have become very good bowlers.”

With the league, Resch said that they run a scholarship program for all of the kids. Kids earn money into their personal scholarship account, by participating in the league and other tournaments, as well as taking part in fundraisers.

“There are thousands of dollars in scholarships available for junior bowlers to win in Wisconsin,” said Resch.

He said the amount of money that each kid receives is dependant on how much he or she bowls.

“At the end of each year, I divvy it up based on how much they bowled,” said Resch. “So someone who comes in five nights isn’t going to get the same amount of money as someone who showed up every week. It is based on participation, not performance.”

Resch believes that it is important that kids attend this league due to factors that went into play when he was young.

“Bowling has given me a lot,” said Resch. “I have met a lot of people through it. I would like the kids to experience the same things that I got to. It is a lot about family and socializing.”

Resch said that this league is a chance for kids to build memories, have fun and to socialize, rather than play video games.

He has held this league for 14 years and said there is usually a pretty good turnout.

“Last year we had 43 kids in the program,” said Resch. “Some fall off by the wayside as you go through the season, but I think at the end of the Bowling balls await the start of the junior bowling league at Resch Lanes, which will begin Oct. 3.

year, we had a solid 40 kids coming every week.”

The league is split up into two shifts on Sundays, with kids aged 8-12 bowling at 3 p.m. and kids aged 13-18 bowling at 5:30 p.m.

He said that kids come back year after to year to continue to work on the things that were taught throughout their experiences in the league.

The league did not change last year during the COVID-19 pandemic.

“We didn’t change much of anything,” said Resch. “The numbers showed that parents wanted their kids here doing something.”

Resch anticipates that this year’s league will have a similar attendance to last year’s.

“I am thinking if anything, it will be the same,” said Resch. “But if there is any change, it will be up. I have had five parents in here talking about entering their kid for the first time. Assuming everyone who bowled last year comes back, we are looking up.”

Resch said that comparing last year to the first year that the league was held, the junior bowling league has continued to grow.

“We are much busier,” said Resch. “The first year, I think we were in the teens for attendance. It has grown and grown. Parents talk among each other and see the money that is there for their child. They will tell their friends about it, and word will continue to get out.”

Resch said that he has seen kids improve their games within the first couple weeks of the league.

“I have some kids that will take three weeks before they hit pins,” said Resch. “By the end of the year, they are seldom throwing gutter balls.”

Resch said it is fun to watch when kids who are in the league come in to the bowling alley with their school and dominate the class.

As kids participate in this league, Resch hopes that the kids leave with a few lessons.

“I hope that they come out of this league with a sense of accomplishment, social skills and fun memories,” said Resch. “I also want them to learn to not give up when things get tough. I hope that battling that adversity sticks with them. That is what makes bowling fun; it is hard. If it was easy, it wouldn’t be worth doing.”

SAVVY SENIOR

Simple and inexpensive final farewells

By JIM MILLER

Special to NEW Media

Dear Savvy Senior,

My husband and I are looking for the simplest and least expensive way to dispose of our bodies when we die. We hate the idea of wasting a lot of money on high-priced funerals and would like some advice on some simple and cheap send-offs.

Simple Seniors

Dear Simple,

With the average cost of a full-service funeral running around $11,000 today, many people are seeking simple ways to make their final farewell more affordable. Depending on how you want to go, here are several low-cost options to consider.

Direct cremation

If you and your husband are interested in cremation, a direct cremation is the simplest and least expensive way to go. It includes picking up the body, completing and filing the necessary paperwork, the cremation itself and returning the cremated remains to the family. There's no embalming, formal viewing or casket. A simple cardboard box called an "alternative container" is used to hold the body.

Depending on where you live and the funeral home you choose, the average cost for a direct cremation runs between $1,000 and $3,000. If you want additional services beyond what a direct cremation offers, ask the funeral home for an itemized price list that covers the other services cost, so you know exactly what you're getting. All providers are required by law to provide this.

To locate nearby funeral homes, look in your local Yellow Pages, or Google "cremation" or "funeral" followed by your city and state. You can also get good information online at Parting.com, which lets you compare prices from funeral providers in your area based on what you want.

Immediate or direct burial

If you're interested in being buried, an immediate/direct burial is the most basic and low-cost option. With an immediate burial, your body would be buried in a simple container shortly after death, skipping the embalming, viewing and use of the funeral facilities.

If your family wants a memorial service, they can have it at the graveside at your place of worship or at home without the body.

These services usually cost between $1,800 and $3,500, not counting cemetery charges, which can run you an additional $1,000 to $3,000. All funeral homes offer direct burial.

Green burial

An eco-friendly green burial is another affordable way to go that costs anywhere from $1,000 to $4,000 depending on the provider. With a green cemetery burial, the body is buried in a biodegradable coffin or just wrapped in a shroud, without embalming chemicals or a burial vault.

The Green Burial Council (GreenBurialCouncil.org, 888-966-3330) has a state listing of cemetery operators who accommodate green burials, as well as funeral professionals who provide the services.

Anatomical donation

If you'd like to eliminate your cremation/burial costs all together, as well as help advance medical research, you and your husband should consider donating your bodies to science. This option won't cost you a cent; however, some programs may charge a small fee to transport your body to their facility.

After using your body for medical research projects, anatomy lessons and surgical practice, your remains will be cremated and your ashes will be buried or scattered in a local cemetery or returned to your family, usually within a year.

To locate accredited university medical school body donation programs in your state, see the University of Florida's U.S. program directory at Anatbd.acb.med.ufl.edu/usprograms, or call the whole-body donation referral service during business hours at 800-727-0700.

Miles of Art tour canceled again for 2021

Rise in COVID cases cited as reason for cancellation

By LUKE REIMER
Reporter

For the second year in a row, the Shawano-Menominee Miles of Art Tour has been canceled. "This year's Miles of Art event is canceled due to concerns regarding COVID-19's increasing spread in our community," said Miles of Art Chair Megan Dorsch.

Members of the Miles of Art Tour board, as well as studio sites, voiced their concern of COVID-19, Dorsch said.

"We had 50% of our studio sites wish to drop out of this year's event due to the area's COVID-19 status," she said.

Dorsch said that the board discussed different viewpoints, ideas and risk management strategies when they were deciding whether to hold the event.

"We talked, at length, about COVID mitigation measures being taken by our communities and about some of our sites' understandable reticence to be involved during the pandemic," said Dorsch. "We did not want to be in the same position we were at this time last year, but the reality of it is that we are."

She added that visitors to the event have been mostly supportive of the board's decision.

"The vast majority of our followers and attendees have been very supportive and understanding, if disappointed, about this year's cancellation," said Dorsch. "We appreciate you all."

Dorsch said that if anyone is interested in purchasing art from local artists and artisans, they should contact the artists and artisans directly. There is also a Facebook page (@smartwisconsin) that Dorsch urges community members to look at for information on the event, art and artists.

"We will continue to showcase our artists' work throughout the upcoming fall and holiday seasons," said Dorsch. "We sincerely hope that our community works together in regards to COVID numbers and mitigation in the upcoming months. We hope that 2022 will bring a safer environment for all."

The Shawano-Menominee Miles of Art is an art studio tour event that showcases art created by members of the Shawano-Menominee region. Visitors are invited into designated artists' studios to observe the art.

"This event allows the community and visitors to the area a unique experience by inviting people right into artists' spaces and letting them see and learn more about each artist's process," Dorsch said. "Each studio site also has great artists from around our region, displaying work. Much of the art is available for purchase at the event."

Michael Groth, of Shawano, talks with a customer about the work he puts into his wooden bowls in 2018 at the Old Feed Mill in Gresham as part of the Miles of Art festival. For the second year, the event that opened up artist studios and facilities in Shawano County has had to cancel due to COVID-19 concerns. FILE | NEW MEDIA

With 2022 closely approaching, Dorsch said that she and the rest of the board will begin meeting to plan next year's event.

"Our board will begin meeting to discuss plans for 2022's Miles of Art, starting in November," said Dorsch. "We will talk over contingency planning for the coming year and may consider options like virtual art shopping for the 2022 event as a possible added feature."

Perry fills library with people, laughter

Wisconsin author shares stories of life, which serve as fodder for his books

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

Wisconsin author Michael Perry's visit to Shawano finally went off without a hitch after two previous efforts to come to town were thwarted by the coronavirus pandemic.

The mastermind behind "Population: 485" and other books about rural life was well received with over 100 people crowding into the Shawano Public Library on Sept. 17 and sending staff scrambling for additional chairs. The event, sponsored by Friends of Shawano County Libraries, was originally going to take place in April 2020 in celebration of National Library Week, which was then rescheduled for the fall of that year before coronavirus cases surged nationwide.

The wait didn't diminish the excitement — or the laughter.

"You can ask me about anything. You can ask me about writing, publishing — hair care tips," said Perry as he motioned to his bald head.

Turning a little more serious, he told the audience that he wouldn't be where he is today as an author if it hadn't been for "Population: 485." Although not one of his bestsellers, the book about meeting people through volunteering for a community fire department has continuously sold in bookstores and online, giving folks a glimpse into the people of Wisconsin.

"Population: 485" is that old can-you-go-home-again book," Perry said. "I wrote about going back home to New Auburn, Wisconsin, which is where I grew up. I grew up on a little farm six miles north of New Auburn."

After leaving New Auburn after high school and returning 12 years later, he knew he needed to meet people again, and the solution for him was to join the fire department.

"I'm pretty much a loner. The happiest place for me is in my room, writing," Perry said. "I don't drink, so I don't go to any of the taverns. I don't bowl. I don't play softball, and I can't polka. So there really wasn't much left to do, but I wanted to do something to be part of the community."

Perry joked that people saw he still has a defibrillator in his truck when he was offloading his books

New York Times bestselling author Michael Perry tells a humorous story about one of his brothers during his presentation Sept. 17 at the Shawano Public Library. Humor abounds in Perry's books, starting with "Population: 485" and continuing through another 20. LEE PULASKI | NEW MEDIA and that it would be available if anyone in the audience needed it. His self-deprecating humor kept those in attendance laughing as he talked about his journey in life.

"When I left New Auburn, I was a farm boy, a good student and a fair defensive end," Perry said. "I returned 12 years later a long-haired writer with soft hands and a nursing degree, so there was a certain amount of street cred to recover with some of my buddies in the coon hunting crowd."

Perry also talked about the apprehension he felt the night he told his father he was planning to become a nurse, even though his mother had also been a nurse. Perry recalled that his father told him he "would make a fine nurse." Then he remembered his father walking to the barn, turning back and adding, "I just want to be there when they pin that little white cap on you."

Perry's daughters also motivate him to keep writing. He noted that one is in college and the other one's in braces.

"I've been fortunate enough to publish a lot of other books after 'Population: 485,'" Perry said. "I never saw any of this stuff coming, but I do just have to keep writing."

Perry also recalled being contacted by an editor once who asked him to write a 10,000-word essay on Wisconsin and where his mind went from there.

"Wisconsin reminds me of cows," Perry said he wrote. "Cows remind me of milk. Milk reminds me of cheese. Cheese reminds me of cheeseheads. Cheeseheads remind me of the Green Bay Packers. The Packers remind me of the meaning of life."

Perry's humor has been lost on some people. He once spoke at a conference and joked that he had "functional ADD" and had a licensed clinical psychologist who sent an email the next day saying she knew he did not have that condition.

"She wrote, 'The symptoms you described are consistent with flight of ideas, which is associated with a completely different manic depressive disorder,'" Perry said. "I thought, well, whatever it takes. As someone who has been buying his own health insurance since 1992, I thought it was cool I got diagnosed for free."

Also a columnist for the Wisconsin State Journal, Perry is often asked where he gets the ideas for the column, Roughneck Grace. He said that many times, all he has to do is wait for one of his brothers to call him.

He recalled one instance where he was two hours from his deadline and getting the "prickly failure sweats" when his brother, John, called to tell him he'd been in his shop working on a bench grinder when the stone exploded, with a chunk of shrapnel flying off and piercing his neck, just missing the carotid artery.

"It was an eighth of an inch from a memorial service to a really awesome story," Perry said. "If you come where I come from, there's nothing funnier than someone getting hurt. I'm just (hitting) 'Send' with 45 minutes to spare."

Rogalski named to presidential fellowship program

The Aspen Institute College Excellence Program has announced that Dr. Kathryn Rogalski, vice president of learning at Northeast Wisconsin Technical College, is one of 40 leaders selected for the 2021-22 class of the Aspen Rising Presidents Fellowship, a highly selective leadership program preparing the next generation of community college presidents to transform institutions to achieve higher and more equitable levels of student success.

The Rising Presidents Fellows will embark on the 10-month fellowship beginning in November. Delivered in collaboration with the Stanford Educational Leadership Initiative, the fellows will be mentored by current and former community college presidents who have achieved exceptional outcomes for students throughout their careers and will learn strategies to improve student outcomes in and after college, lead internal change, and create strong external partnerships with K-12 schools, four-year colleges, employers, and other partners.

"To become institutions that truly advance social mobility and talent development, community colleges must have presidents with a clear vision for equitable student success," said Monica Clark, director of leadership initiatives at the College Excellence Program. "We have selected these fellows because they share that commitment and are well-positioned to become transformational leaders."

KATHRYN ROGALSKI

"Kathryn has been an exemplary member of our institution and community, and I look forward to watching her grow through this experience," said Dr. Jeff Rafn, NWTC president.

"We are proud to cultivate exceptional leaders at NWTC, and Kathryn embodies the vision and work ethic to propel student success."

"It is an honor to be among this cohort of exceptional leaders across the nation who share the same commitment to equity, access, and success for community and technical college students," said Rogalski. "I am grateful for the support of NWTC and look forward to applying my experience to our institution and beyond."

The Aspen Rising Presidents Fellowship responds to the growing need for a new generation of leaders well-equipped to meet the challenges of the future. Nationally, nearly 80% of sitting presidents plan to retire in the next decade. While the traditional pathway to the presidency has often excluded women and people of color, the incoming class of Aspen Rising Presidents Fellows is composed of 68% women and 70% people of color, and represents institutions of varying sizes and locations.

Panthers stay perfect after topping Eagles

Thomson rushes for 3 scores to lead Oconto Falls

By MORGAN RODE
Sports Editor

The Oconto Falls High School football team improved to 5-0 on the season after a 36-8 victory over Menominee Indian on Sept. 17 in Oconto Falls.

The turning point of the Northwoods Conference clash came about halfway through the first quarter.

Menominee Indian started the game with the ball and was on a long drive. On a first-and-goal play, Oconto Falls forced a fumble and recovered it in the end zone.

On Oconto Falls' first offensive play, senior Dylan Thomson busted free for an 80-yard touchdown run.

"We got a lot of confidence from that. It was a big momentum swinger. It was huge for us because everyone was fired up," said Thomson.

The sequence turned out to be the theme of the contest, with Menominee Indian putting together long drives before Oconto Falls' defense buckled down. More often than not, the Panthers' offense would then go down the field and score.

Menominee Indian's second drive marched to the Oconto Falls' 18 before the Panthers made a stop on fourth down. The ensuing drive lasted four plays, with Thomson capping it with a 9-yard run.

The Panthers' defense started getting to the quarterback on the next Eagles' drive, which eventually led to a three-and-out.

Menominee Indian's defense flipped the script on the next drive, forcing a stop inside its own 5-yard line. The Eagles' offense then worked out of the shadow of its own goalpost and crossed midfield before the drive broke down. Three straight sacks not only ended the drive, but helped the hosts start at the Menominee Indian 40 for the next drive.

It was another one-play drive for the Panthers to extend the lead to 20-0. Junior quarterback Carter Hill threw a deep ball up the left sideline that senior Isaac Raddatz pulled down and turned into a 40-yard score.

"It starts with our line, we need protection and we need holes to run through. When we passed, we got protection and that's how we got our touchdowns," said Raddatz.

A nice return from freshman Truper Wilber and penalty from Oconto Falls set the visitors up at the 40-yard line and about a minute to go in the first half.

Senior Devin Beaulieu-Morgan hit senior Andre Corn on a 26-yard pass before a penalty moved the ball back to the 28. Beaulieu-Morgan then found senior Allen Smith to put the Eagles on the 6-yard line. A pass picked up another yard but an incomplete pass in the end zone on a third-down play turned out to be the half's final play.

The Eagles forced and recovered a fumble on the Panthers' first drive of the second half, but Menominee Indian couldn't take advantage, turning the ball over on downs at their own 25.

It took Oconto Falls four plays to score, with Thomson powering in from four yards out.

Another time-consuming Eagles' drive worked the ball into Panthers' territory before the hosts made a fourth-down stop. Oconto Falls then sealed its win with a 15-play touchdown drive. Hill connected with Raddatz on a 6-yard pass to cap it.

Oconto Falls moved to 5-0 on the season and 3-0 in conference play ahead of its showdown with Coleman. The two teams are the lone unbeaten ones left in the conference.

"I think we're all hungry because, I mean Oconto Falls, the last time they were 4, 5-0, (was) 1990-something," said Thomson. "We want it, we're hungry. Coleman is our biggest game, we want to beat them really bad."

Menominee Indian got a little positive momentum built with a touchdown drive late in the fourth quarter.

Beaulieu-Morgan hit Dixon for a 54-yard touchdown pass.

"We need to finish our plays a lot more," said Dixon of the team's offense. "We're always fired up going all the way down (the field) but like our coaches said in the huddle, we kind of relax when we get in the red zone. It just comes down to staying fired up when we're in the red zone and finishing what we started."

"We just need to capitalize on a lot more drives. We hung in there but a few plays got us," said Corn. "We gotta come back stronger next week."

Eggert leads Shawano to 3rd-place finish at Oconto Falls Invitational

Oconto Falls takes 4th, Bonduel 7th

By MORGAN RODE
Sports Editor

The Shawano Community High School girls golf team finished in third place behind a big day from Sophia Eggert at the Oconto Falls Invitational on Sept. 13 at River Island Golf Course in Oconto Falls.

Eggert carded an 18-hole round of 89 to lead Shawano, which had a team score of 419. The 89 for Eggert helped her tie for the top individual score on the day. The Hawks finished behind Wrightstown (396) and Marinette (399).

Oconto Falls turned in a team score of 428 to place fourth. The Panthers also had a junior varsity team in action, and that group took eighth with a score of 473.

Bonduel and Pulaski were among the other teams at the invitational. Bonduel took seventh with a mark of 442, while Pulaski's golfers accumulated a score of 508. Pulaski sent a varsity team to an invitational in Sheboygan.

Eggert fired a 44 on the front nine before a 45 on the back nine for her round of 89.

"That gave me confidence but also something to motivate me," said Eggert.

Braylyn Babino carded a round of 102 for the Hawks, while Riley Dreier fired a 107. Alli Johnson (121) was the golfer who rounded out the team score.

Shawano was down a golfer on the day, making the team's finish even more meaningful.

"Today we were a golfer short," Eggert said. "It proved that if you play your game and shoot a good score, we can still place good as a team."

"It was a big loss without our No. 1 golfer today. But after today, it showed that we could persevere as a team and have confidence to play at a higher level," said Babino, who tied for eighth as an individual.

The Oconto Falls varsity team was led by Kate Pytleski, but it was JV golfer Lexi Nelson who posted the best round of the day at 102. Both golfers finished among the invitational's 12 top golfers.

Pytleski carded a 103 to tie for the 10th spot as an individual. Nelson was one of two golfers at a 102, tied for the eighth-best round.

Danielle Darby and Kenadee Seidl each fired rounds of 107 for the Panthers' varsity team. Alexis Euclide (111) and Kloeigh Seidl (115) capped the balanced team.

"I really think that we were able to golf the way we did today was because of how close and supportive our team is," said Darby. "We all have things each of us need to work on and and struggle with, but all of us motivate each other to do our very best. I know for myself, I wouldn't be golfing as good if I didn't have my team there pushing me."

Amber Krause (114) and Gina Sconzert (115) had the next best rounds behind Nelson on the JV team. Hailey Kopke (142) and Ava Salscheider (152) capped the five-golfer team.

It was Sarah Garside leading Bonduel on the course, posting a round of 103 to tie for 10th as an individual.

Thea Tauchen (107) and Ava Pleshek (109) had similar showings on the day, finishing the day with better scores on the back nine.

"Honestly, at first I could not hit anything, but as I kept going, it slowly got better," said Tauchen of her round. "I shot a 107, which isn't terrible and I'm pretty content with it. Personally, I need to work on my chipping more than anything."

Meghan Wondra (122) and Raina Dworniczak (123) rounded out the Bears' team.

"Since this was our first individual 18-hole meet, I think it was a great way to prepare everyone for conference and regionals that's coming up," said Pleshek. "It will also help build our confidence and stay positive for when we have to golf 18 again later in the season. Our team has a lot of room for improvement, but we make the most of it when we're out there playing."

Pulaski's team was led by Katie Fuiten's round of 118. Danika Hole-

Gresham School Board issues mask mandate

Community, board debate COVID-19 issues for nearly three hours before decision voted on

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

The Gresham School Board approved reinstating its mask policy last week but didn't set a date for when masks would be required in the schools.

That action was taken at its meeting Sept. 20, where the board voted 6-1 to require masks during school hours beginning Sept. 23 to give administrators time to give families a heads-up about the change. Board member Joe Ejnik voted against the mask mandate, having previously championed that Superintendent Newell Haffner should have that authority instead of the board.

The action includes having the mask mandate come up at every board meeting in the future for review, and if the data shows that COVID-19 cases are on the decline, the board can consider going back to being mask-optional in school. The board usually meets twice a month, so the review would take place every two or three weeks.

The move came after almost three hours of back and forth among community members, school officials and board members on what is needed to be done to keep the school open for in-person learning, five days a week. Last week, the district closed the school for a day and then had the school only open to elementary students and older students who had been vaccinated, which had angered parents and brought many of them to the Sept. 20 meeting and the one before that.

Haffner announced at the board meeting that the school was going to resume a regular schedule on Sept. 21. The change had been initiated after the district went from two positive cases of COVID-19 to 14, which Haffner said the Shawano-Menominee Counties Health Department claimed was an outbreak.

Parent Jeff Brady told the board that the issue of COVID-19 policies, especially the masking, has polarized the community, and that some board members have their heels dug in on the issue without a willingness to listen to the concerns of community members. He accused the board of approving its plan without reading it first.

"The vote you cast last Monday night is creating a huge sense of mistrust and skepticism within our household," Brady said, adding later that compromising with the mask requirement would at least keep students in school five days a week.

Parent Kate Dillenburg, one of the few in the audience wearing a mask, said the board needs to move its meetings from merely identifying problems to solving them. She said the way to do that would be by setting thresholds for when circumstances would change instead of working off vague policies.

"When does a class get quar-antined? When does a school shut down?" Dillenburg said. "The thresholds should be publicly available — with a daily update as to where the school sits in relation to these thresholds — so parents and caregivers can know if and when we are approaching a threshold, so we can make proper arrangements for our kids."

Parent Jarrett Lyons said the district needs to keep the students in school in person, no matter what, saying that the pandemic seems to be going through a neverending cycle, and that there's no substitute for a teacher teaching with students in the same room.

"The need, and I use the term loosely, to close the school could come again two weeks later," Lyons said. "It's a huge distraction to the kids and takes away from a lot of the learning that should be going on."

The reinstatement of the mask policy had been intended by some on the board to relieve some of the pressure on Haffner by allowing the board to be the authority on when masks should be required. However, Haffner reported that parents have not ceased being hostile to him and his office staff whenever things have changed at the school related to COVID-19.

"I'm hoping we don't have to do this again, but I don't know," Haffner said. "We've gotten so much crap over the last 2½ weeks that it isn't fair. I'm sorry to say it that way, you guys, but it isn't fair to have (a secretary) on the phone and I'm in my office and can hear the other person, all because we said, 'We have to quarantine your kid because he was a close contact.'"

Haffner noted the quarantined kids, in many cases, were students who sat next to a student who tested positive for several class periods, noting most of the positive cases came from the junior and senior high school grades. He said while the school is quarantining students, the families are not keeping their affected children in the house.

"That's my frustration," Haffner said. "I'm asking, why am I doing it? If parents aren't going to help me try to do it, then I should wash my hands of it. Because all I'm doing is getting chewed out up and down for a job I'm supposed to do to keep everybody safe. It's like banging my head against a wall."

Gresham is not the only school district in Shawano County requiring masks. Shawano School District announced last week that it was issuing a mask mandate for three of its schools — Hillcrest Primary School, Shawano Community Middle School and Shawano Community High School. The district's fourth school, Olga Brener Intermediate School, did not have to have a mask mandate because COVID-19 cases remained low there.

Marilyn A. Damrau, 83, of Tigerton passed away Monday, Sept. 13, 2021, at Aspirus Wausau Hospital.

Marilyn Ann Rowe was born Nov. 2, 1937, in rural Montfort, Wisconsin, to Charles and Olivia (Steil) Rowe. She graduated from Montfort High School in 1955 and went on to Wisconsin State College at Platteville, earning her degree in elementary education in 1959. On Aug. 20, 1960, she was united in marriage to Gerald (Jerry) Damrau in Dubuque, Iowa. The couple settled in the Town of Germania, Shawano County, where they dairy farmed until Jerry's death on Aug. 24, 1994. Marilyn taught fourth grade for 31 years in Eland and Wittenberg, retiring in 1995.

Marilyn loved nature and spending time outside. She spent many hours walking the trails around the woods on the farm, enjoying the serenity and beauty of her home. She knew the native plants and flowers and loved helping neighbors and friends identify plants, flowers and birds. For many years, Marilyn grew a large garden and cooked hearty meals from the garden for her family and the men working on the farm. Marilyn was an excellent cook. After retirement, Marilyn traveled the world, read many books and enjoyed spending time with her family and friends. Most of all, she treasured the time she spent with her grandkids of whom she was very proud.

Survivors include two sons, Mike (Lori) Damrau and Brian Damrau; two grandchildren, Amber Damrau and Aaron Damrau; and one great-granddaughter, Olivia, all of Tigerton. There are five siblings: Barb Zenz of Portage, Carol Bakken of Middleton, Roger (Virginia) Rowe of Middleton, Tari Moon of McFarland, and Jane (Ray) Schlamp of Mazomanie. She is further survived by many nieces, nephews, other relatives and friends. Marilyn was preceded in death by her parents and her husband, Jerry.

Memorial services will be held Saturday, Sept. 25, at 11 a.m. at St. John Lutheran Church, Tigerton. Rev. Dean Suehring will officiate and inurnment will follow at Union Cemetery, Tigerton. Visitation will be on Saturday from 9 a.m. until time of service at the church. Memorials are preferred to St. John Lutheran Church, Tigerton.

For those wanting to watch on Facebook Live go to "St. John Lutheran Church and Immanuel Lutheran Church, Caroline" at the time of the service.

Beil-Didier Funeral Home, Tigerton, is assisting with the arrangements. Please go to www.beil-didier.com to sign the online guestbook or to send a card.

Our family wishes to thank all the caregivers and dear friends that helped Mom over the past few years.

ATHLETE PROFILE: OLYVIA STARK

Senior leading Witt-Birn girls in pool

Wittenberg-Birnamwood High School senior girls swimmer Olyvia Stark is enjoying a big senior season in the water, with several first-place finishes to her name already.

Stark won the 100-yard backstroke in 1 minute, 15.34 seconds in a dual loss to Seymour on Sept. 14.

She placed first in the 200 freestyle (2:25.35) and 100 backstroke (1:12.47) in a dual win over Clintonville on Sept. 7. She was also on the first-place finishing 200 medley and 200 freestyle relays.

Stark claimed the top time in the 200 freestyle (2:05.61) and was on the top-finishing 200 medley and 400 freestyle relays in a dual win over Marinette on Sept. 9.

At the Bay Conference Relays on Aug. 26, Stark was a part of the 200 medley, 300 backstroke and 100 freestyle relay teams that all finished first.

The senior opened the season with a third-place overall finish at the Marinette Pentathlon on Aug. 21. That day, she won the 50-yard backstroke.

Q: When did your interest in swim begin?

A: I remember swimming at a very young age; I always loved being in the water. I started taking lessons when I was around 4-6 years old, and I just fell in love with the sport.

Q: What is your favorite part about the swim season?

A: My favorite part would have to be the swim meets. It makes me so hyped up, even if it is early in the morning. I also love conversing with the other teams and making new friends.

Q: You are enjoying a strong senior season in the water. What's helped you be so successful so far?

A: I always try to put 110% of my energy into practices, whether that's in the weight room or the pool. I also have a strong team that always supports me and always keeps me laughing.

Q: Your team is also performing well despite limited roster numbers. What makes this year's team special?

A: I would say it's our bond; we all support each other through the good times and bad times. We all work hard together in the pool and outside the pool. Having a smaller team makes us closer, and we push each other to be the best.

Q: Do you have any individual goals you hope to accomplish by the end of the season?

A: Yes, I want to drop 5-7 seconds on my 100 back; my fastest time this season is a minute and eleven seconds. I also want to get around 2 minutes and 12 seconds in my 200 free — right now I'm around 2 minutes and 17 seconds.

Q: In order to be putting up your best times at the end of the season, what do you and your teammates need to focus on as the season winds down?

A: We need to get loads of rest and eat correctly. For me, I need to get over eight hours of sleep, ice my muscles and drink loads of water. Another thing is to be as stress free as possible; a clear mind equals a better swimmer.

Q: Do you have any rituals you go through before an event starts?

A: I like to warm up my muscles by smacking my body all over: shoulders, hips, thighs. If there's a muscle there, I'm going to smack it. I also like to say a small prayer to all of the people I've lost in my life to give me the strength to push myself and win.

Q: What's your favorite memory of competing on the Wittenberg-Birnamwood girls swim team?

A: This is my second year on this team, but it would have to be the pre-warm up things my coach, Rudy (John Rudeen), plans. This year we went mini golfing before our first meet. It was awesome team bonding and loads of fun.

Q: Favorite movie, TV show and musical artist?

A: TV show — "The Office." Movie — "Hercules" (Disney). Musical artist — Sasha Alex Sloan or Charlie Puth.

Q: Name one thing about yourself that not many people know.

A: I have been to a total of seven different schools in my life.

Q: What's the greatest piece of advice you have ever been told?

A: Always be yourself. I am 100% me and I am not ashamed or embarrassed of who I am, that's how I know people love me for who I am.

Q: What are some things you hope to accomplish after graduating high school?

A: I hope to go to college at UW-Oshkosh for business and marketing, and I would like to start my own company. I want to get rich without a man.

A complex tale of Nero's second wife

This week I chose “Augusta” by Dora Ilieva. It is a reimagining of the life of a girl who grows up to become Nero’s last wife.

Ms. Ilieva’s preface states that “history is written by the victors” and in the time of the Caesars, women were never the victors. So it felt right to see that world through the eyes of a girl/woman who had to navigate what was royal Rome.

JAN JONES

The vast Roman Empire was ruled with the iron fist of the emperor. Some were cruel, some were perverted, and some were deranged. Plots and treachery abounded, and sudden deaths were common.

Poppea Sabina was born three weeks after her father was forced to commit suicide due to his part in a plot to overthrow the maniacal Emperor Tiberius. Since her beautiful mother had a busy social life, Little Poppea was raised by a slave named Antonia.

Antonia did her best to teach the stubborn child the things a Roman lady should know. Poppea was 4 when her mother married the wealthy and powerful Publius Scipio. Like most society marriages it was for security, not love.

Scipio’s son Publius Cornelius is a few years older than Poppea and makes it clear that he doesn’t like her. That’s OK because she is uncomfortable around him.

The ever-scheming, Emperor Caligula sends Scipio to be governor of Asia, so Poppea doesn’t see him again until she’s 11 and eligible to be promised in marriage. A father’s word is law and not to be questioned, so she must accept the fact that she will marry the much older Rufrius Crispinus.

Still naïve and arrogant, Poppea refuses to have his baby until Antonia explains that a child will offer Poppea protection in a treacherous society. Poppea’s mother owns several successful factories not far from Neapolis. She deeds them to Poppea, then commits suicide to avoid arrest.

While inspecting the companies, she meets several people who follow a new god called Christos. A man named Paul tries to explain how his god teaches that all people are equal. She finds it intriguing, but it’s not for her.

Then Crispinus is sent to Rome, leaving Poppea and their son in Neapolis. She is unnerved when her stepbrother and his friend Marcus all but order her to attend a party. There she meets the young, lecherous Emperor Nero. She knows that Nero’s murderous mother, Agrippina, rules in his stead, and that Nero prefers poetry and music to politics. Poppea is humiliated to end up drunk and in bed with Marcus.

Marcus claims to love her, and soon she receives notice that Crispinus has divorced her. Leaving her child with Antonia, Poppea moves into Marcus’ villa in Rome. He explains that he wants to marry her, but Emperor Nero has forbidden it.

The palace is abuzz about Nero’s mother Agrippina and his shunned wife, Octavia. To her horror, Marcus is sent to a far-off post and Nero arrives to become her lover. Poppea knows how unstable he is and must use her beauty and wits to keep him from rash decisions.

This story depicts a man who wants to do right by the people but can’t convince the senate to get behind his ideas unless he uses force. Nero is often upset and turns to her for sound advice. He often complains that the tenements are too close together and poorly built, but the senate refuses to cooperate.

Fate steps in and the now-famous fire nearly destroys Rome. Nero is blaming the followers of Christos for the fire. Poppea tries to save them, but she’s no match for Nero’s rage.

Poppea Sabina once ruled Rome but is little more than a footnote in history today.

Wealth and power are seductive, but they often come at too high a cost. It’s much safer to use your public library to find books about that kind of life. Drop by soon so you can check it out.

Ambulance service gets bigger, busier

Shawano opens facility to public to see the work done daily to keep people alive

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

The new Shawano Ambulance Service building formally opened its doors to the public Sept. 18, eight months after moving into the facility on North Main Street.

Pat Trinko, director for the ambulance service, told a group of 30 people in attendance that the building was needed as the old facility had outlived its usefulness and the area has seen a marked increase in calls for ambulances. The total forecasted calls for this year is expected to be 3,770; just 20 years ago, Shawano Ambulance was called out 2,343 times.

Trinko attributed the increase in calls to an aging population. In 2015, about 20% of the population in Shawano County was 65 or older. He said the estimates in 2030 is that the elderly population will double.

"In the grand scheme of things, that's not a long time when you're talking facilities and building systems," Trinko said. "That's why we decided we need to get out in front of this, because almost 90% of the people we transport are over the age of 65."

Shawano Ambulance covers Shawano, Bonduel, Cecil, Gresham and all the surrounding towns, but there are times when the ambulance service is called out of the area, when neighboring ambulance services are unavailable to those in need. The local company also executes 1,300 to 1,400 interfacility transports per year, according to Trinko, because ThedaCare Medical Center-Shawano can only provide certain services. Many in need have to be cared for in Green Bay, Appleton, Wausau or even further away.

"We have a great hospital here in Shawano, but it's rather limited," Trinko said. "They don't have ortho; they don't have cardiac. So people who have some higher surgical needs generally have to be transported out to a different facility."

The ambulance service provides more than simple aid and transportation to medical facilities. Trinko said the Shawano service specializes in early intervention for a ST elevation myocardial infarction (STEMI), the most severe type of heart attack.

"We were one of the first services in the state to ground transport a STEMI and bypass your local hospital in favor of a facility that can treat that STEMI appropriately. You need a catheterization lab," he said. "So we petitioned the state of Wisconsin to do some things that have never been done before."

There are also times when Shawano Ambulance provides non-emergency services. Besides transportation to hospice facilities and nursing homes, the service also provides educational programs like free CPR classes, industrial first aid classes and child car seat inspections by forming a 501(c)(3) nonprofit to get grants and cut down on costs by the public.

"What we found with our cardiac saves was almost every time we were able to resuscitate a patient, somebody was doing CPR before we got there," Trinko said. "That was our impetus to go out there and teach the general public."

Trinko noted that it takes more than two dozen employees to keep the ambulance service alive.

"The people are the most important part," Trinko said. "Yeah, we've got nice trucks, and we've got a nice, new building. But it's these people who are the heart and soul of the operation."

The local ambulance service has managed to thrive in spite of a nationwide shortage of emergency medical technicians and paramedics. Trinko said folks aren't as community-minded as they used to be, which is why major services like Shawano's are needed so badly.

"We're seeing ambulance services fail all around us and had several close in the last couple of years," Trinko said. "We have several right in Shawano County that are having a rough time providing coverage to their areas. They'll get a call in one of the outlying areas, and they just won't answer."

Colorama fall trail ride around corner

1,000 horses anticipated at event in Caroline

By LUKE REIMER
Reporter

Caroline Lions Club officials are preparing for another great turnout for Caroline Colorama this year.

The 33rd annual event kicks off Sept. 30 and runs through Oct. 3. The event features trail rides on horses and carriages in Caroline. Free live music will also be provided from bands including Whiskey and Lace, Jason McNabb and the Reign and K Sterling and the 85 Silver Band.

"This is a chance for people to get outside, socialize and ride horses," said club member John Asenbrenner.

The weekend will feature horse rides, as visitors are encouraged to bring their own horses, a parade, a horseshoe tournament and breakfast and lunch.

The parade begins on Sunday at 1 p.m. and runs through Main Street in Caroline. During the parade, there are three categories for participating floats — horseback, horsedrawn and beauty. Each category pays $75 for first place and $50 for second place. For information, contact Scott Brandenburg at 715-250-3344.

Colorama acts as the Lions Club's annual fundraiser, where all of the money raised benefits local folks.

"This money stays in the community," said Asenbrenner. "We use it to help those in need."

The event will take place under the Lions Club shelter.

Asenbrenner said that 900 campsites are sold for this year, with many families and horses ready to spend a weekend outdoors.

"We average about 1,000 horses on Saturday," said Asenbrenner. "On Sunday, it is a little bit of an advanced ride, but we still see between 500 and 800 horses."

With this being such a big event, Asenbrenner said that the community plays a large role in the success of the event every year.

"This is a community effort," said Asenbrenner. "The whole community helps. Everyone pitches in."

Adding to the community effort, during the trail rides, Asenbrenner said that land owners donate their land for the weekend to be used.

The event was held last year in the midst of the COVID-19 pandemic. Asenbrenner said that he assumes a similar turnout will attend this year.

"Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, we had less people come than usual," said Asenbrenner. "With the COVID-19 variant now, I would assume that we would have a similar attendance; if not, I think there will be more people."

He said that holding an event like this gives people that opportunity to get out, have some fun and socialize with people whom they may not have seen in a while.

With the amount of people who attend this event every year, Asenbrenner said that he has seen people travel to Caroline from Michigan, Minnesota and as far away as Montana.

Since the event's inception 33 years ago, Asenbrenner has noticed how it has evolved.

"Our first year, we had a handful of people just take a horse ride together and got dinner after," said Asenbrenner. "Now it has evolved into this, where we have 1,000 horses coming and 900 campsites sold."

Asenbrenner said that people enjoy coming to this event not only due to the festivities, but also a sense of town pride.

"People like to come to this event because they enjoy putting Caroline on the map," said Asenbrenner.

He added that the weekend is a lot of fun but isn't likely to break a family's budget.

"I think that is why people come: It is an inexpensive way to spend the weekend," said Asenbrenner. "With our campsites at $40 to rent and a $5 fee to ride the trails, visitors don't have to drive back and forth from home, or find another place to stay. They can just camp here."

Applications for Kohl foundation awards open

Nominations of Wisconsin teachers and principals can be submitted online at www.kohleducation.org for the 2022 Herb Kohl Educational Foundation teacher fellowship and principal leadership awards.

The deadline for submission is at 5 p.m. Oct. 12. Awards are $6,000, with an additional $6,000 grant going to the school of each selected teacher and principal. Established in 1990, the Herb Kohl Educational Foundation awards 100 fellowships and 16 leadership awards annually from among applicants throughout the state.

For teachers or principals to be eligible, they must be nominated by a parent, student, other teacher, community member or school administrator. Teachers and principals in pre-kindergarten through 12th grade who plan to continue in their current capacity for at least one year are eligible.

The Herb Kohl Educational Foundation Fellowship rewards teachers who have demonstrated superior ability to inspire love of learning in their students, have motivated others and have provided meritorious service both in and outside the classroom. It also recognizes and supports principals who demonstrate administrative leadership and positively influence school culture.

Online nominations must be submitted at www.kohleducation.org. Selection of recipients will be made by a state-level panel composed of representatives from the Wisconsin Newspaper Association Foundation, Association of Wisconsin School Administrators, cooperative educational service agencies, several education-related associations and community representatives.

Since the program was established in 1990, the Herb Kohl Foundation has awarded 3,313 grants to teachers and principals, and 3,313 matching grants to their schools throughout the state for a total of almost $13.4 million.

The programs are co-sponsored by the Wisconsin Newspaper Association Foundation, Wisconsin Department of Public Instruction, Association of Wisconsin School Administrators and the state's 12 cooperative educational service agencies.

3 men, 2 local, arrested in Clintonville traffic stop

Two men, one from Marion and the other from Keshena, were arrested during a traffic stop in Clintonville that yielded drugs.

On Sept. 17, a Clintonville police officer noticed a vehicle traveling through the city with expired registration displayed. The officer stopped the vehicle on Eighth Street for the unregistered vehicle violation.

K-9 Charr was on scene and alerted on the vehicle for the presence of illegal narcotics.

Officers searched the vehicle and located 18.46 grams of suspected methamphetamine, 7.27 grams of suspected marijuana, 0.66 grams of suspected heroin, medication, a scale and other various pieces of drug paraphernalia, according to a Clintonville Police Department press release.

As a result of the search, the 30-year-old Marion man was arrested for a Wisconsin probation and parole hold, possession of methamphetamine with the intent to deliver with the enhancer of possessing within 1,000 feet of a school, possession of narcotic drugs and possession of drug equipment. The 42-year-old Keshena man was arrested on a Shawano County Sheriff's Department warrant, while a 21-year-old man from Iron River, Michigan, was arrested for possession of methamphetamine within 1,000 feet of a school and possession/illegally obtained prescription.

The Marion man and Iron River man were transported to the Wau-paca County Jail, while the Keshena man was turned over to the Shawano County Jail.

Mask mandate put into place for 3 Shawano public schools

The Shawano School District posted a notice on Sept. 17 that it was going to require masks, beginning Sept. 20, during the normal school day at three of its schools.

The mask mandate is in effect for Shawano Community High School, Shawano Community Middle School and Hillcrest Primary School through at least Oct. 1. There is no mandate at Olga Brener Intermediate School, although the district "strongly recommends masking" at the school, according to the notice.

The notice from Superintendent Randi Anderson claimed increased rates of illness in the schools where the mandates are in effect, along with an increased community rate, which she said is putting the effort to keep school in session five days a week at risk. She wrote that the district would be looking at what plans are to keep COVID-19 in check after Oct. 1.

The pandemic is slightly better for the school district now than when it was a year ago. In 2020, the district required masks from day one with a hybrid learning session, and it was around the end of September when the district went to a full virtual learning schedule for over three months.

Therapeutic exercise for neck pain first choice

It's estimated that 48.5% of us will be affected with neck pain at some point in our life and that costs for treating it are approximately $20 billion per year in the United States alone. Neck pain can be caused by any number of disorders and diseases.

The most common cause is classified as mechanical malfunction, which occurs after years of normal use, overuse, and misuse. The neck supports the heavy weight of the head while still allowing it to tilt, turn, and nod easily. Decades of such use can cause neck pain for many, and recent research also found that smart-phone overuse increased the risk of neck pain by 599%, likely due to the awkward head postures it can promote.

Neck pain used to be something many people simply had to learn to live with. Recently published research provides us with important new insights about treatment for this potentially debilitating condition.

A team of international researchers assessed a select group of high-quality studies regarding the effectiveness of therapeutic exercise for patients with chronic neck pain. Therapeutic exercise proved to have good short-term and intermediate-term effects on pain and disability with no serious adverse events. Based on these findings, therapeutic exercise should be considered a first-line choice for patients with chronic neck pain. Overall, these methods are safer and more effective than medications, injections or surgery.

BRIAN GRIEVES

Before starting a therapeutic exercise program, you should consult your family medical doctor or chiropractor. Your doctor will perform an examination to determine the cause and if you are a good candidate for a therapeutic exercise program. The exam should include muscle endurance testing to measure any deficit and establish a baseline.

Based upon the results of endurance testing, a specific spinal rehabilitation program should be initiated and followed with periodic testing. Additionally, multiple research studies demonstrate that having strong endurance neck muscles reduces the risk for future episodes.

Dean and Cheryl Konkel, right, are shown with Todd and Wendy Sensig, sponsors of Shawano County's 372nd barn quilt at W13004 State Highway 29 in Tilleda.

Senzig's sponsors barn quilt in Tilleda

Todd and Wendy Sensig, owners of Senzig's Fine Home Furnishings in Shawano, have sponsored Shawano County's 372nd barn quilt. Called "I Feel MOO-velous," it is on display on a farm owned by Dean and Cheryl Konkel at W13004 State Highway 29, Tilleda, 15 miles west of Shawano.

Dean Konkel and four brothers, including his twin, Wayne, grew up on the 80-acre farm that was purchased by their parents, Lesley and Beulah Konkel, in 1943 from a Schultz family. The barn on which the quilt is displayed was built more than 100 years ago.

Dean's dad had a dairy herd of about 20 Holstein cows until 1982. From then until 1988, there were a few beef cattle on the farm, but Dean always had a love of dairy cows, so he put together a dairy herd of 40 Holstein cows and started milking in 1988. He purchased the farm from his dad in 1998 and continues to milk his Holstein cows twice a day. He also does custom harvesting for nearby Hartleben farm, where they raise dairy heifers.

Dean and Cheryl have been married since 2004. She works at Fleet Farm in Clintonville, where they met in 2002.

"One day, I went to Fleet Farm to buy some bug spray, and I came home with a wife," Dean said with a chuckle.

Senzig's Fine Furniture has been in business in Shawano for 56 years through three generations, currently owned by Todd and Wendy. However, the history of their farming roots will lie forever in the hearts of the Senzig family.

Todd's grandparents were all farmers, while Wendy grew up on a Christmas tree farm. Their upbringing taught them both from an early age the importance of agriculture. Today, they use their learned skills through gardening, something they look forward to every spring.

Although it may not be harvesting acres of crops or planting rows of seedlings, the love the Sensigs have for tending to the earth remains strong.

"Our sponsorship of a barn quilt for Shawano County comes from a deep respect and admiration for the farmers in our community," Todd Sensig said. "We are thankful for the opportunity to show our appreciation to the farmers in our area and the people they serve."

The Konkel barn quilt was painted by the Shawano County barn quilt committee and was put on display by LeRoy Raddant and his grandson, Keenan, both of whom work for Raddant Electric in Shawano.

Toothpaste provides lesson on words

Sacred Heart Catholic School students, from left, Elias Reiter, Carter Kleist, Remington Montour and Oliver Schwantes work with little tube of toothpastes, which were helpful recently in teaching an important lesson on bullying and kindness to first grade students at Sacred Heart.

Caldwell named to New North board of directors

CHRISTOPHER CALDWELL

College of Menominee Nation President Christopher Caldwell has been named to the board of directors of New North Inc., the organization's board development committee announced recently.

Caldwell has been president of CMN since June 25. He had served as the college's interim president for the prior 17 months, successfully guiding CMN through pandemic-related challenges. Caldwell previously directed the Sustainable Development Institute at CMN, starting in October 2012.

Prior to entering the field of higher education, he spent 7½ years as director of compliance and enforcement officer for the department of trust resources of the Menominee Indian Tribe of Wisconsin. His earlier career included work as a forest products technician with the USDA Forest Service in Madison; student and intern with the U.S. Department of Interior Bureau of Indian Affairs-NCCE; and timber marker and forest technician for Menominee Tribal Enterprises.

"We are excited by the multiple perspectives that Chris brings to the New North board of directors," says Barb LaMue, president and CEO of New North. "His background in higher education, tribal operations and sustainability will be beneficial to our dialogue and work programs."

Caldwell holds an associate degree in sustainable development from CMN, a bachelor's degree in natural resources from the University of Wisconsin-Madison, and a master's degree in environmental science and policy from the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay. He currently is a Ph.D. candidate in environment and resources from the UW-Madison Nelson Institute.

He is the fourth person to lead CMN, an accredited baccalaureate-level college with campuses in Keshena and Green Bay since its inception in 1993. Caldwell is an enrolled member of the Menominee tribe.

Combat vet featured speaker at annual meeting for historical society

A combat veteran will be sharing her experiences at the Shawano County Historical Society's annual meeting at 6 p.m. Oct. 18 at Shawano City Hall, 127 S. Sawyer St., Shawano.

Laura Colbert is the author of "How to Pee Standing Up/Sirens: An alarming memoir of combat and coming back home." Colbert has appeared on PBS, Veterans Radio, NPR and a variety of podcasts.

Colbert grew up in Minocqua and Waupaca. She attended UW-Madison from 2000-2006 and graduated with a bachelor's degree in kinesiology. During that time, she served in the Army National Guard as a military police officer. Colbert deployed to Baghdad, Iraq, from March 2003 to July 2004.

After graduating from UW-Madison, Colbert taught physical education in Aylesbury, England, in 2007. In 2008, she worked as an activities director in Fargo, North Dakota, for individuals with special needs.

Wanting to move closer to home and utilize her degree, Colbert worked as a physical education teacher, dean of students and academic and career planning coordinator at Madison West High School from 2008-2017. She received a master's degree in educational leadership through Cardinal Stritch in 2011 and a master's degree in experiential education from UW-LaCrosse in 2012.

Legislative leaders undermine public education

This is a special time of year for children, families and educators. I know, as an educator and as a parent, that the transition back to school can be a challenging time, and this year, of course, the challenges are far greater than ever before, and our educators and students are rising to them.

While they do that, while they take on the common challenges of a new school year and the extraordinary ones stemming from returning to school during a once-in-a-lifetime pandemic, the legislative leadership in our state is taking on a different challenge — the challenge of undermining public education for their own political gain.

I've said it before and I'll say it again: These legislators are using our children as playthings in a political game, and they will not win, but they will hurt our students, our educators and our democratic principles in the process. Because by attempting to undermine public education by ramming controversial, misguided and unexamined bills through the legislative process without providing ample opportunity for public input, they are ultimately undermining democracy and robbing Wisconsinites of their right to civic participation.

It's ironic, really, since one of the egregiously fast-tracked bills currently making its way through the legislature is a bill about civics, and it includes a stipulation concerning curriculum that teaches "an understanding of the process for effectively advocating before governmental bodies and officials." How interesting that Assembly Bill 563, authored by Speaker Robin Vos, was introduced only one day before its hearing. I would say it's pretty difficult to effectively advocate before a governmental body with barely 24 hours' notice, so the bill is already hypocritical in its provisions.

It doesn't stop there. The bill also attempts to regulate civics curriculum to require teaching "an understanding of pupils' shared rights and responsibilities as residents of this state." Sounds great, doesn't it? Except that Vos and the exclusively Republican co-sponsorship of this bill seem to have forgotten their own rights and responsibilities as residents in, not to mention representatives of, this state. They are responsible, as stewards of their constituents, for engaging with experts and stakeholders in Wisconsin as they craft legislation.

In this field, civics education, I am both an expert and a stakeholder, and more importantly, the duly elected Wisconsin state superintendent. This is an independent statewide elected office. I head the Department of Public Instruction, charged with advancing public education to ensure the success of our state's children, and somehow the sponsors of this bill forgot to consult us or other experts or stakeholders. I wonder why.

Actually, I know why. They don't want to hear what I have to say. The thing is, they shouldn't have a choice. They don't have to agree with me, but concerning public education in Wisconsin, I will not stand idly by while legislative leaders attempt a blatant power grab at the expense of Wisconsin's children. We must — and we will — make our case.

Another of these hastily proposed and ill-advised bills is Assembly Bill 562, which would require parental notification prior to any instruction regarding sexuality or gender identity, effectively obstructing the potential for free and open discussion in our classrooms and LGBTQ+-inclusive curriculum in our schools. There are far-reaching and damaging implications of this bill, but again, with one day's notice, we cannot thoroughly examine them. I wonder why.

My guess is that speed is tantamount to smoke and mirrors; the sponsors of this bill want to hide exactly how far-reaching and damaging this legislation stands to be. Let me be clear — it would be extremely damaging. This bill, if made into law, would hurt children, both LGBTQ+ and not. Without being able to address sexuality and gender identity in the classroom, how can LGBTQ+ students identify the supportive staff in their schools?

Research from GLSEN shows that having supportive adults in a school has a significant positive effect on LGBTQ+ students' sense of belonging and safety, not to mention on their attendance rates and their academic success. All students benefit from supportive adults and LGBTQ+-inclusive curriculum, because modeling support and allyship reduces discrimination, and inclusive curriculum makes it possible to teach about the rich tapestry of the people of Wisconsin, of which the LGBTQ+ community is an integral part.

So here is my message for the students of Wisconsin: You have an ally in your state superintendent. I've got your back.

That is why I am taking my appeal directly to the people of Wisconsin, who elected me to lead public education in this state. You can agree or disagree with me, but either way, I need you to pay attention. I need you to read up on these bills. I need you to talk to your schools and your friends, and especially your children, about what they would mean for the schools and classrooms in your district. I need you to call your state representative and senator and ask them to slow down.

Jill Underly is the superintendent for the Wisconsin Department of Public Instruction.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Fear distorts elections, COVID-19, refugees

To the editor:

Fear — an emotion experienced in the mind.

Fear has the power to inhibit one's rational thinking. It may be politically and culturally manipulated to persuade others of ideas that otherwise should be widely rejected. It also can dissuade people from idea that would otherwise be widely supported. Our world today is full of examples of fear being used to influence our thinking and divide us.

We value that our elections are secure. Yet people have been manipulated into believing there is widespread voter fraud. We also value honesty. However, fear of election fraud has been publicized, though the research has shown this is not true.

The Centers for Disease Control's latest recommendation is that masks be worn in areas of the county where COVID-19 has spiked to concerning levels. However, according to a Milwaukee Journal Sentinel article, Sen. Ron Johnson says it's "time to reclaim liberty and end this state of fear." He questions if masks "do more harm than good." Research has shown clearly that masks reduce COVID-19 spread. So, fear has been used to stir emotions and make people think that masks are bad for their health.

Wisconsin's Fort McCoy is being used as a temporary home to Afghan immigrants who have been rescued from a dangerous country. We should be having empathy for these individuals and do all we can do to help them. However, there is already the spreading of fear that these people haven't been vetted thoroughly and are therefore dangerous. We should have trust that the process that is in place will function to keep Wisconsinites safe.

We need to be aware that we are being manipulated by some of what is said on Facebook or on conservative media. Misinformation (information that is inaccurate) and disinformation (false information that is meant to deceive) can cause fear. We need to be aware of situations where the emotion of fear is being generated for a certain outcome. We should be wary of politicians who use incorrect information to spread fear.

Shawano native on climate migration's front lines

Tempus documenting great shifts of people leaving uninhabitable areas for future book

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

Climate change is an issue that has the whole word buzzing as communities and nations are experiencing extended droughts, more intense hurricanes, unprecedented flooding and the destruction that occurs from such phenomena.

Shawano native Alexandra Tempus, who now resides in Los Angeles, is bringing attention to a side effect of climate change called climate migration, when the disasters in the world force families to pull up stakes and move elsewhere in the hope that the other side of the fence is less hazardous to their lives.

"As the impact of climate change escalates — as we see more intense rains and flooding, higher temperatures, drought and wildfire and sea level rise — there are places around the world and in this country it is becoming increasingly uninhabitable," Tempus said. "People are having to move. Sometimes it's just briefly away from a disaster zone like a hurricane, but increasingly, there are whole communities that are talking about and starting to implement relocation of neighborhoods, sometimes just a stretch of individual homes."

Tempus' efforts have been getting some attention nationally. The New York Times published an op-ed by the 2006 Shawano Community High School graduate titled "When climate change comes to your doorstep" last month, and she recently went on CNN Newsroom with Pamela Brown to talk about climate migration and its impact.

The issue has piqued Tempus' interest to the point where she is writing a book on the subject. The book, which is still in its formative stages and untitled, should come out in the next couple of years, according to Tempus, and will be published by St. Martin's Press.

"People are moving away from these dangerous, uninhabitable areas, and that's what we call climate migration," Tempus said. "My argument is that the United States is experiencing this phenomenon, and we don't have any sort of coordinated federal effort to plan for or address the issue."

Tempus cited as an example that funding is available to help homeowners who are impacted by hurricanes and other disasters and help them relocate. However, there is no federal agency or coordinated plan to make sure the funding is getting where it is needed, and there are also no federal programs available to help college students and renters.

"I think what's going to happen is there are going to be population shifts," Tempus said. "People are going to be making different decisions about where they move to, and we're going to see a reshaping of the country, the same way that the great migration of the 20th century reshaped the country. I call it America's great climate migration, because people hear the word migration and think about people crossing borders, but it's still migration even if it happens within a country."

Climate migration has actually existed for a while, Tempus noted, but it's been "invisible" because most people just think neighbors are moving for other reasons, like a better job.

"Climate has been a factor in moves and is now starting to be a factor in how cities plan where they put things," Tempus said. "Even moving from one side of town to the other, that's migration. I think we're going to see things shift in a big way across the country."

Tempus has also noticed that many people who are moving without climate change in mind are putting themselves in potential disaster zones. She noted that, according to U.S. Census Bureau, people seeking warmer weather are moving west, where an extended megadrought has prompted communities to look at limited supplies of water, or to the south, where the number of hurricanes hitting Texas, Louisiana and other states has increased.

"These areas are the fastest growing regions of the country, and it's interesting that it overlaps with these increasingly dangerous climate conditions," Tempus said. "These are decisions made without consideration for future climate conditions. Now we're seeing that it's coming to an inflection point with these overlapping climate disasters."

From numerous hurricanes in the summer months of 2020 and 2021 to the flooded subways in New York to harsh wildfire seasons in Montana, California and Minnesota, climate change is rearing its head enough in the public eye that it will be key for people when they determine where they're going to put down roots, according to Tempus.

"It's critical that we get off fossil fuels and cut down greenhouse gases immediately and drastically to attack the root of the problem," Tempus said. "In the meanwhile, a certain amount of climate impact has taken place with the climate changes that have been set in motion. We need to start planning around these changes that are happening."

Tempus, who just turned 33 last week, has been writing about climate change and climate migration for over a decade, but she noted other writers around the country are sounding the alarm on changes in the world and how people need to pay attention to how things are changing.

"It's starting to sink in for people," Tempus said. "I hope that, with my writing and storytelling, I hope I can get the message across and connect the dots and show the bigger picture. That's my aim."

Preventative care needed for children

Report indicates pediatric office visits fell 27% during the pandemic

A new report recently published by the American Academy of Pediatrics and Georgetown University Center for Children and Families highlights the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on preventative pediatric care.

According to the report, pediatric office visits fell 27% during the pandemic, for various reasons, including economic hardship and safety measures put in place to limit exposure to COVID-19.

“Wellness checks help care teams and families monitor the health and development of infants and toddlers,” said Dr. Sharon Rink, pediatrician with ThedaCare Physicians-Darboy. “These visits are a great opportunity to discuss any concerns parents might have about their child, such as eating/feeding issues, sleep schedules, growth and overall development. As providers, it’s important for us to see our young patients regularly to make sure they are growing and developing appropriately.”

With the decline in pediatric well-child visits, health systems are also seeing a drop in childhood vaccinations. According to the data from the World Health Organizations and UNICEF, 23 million children missed out on basic vaccines through routine immunization services in 2020 — 3.7 million more than in 2019.

Rink said immunizations protect children from diseases such as measles, pertussis (whooping cough), polio and others that can cause serious long-term health issues and also death.

“Several vaccinations are given in the first two years of life,” Rink said. “The schedule ThedaCare follows has been studied and recommended by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and other professional health organizations. This schedule is the most effective in terms of immune response and protection against the common viruses and bacteria that can be fatal to infants and young children, and/or affect their growth and development. For many of these infections, the only treatment is prevention.”

ThedaCare pediatricians are encouraging all families to schedule and complete recommended well-child visits and immunizations to help protect children.

sure we are protecting our children from diseases that can be avoided by safe immunizations,” Rink said. “Disease outbreaks would be catastrophic for communities, and potentially lead to less in-person learning. Health systems are also continuing to respond to COVID-19, and in some parts of the country, seeing a significant number of infections, making paramount to ensure every child receives the preventative care they need through immunizations.”

Snow Removal Bids Accepted Village of Wittenberg

The Village of Wittenberg will be accepting sealed bids for the plowing and removal of snow for the Village of Wittenberg Streets. Any other specifications can be obtained by contacting the Village Clerk at 253-6063 or writing to the Village of Wittenberg, P.O. Box 331, Wittenberg, WI 54499. These bids are to be received at the Clerk’s Office before 5:00 p.m. Monday, October 4, 2021. The Village Board of Wittenberg reserves the right to accept or reject any or all bids.

Fans provide energy for Pack in 1st game back

By MORGAN RODE
Sports Editor

After the Green Bay Packers' abysmal showing against the New Orleans Saints in week one, the team was eager to return home and have full support of the green and gold faithful at Lambeau Field for the first time since early 2020.

The Packers looked much more like the team fans expected to see coming into the season in their 35-17 win over the Detroit Lions on Monday night. The 77,240 fans in attendance made their presence felt, and the team took notice.

Head coach Matt LaFleur opened his press conference talking about the fans.

"It was great to be back in Lambeau," said LaFleur. "Definitely felt the fans' presence. It was long overdue. I think we can all attest to that."

The last time Lambeau Field was at full capacity was for the NFC Divisional Round playoff game against the Seattle Seahawks on Jan. 12, 2020. That Green Bay season ended the following week in San Francisco before limited fans were in attendance for the entire 2020 season because of the coronavirus pandemic.

Players had a difficult time adjusting to playing in nearly empty stadiums, often saying they needed to bring extra energy to the field. Big plays didn't bring out a buzz from the crowd like in years past, and many players admitted that playing in 2020 wasn't nearly as fun.

While things aren't exactly how they were in 2019 or years before that, there was definitely some extra energy at Lambeau on Monday.

When asked about the atmosphere, quarterback Aaron Rodgers' face lit up.

"It's special. It's what you miss for an entire year without this type of atmosphere," said Rodgers. "You miss everything from the intro with the people holding their phones up, or lights or whatever it was, to the flyover. Yeah, It's special. There's nothing like that feeling — 'Jump Around' in the fourth quarter when you're ahead. 'Roll Out The Barrel' and beer races. With the crowd, it's way different."

After a shaky first half, the Packers established dominance over the Lions in the third quarter. Like has happened so many times in the past, in the blink of an eye, the Packers had taken complete control of the game — with the fans loving every minute of it.

With the game out of reach soon after, the anxiety level of the fans went down, and the energy level of the fans continued to rise. Fans were on their feet for much of the second half, even as rain began to fall and the rain ponchos were brought out.

Songs played over the stadium were sung along to and fans reacted more with some of the games, hype videos and other game day features the Packers displayed on the scoreboards.

Even with a win well in hand, many fans remained in the stands until the final whistle, soaking up the team's first win of the season. Many of the fans who left their seats early could still be found in the parking lots an hour-plus after the game wrapped up, even despite having heavy rain move through the area right after the game.

"It was fun," said running back Aaron Jones of having fans back. "It's special playing here in front of a packed crowd. The fans really bring the juice, and they give us the extra added energy we need. Last year, we had to bring our own juice, and you get out there and it's kind of like they brought the juice for you. I love playing in front of a packed Lambeau crowd, running out of that tunnel to 80,000."

The win over the Lions marked the ninth consecutive victory for the Packers in home openers, yet another sign of just how much the fans mean to the team. Since 2007, the Packers are 14-1 in their first games of the season at Lambeau Field.

Big 2nd half lifts Packers over Lions

Green Bay outscores Detroit 21-0

By MORGAN RODE
Sports Editor

The Green Bay Packers outscored the Detroit Lions 21-0 after halftime to claim a 35-17 win on Sept. 20 at Lambeau Field.

The teams traded punches in the first half, with a late Lions' field goal giving the visitors a 17-14 lead at the break. The Packers' offense started the second half with the ball and got a big play from its two biggest offensive stars to start rolling.

Facing a third-and-12 play, quarterback Aaron Rodgers delivered a deep ball to receiver Davante Adams up the right sideline. The pass from Rodgers was perfect against good coverage, and Adams reached up at the last second to pull down the ball.

Three plays later, Rodgers delivered another perfect pass into a small window, finding tight end Robert Tonyan for a 22-yard touchdown and a 21-17 lead — the Packers' first lead of the season.

"That was a game-changing play," said coach Matt LaFleur on the 50-yard connection between Rodgers and Adams. "I think there was a couple within the game that were like that, but certainly that had an enormous impact on how that game turned out."

The Packers' defense then kept the Lions off the scoreboard for just the second possession of the game after forcing an incomplete pass on a fourth-down play.

A penalty-filled drive followed, with the Packers eventually extending their lead on an 11-yard touchdown pass from Rodgers to running back Aaron Jones.

On the Lions' first offensive play of the next series, quarterback Jared Goff mishandled the snap and Packers linebacker Krys Barnes fell on it.

Five plays later, Jones powered in from a yard out to cap the scoring in the contest and a four-touchdown game for the running back.

Jones scored both of the Packers' first-half touchdowns, with one coming on a 4-yard touch pass from Rodgers and the other on a 1-yard pass to the right flat.

Jones finished the night with 17 carries for 67 yards and six receptions for 48 yards. His three receiving scores in the game marked the first time a Packer running back accomplished that feat since Andy Uram against the Chicago Cardinals way back in 1942.

"It feels great, you know, just to get that ugly taste out of your mouth (after the lopsided loss to the Saints in week one)," said Jones. "We had to wait an extra day to get that taste out of our mouth."

"I'm glad we came out and handled business and (got) back to playing Packer football."

The Packers' offensive outburst in the second half was complimented by the defense shutting out the Lions after a shaky first half.

Green Bay's defense surrendered 197 total yards and over six yards a play in the first 30 minutes of action. Along with its fourth-down stop and fumble recovery, the Packers' defense forced a punt, saw linebacker De'Vondre Campbell intercept a pass and had another stop on fourth down in the final half.

After only managing three points in the opener, Green Bay's offense was also much more efficient, with LaFleur noting the team made it a priority to put the ball in the hands of its playmakers.

Along with Jones' big game, Adams caught eight passes for 121 yards, and Tonyan had three catches for 52 yards. Rodgers finished the night completing 22 of 27 passes for 255 yards and the four scores.

Along with his fourth-quarter interception, Campbell led the defense with 13 total tackles. Safety Adrian Amos had 10 total tackles.

"Hopefully, it is an upward trajectory," said LaFleur on what to expect out of the defense going forward. "I think there are a lot of things that we can build upon, but certainly there are a lot of things we can do better."

In what turned out to be a similar first half to the first week, Green Bay stayed in the game this time around because it was able to match Detroit's scores.

After Detroit marched 75 yards in seven plays on the first drive of the game, Green Bay answered with an 11-play, 75-yard drive to tie it. The Lions went back ahead after scoring another touchdown on their third possession, but again the Packers answered, this time with a 10-play, 56-yard drive.

The victory improved LaFleur's record to 7-0 in regular season games following a loss.

KEYS TO THE GAME

By BILL HUBER
Correspondent

The Green Bay Packers (1-1) travel to face the San Francisco 49ers (2-0) at 7:20 p.m. on Sept. 26 at Levi's Stadium. NBC will televise the game.

History

The Packers are 33-28-1 in regular season matchups, and the teams split their eight playoff encounters. The teams last met on Nov. 5, 2020 – a highly anticipated showdown after the 49ers crushed the Packers in the 2019 regular season and again in the 2019 NFC Championship Game. Instead, with the 49ers decimated by injuries and COVID, Green Bay rolled to a 34-17 victory. It wasn't even that close; Green Bay led 34-3 late in the fourth quarter before a couple lipstick-on-the-pig touchdowns. Aaron Rodgers was 25-of-31 passing for 305 yards, four touchdowns and a 147.2 passer rating.

Coaches

Green Bay – Matt LaFleur, 27-7, third season. San Francisco — Kyle Shanahan, 31-35, fifth season.

When the Packers have the ball

After a dismal performance vs. New Orleans in week one in which the Packers scored a league-worst three points, the offense came to life in Monday's 34-17 victory over the Detroit Lions. Rodgers threw four touchdown passes vs. zero interceptions, Aaron Jones scored four touchdowns and Davante Adams caught eight passes for 121 yards.

"Obviously, it starts with getting the ball to our playmakers, which are 33 and 17," Rodgers said of Jones and Adams. "That's where it all starts, then finding ways to let our great role players make plays."

Of course, first-year 49ers defensive coordinator DeMeco Ryans will be well aware of Green Bay's offensive formula and will plan accordingly. This will be a much, much bigger test than facing the Lions' retooled defense. The 49ers have a star-studded unit that has been mostly dominant to start the season.

Statistically, it's not a great unit. Through the way-too-early prism of two games, San Francisco is 10th with 22 points allowed per game, 19th in total defense (379.0 yards), 28th in yards per rushing attempt (5.04), eighth in yards per passing attempt (6.06), sixth on third down (33.3 percent conversions) and 25th in the red zone (80.0 percent touchdowns).

However, a lot of that is skewed by Detroit's week one comeback.

The 49ers took the foot off the gas a bit after taking a 38-10 lead midway through the third quarter. Perhaps a more accurate indicator is the first half of that game (164 yards allowed, 10 points, one defensive touchdown) and Sunday's 17-11 victory at Philadelphia in which it took the Eagles 56 minutes to find the end zone.

Ryans runs a 4-3 defense that is fueled by a superb front. Nick Bosa and Arik Armstead are an elite tandem on the edges, and D.J. Jones and Javon Kinlaw are the tackles. Bosa (second pick in 2019), Armstead (17th pick in 2015) and Kinlaw (14th pick in 2020) aren't just former first-round picks but top-20 picks. Dee Ford (23rd pick in 2014) comes off the bench to rush the passer.

They will provide a massive test for Green Bay's retooled offensive line, which has been pretty good the first two weeks but will face a much stiffer challenge. Bosa, in particular, is off to a dominant start with three sacks. He rushes mostly from the defense's right side, meaning the first real challenge for left tackle Elgton Jenkins.

Fred Warner is one of the best middle linebackers in the business. He has at least 118 tackles and six passes defended in each of his first three seasons. He's flanked by Marcell Harris and Azeez Al-Shaair. Harris replaced Dre Greenlaw in the lineup; Greenlaw is on injured reserve with a groin injury sustained on his pick-six at Detroit. It's a big loss, though it hardly mattered against the Eagles.

Rodgers will look at the Niners' cornerbacks and see opportunities. On paper, the outside starters are Jason Verrett and Emmanuel Moseley and the slot is K'Waun Williams. However, the injury-prone Verrett suffered a torn ACL in week one and Moseley missed the first two games with a knee injury (though Shanahan is hopeful he'll make his season debut vs. Green Bay).

That left former All-Pro Josh Norman and fifth-round rookie Deommodore Lenoir as the corners with Williams in the slot against Philadelphia. That the Niners went with the 33-year-old Norman, who is long past his days as a premier cover man, over the 33-year-old Richard Sherman speaks volumes about where Sherman's at at this stage of his career.

The safeties are the quality duo of Jaquiski Tarrt and Jimmie Ward.

When the 49ers have the ball

Through six quarters, the Packers' defense had given up nine scores in 12 possessions. It's hard to imagine Joe Barry's tenure as coordinator starting much worse. But, Green Bay played much better in the second half, pitching a shutout while forcing two turnovers. Of course, that comes with the obvious asterisk of that came against Detroit, which might have the worst receiver corps in the NFL.

"I think we did make some necessary adjustments at halftime," LaFleur said. "One of the things I talked to Joe about was either play coverage or we have to pressure because, when we were doing our four-man rushes and playing man coverages behind it, we weren't getting to the quarterback. We needed to affect the quarterback much more."

It will be a bigger challenge against the 49ers. They are eighth with 29 points per game, sixth in yards per passing attempt (8.93), 24th in yards per rushing attempt (3.76), No. 17 on third down (39.1 percent) and tied for No. 1 with a perfect mark in the red zone.

Before this year's draft, the 49ers traded their 2021, 2022 and 2023 first-round draft picks, as well as an additional third-rounder, to move up from No. 12 to No. 3. At that spot, they selected quarterback Trey Lance. Nonetheless, expect Jimmy Garoppolo to make his third consecutive start. He's played well, with a 70.9 percent completion rate, two touchdowns vs. zero interceptions, and a 111.4 passer rating.

Garoppolo's got two elite targets with receiver Deebo Samuel and tight end George Kittle. Samuel has 15 receptions for a league-leading 282 yards and one touchdown. Presumably, Barry will put All-Pro cornerback Jaire Alexander on Samuel early and often to force Garoppolo to look elsewhere.

Kittle isn't a bad second option. In fact, he's probably the best tight end in football because he changes games as a receiver and a blocker. In 2018 and 2019, Kittle posted back-to-back seasons of 88 receptions for 1,377 yards and 85 receptions for 1,053 yards. He probably would have been in that range again in 2020 but missed half the season with a foot injury. He's caught eight passes for 95 yards to start this season. In the 2019 regular season game, Kittle caught six passes for 129 yards and a touchdown.

Just like the Niners will want to force Rodgers to throw it to someone other than Adams, the Packers will want to force Garoppolo to look at his other receivers. Trent Sherfield, Mohamed Sanu and Brandon Aiyuk have combined for merely five receptions for 49 yards.

San Francisco's running back corps is a M*A*S*H unit. Starter Raheem Mostert suffered a season-ending injury in week one. In week two, Elijah Mitchell, JaMychal Hasty and rookie Trey Sermon all dropped out with injuries, though Mitchell at least returned following a shoulder injury.

might be the top left tackle in the game. The Niners are No. 1 in the league in sack percentage allowed.

Special teams

Last year, the 49ers finished 27th and the Packers 29th in Rick Goselin's annual special-teams rankings for SI.com. Both units, however, appear to be on the upswing.

With punter Mitch Wishnowsky and ageless kicker Robbie Gould, the Niners have a pair of proven legs. Five of Wishnowsky's seven punts have pinned the opponent inside the 20. The 38-year-old Gould is sixth in NFL history in field-goal accuracy, though he's at less than 80 percent the last two-plus seasons.

Aiyuk handles punt returns (10-yard average on two returns) and cornerback Ambry Thomas returns kickoffs (17.5-yard average on four tries). Their coverage units have been excellent.

For Green Bay, new punter Corey Bojorquez is off to an excellent start. Only one of his seven punts have been returned. The rookie returners have each contributed one strong runback.

Kylin Hill had a 41-yard kickoff return against Detroit and Amari Rodgers had a 17-yard punt return against the Saints. Those beat last year's best returns.

Packers Tonyan chasing San Fran's Kittle

Tight ends work out together in offseason

By BILL HUBER
Correspondent

Before the 2017 NFL Draft, agent Jack Bechta had two of his tight end prospects work out together in Dallas.

One of them was George Kittle, who wound up being drafted by the San Francisco 49ers in the fifth round after playing at Iowa. The other was Robert Tonyan, who wound up signing with the Detroit Lions as an undrafted free agent after playing quarterback and receiver at Indiana State.

Tonyan failed to make the Lions' roster and was out of the league for three months before joining the Green Bay Packers' practice squad for the end of the 2017 season. Over the past few years, he's built himself into one of the better tight ends in the NFL. Perhaps the best tight end is Kittle.

That history made the first few weeks of the season especially intriguing for Tonyan. Facing the Lions on Monday night, Tonyan made one of the plays of the game with his 22-yard touchdown catch in the third quarter. Now, on Sunday night, it will be a matchup against Kittle, one of his best friends and, oddly enough, a former roommate.

In 2018, Kittle had one of the great seasons by a tight end in NFL history with his 88 receptions for 1,377 yards and five touchdowns. Tonyan, meanwhile, had merely four receptions for 77 yards.

That made the offseason between the 2018 and 2019 seasons particularly noteworthy. Kittle, needing a training partner, sent a group text message to a bunch of tight ends he knew. Tonyan, trying to build himself into a legitimate tight end, needed a mentor.

So, Tonyan responded. The two wound up working out and living together in Nashville. While Kittle had another monster season in 2019 to earn All-Pro honors, Tonyan was just starting to show his potential when he suffered a hip injury at Dallas that sidelined him for five weeks. They worked out together again during the offseason between the 2019 and 2020 seasons.

"I didn't grow up with a brother; I grew up with an older sister," Tonyan said. "She's super-competitive and a tough girl. She's one of my role models growing up. Now that I'm with George, everything's a competition just because of the type of people we are. Whether it's video games or weight room, we're just always competing. He appreciates it because he has someone that is chasing him and I have someone that I'm chasing."

This time, potential became production as Tonyan emerged as one of the NFL's breakout performers. He caught 52 passes for 586 yards and 11 touchdowns. The touchdown total not only was tied with Kansas City Chiefs star Travis Kelce for tops among tight ends, it was one more than Kittle scored even while catching a total of 173 passes in 2018 and 2019.

Of the 34 tight ends who were targeted at least 40 times in the passing game, Tonyan was No. 1 in catch percentage (89.7), drop percentage (0.0) and passer rating (148.3), according to Pro Football Focus. Throw in eight catches in the playoffs, Tonyan made 60 grabs without a drop. No tight end since Dallas' Jason Witten (77 receptions in 2015) caught more passes than Tonyan in a season without a drop, according to PFF.

"He's coming along really quickly," Kittle said last year of Tonyan. "He's an absolutely insane athlete, one of the most natural people I've ever seen catch a football. So, when you have that going for you, and he's an incredibly hard worker, he's going to find success."

After offseason practices ended in June, Tonyan and Kittle were back at it. This time, it was part of Tight End University. The inaugural three-day event was organized by Kittle and featured 49 tight ends from around the league convening in Nashville to share the tricks of the trade.

"We're sharing our strategy, our mind-set with guys," Kittle told ESPN.com. "How do you flip the switch? All it's doing is giving the opportunity for the tight end position to take a step forward. You have all of these guys that are so different but they play the same position. We wanted to bring all of the guys together who are the best in the world at their position and learn from each other. It allows these guys to learn about every aspect of their game. If you can do all of the things that a tight end can do, there's not much a defense can do to stop you."

Among the tight ends in attendance were Tonyan and teammates Mercedes Lewis and Dominique Dafney.

"It was just very beneficial to get around guys and seeing them in the classroom and their mentality in certain things and how they view defenses or view themselves," Tonyan said. "I haven't been able to be doing tight end for a while, so it's good to get around those guys. Obviously, I've been around George for the past handful of years, so it was good to get around like guys like Travis Kelce and Greg Olsen and Darren Waller and just see their work, and what they put in and just try to take as much from them as possible and just kind of be a sponge."

While hands and athleticism are among Tonyan's strengths – his 70-catch streak without a drop ended in the opener against New Orleans – he's a work in progress as a blocker and as a ball-carrier. In 2019, Kittle led all tight ends by forcing 20 missed tackles. In 2020, among the 33 tight ends with at least 25 catches, Tonyan was one of only two who didn't force a single missed tackle. So, it perhaps was noteworthy to see Tonyan post a career-high 40 yards after the catch against Detroit.

As a blocker, Tonyan has two excellent mentors with Kittle and Lewis. If he can become more of an asset in that phase of the game, he could warrant a huge contract as a free agent after this season.

"Every day I try to get better at that because, obviously, that's not what I was growing up doing. I was throwing the football and catching the football my whole life," Tonyan said. "I can do it, I'm strong, I can bend, I'm physical. It's kind of getting used to it, seeing the looks and playing fast in the box, and playing next to (Lewis) is obviously very encouraging and brings me confidence, and A-Rod putting us in the right positions to have those matchups and make those blocks is huge. But just day by day just keep getting better. That's what I want to get better at mostly. I can run and catch all day, but can I put my face on someone for four quarters? I challenge myself with that every day."
