BY WARREN BLUHM
News editor

Homicide by operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated charges and drug charges were filed Sept. 27 against a former Lakewood man accused in the death of a Lake Tomahawk woman in a head-on crash Sept. 8.

Bond was set at $250,000 cash for Zackery Dale Wimber, 30, Fond du Lac, after he was charged with homicide by intoxicated use of a motor vehicle, homicide by negligent use of a motor vehicle, two counts of operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated and causing injury (second or subsequent offense), possession with intent to deliver cocaine, possession with intent to deliver heroin, possession with intent to deliver methamphetamine, possession of a firearm by a person convicted of a felony, and driving or operating a vehicle without consent, as well as misdemeanor counts of driving while revoked and causing death and violating an ignition interlock device order.

WIMBER

The crash occurred at about 5:30 p.m. on state Highway 32-64 near Sparkys Road in the Town of Mountain.

According to an Oconto County Sheriff's Department traffic report, Wimber's southbound vehicle "was swerving all over the southbound lane," crossed the center line and crashed head-on into the other vehicle driven by Kaley Violet Neitzel, 15, killing her mother instantly and seriously injuring Kaley and Ronald Neitzel, 54.

Gillett students learn forestry

All-day program teaches kids about sustainability, wildlife protection

BY WARREN BLUHM
News editor

Crews from Franks Logging moved into the Gillett Public Schools forest on Sept. 23 to begin the process of thinning out the red pine and hardwood trees to help maintain the forest.

Students had a chance to explore the woods at the Michael Anderson Environmental Education Center behind Gillett Elementary School on Sept. 26, when volunteers and professionals set up 12 stations around the forest to teach the youths about life in the forest, explain how logging can be part of responsible forest management, and of course demonstrate the mechanics of cutting down trees and transforming them into boards and even paper.

At one station, they learned how the day's activities would help sick children through the Log a Load for Kids program operated by the Great Lakes Timber Professionals Association (GLTPA).

"We all like trees, right?" Henry Schienebeck, executive director of GLTPA, asked a group of first graders. "Well, that's part of our job is to make sure we never run out of trees. That's why what you're seeing here today is called sustainable forest management."

Schienebeck said trees provide clean air, clean water and wildlife habitat.

Network hospitals in Wisconsin and Michigan, said event coordinator Laurie Schienebeck said at her husband's side.

"The money helps the kids and their families when somebody's got issues," she said. "They needed help and medical care, so the money we're donated from the wood we cut here today will be going to these hospitals to help families."

Laurie Schienebeck shared the story of a girl, born prematurely weighing 1 pound and 4 ounces, who was treated at one of the children's hospitals and is now a healthy fourth grader.

"She benefited from some of the monies from some of these tree harvests," she said.

Last year, the association donated $48,600 from the proceeds of three Log a Load events and funds raised at its annual Logging Expo.

“Everything that comes in from these Log a Load events goes back out to these hospitals,” she said.

Logging opens up the forest so healthy trees can continue growing and thriving, said Lucas Broderick, who cut down a tree for the students using a huge $800,000 machine capable of cutting as many as 100 trees in an hour.

“We’re not taking the good trees,” Broderick said. “We’re taking the bad ones to make room for the good trees to grow.”

Before the loggers move in, a forester goes through and marks the trees to be harvested, leaving the healthiest trees to spread out and continue growing, he said.

At another station the students saw a demonstration of a portable sawmill that quickly turned a log into two-by-four boards for construction.

They also heard from forest management experts from the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources about how trees support wildlife. Garrett Lubbers of the DNR had a group of first graders pretend to be trees and stretch out their arms to demonstrate how a forest can become too crowded with trees.

“You’re going to be a wildlife tree for those eagles,” Lubbers said to the “trees” picked to thrive. “And you’re going to live for hundreds of years providing a home for the eagles.”

Students stayed at each station for about 10 minutes, and then an air horn sounded to signal it was time to move to the next location. Volunteer Rich Lietz said 517 Gillett students would be circulating through the forest through the course of the day.

Improvements enhance Fire Lookout Tower visitor experience

BY WARREN BLUHM
News editor

One of the most spectacular views of fall colors in northern Oconto County is from the top of the Mountain Fire Lookout Tower.

Built during the winter of 1934-35, the 100-foot-high structure was part of a 19-tower network that watched over the Nicolet National Forest in the days before aerial surveillance to detect forest fires.

“It’s one of the last towers of its kind still standing anywhere,” said Jayme Sellen, executive director of the Tourism and Economic Development Corporation for the Oconto Region (TEDCOR).

The other 18 towers in the Nicolet system were dismantled starting in the 1970s, but the Mountain tower was put into service as a radio relay station for the U.S. Forest Service and Oconto County Sheriff’s Department from 1977-92.

TEDCOR and the Forest Service have been making improvements this summer at the tower site, which is located at the end of a gravel road off Old 32 Road in the Town of Riverview.

“We added a split-rail fence, and the Forest Service has been helping to clear some brush and better define the parking lot,” Sellen said. “We’re hoping to build some nostalgia for generations to come.”

Ideas include adding a “selfie station” so people can share their visit on social media, she said.

The fall color season is quickly coming upon us. The Wisconsin Fall Color Report at www.travelwisconsin.com says Oconto County’s peak color forecast is for the third week in October, and fall colors were already estimated at 30% as of Sept. 27.

The Mountain Fire Lookout Tower rises 100 feet overhead. Taking the steps all the way up brings visitors 1,380 feet above sea level.

OBITUARIES

Myrtle Marie Jeske

Myrtle Marie Jeske, 85, of Milwaukee, went home to her heavenly Father on Sept. 17, 2024.

Myrtle grew up in Suring in a loving home where she learned that playing was much more fun than doing household chores. She told her mother, Marie Jeske, at an early age that one day she would be a teacher. When Myrt spoke of her family, her smile sparkled and heart danced.

After graduation from Suring High School, Myrtle went on to the University of Oshkosh and received a bachelor of science degree in physical education and coaching in 1961, and later achieved a master’s degree from Northern Illinois University in DeKalb, Illinois. At Oshkosh, she played every sport offered — field hockey, softball, bowling, basketball, volleyball, and realized how important sports were to her health.

She started her teaching and coaching career at Oak Creek High School and enjoyed that career for 36 years. High school sports were such a major part of her life. She loved the game, preparing the teams for competition and especially working with her teams so they would learn how to succeed on and off the playing field.

Her coaching accomplishments at Oak Creek included regional, sectional and state championships. In 1998, Myrt was honored at Marquette University as Women’s Sports Leader of the Year.

Outside of her high coaching, she played and coached 25 years of summer softball. Her favorite memories were winning a national title in Modesto, California, in 1981 and in 1990 being inducted into the USSSA softball Hall of Fame.

Myrt wrote in her journal, “My life could not have been laid out any better. I really enjoyed everything I did. I deeply loved my family, and not having children of my own, my nephews and nieces were my children. We would go swimming, play games, build forts, go for walks and just have fun. One of my happiest memories was going to the casino with my sister Joan and other friends just having fun and being together. I made memories so after I am gone, my family and friends would remember how much I loved them.

“Teaching, coaching, all my hobbies — fishing, shopping, bowling, feeding the wildlife, watching the Green Bay Packers and Milwaukee Brewers — I did with passion, kindness, and most important love. I was honored meeting all kinds of people, my dear friends and church community.

“Besides sports, I enjoyed playing the accordion, saxophone and being in the bell choir. My favorite music was playing songs from the hymnals in the Methodist Church in South Milwaukee.”

Myrtle loved her family and cats so much. So many wonderful memories with parents, sisters, nephews, nieces, great-nieces and great-nephews, and now great-great-nieces and great-great-nephews. Auntie was always the silly, strong, gentle one with such a giving heart.

Myrtle is survived by her nephews and nieces, Leslie (Tammy) Steffek, Lynn (Julie) Steffek, Mark (Cindy) Steffek, Mike (Rena) Steffek of Suring, Marsha (Gary) Krahn of Green Lake, Joshua (Shy) Steffek of Peshtigo, Kaitlynn (Austin) Gueths of Shawano, Liza Steffek of Antigo; great-great-nephew, Owen Gueths; and great-great-nieces, Emelia Gueths and Kori Steffek.

Myrtle is preceded in death by her parents, Emil and Marie Jeske; her sisters, Joan (Abel) Steffek, Jeanne and Janice Jeske. They are surely having one heavenly reunion!

A celebration of life will be held on Sunday, Oct. 6, 2024, at South Milwaukee United Methodist Church, 1327 Marshall Ave., South Milwaukee. Visitation will be from 11 a.m. to noon with services set at noon. The Rev. Maria Kim will be officiating.

In lieu of flowers, kindly consider a memorial donation in Myrtle’s name to the South Milwaukee United Methodist Church or Milwaukee Humane Society.

NEW Media's news editor is about to retire. We seek talented journalists who can seize someone's attention by being a talented wordsmith and photographer in a fast-paced news environment where digital comes first.

The news editor candidate would spend much of the time covering Oconto County, although occasionally a story could take them to Shawano County or Menominee County. The editor also works with freelancers to help out with additional stories when needed and seek out potential writers to add to the papers' richness.

While the office is a base of operations, we want someone who'll be out in the community gathering the news. All are welcome to apply, including recent or pending college graduates. Photography and copy editing skills are a must. Experience laying out pages is also helpful, but we can train in-house.

Send a resume, cover letter explaining why you want the job and four to six samples of your work to editor Kevin Passon at kpason@newmedia-wi.com.

were all transported to hospitals with what the report describes as suspected serious injuries; Ronald Neitzel had to be extricated using the Jaws of Life and was airlifted from the scene.

The criminal complaint indicates that the Neitzel family was traveling home after attending a wedding in Shawano. Kaley Neitzel, who holds a valid learner's permit and had completed five of six driving lessons, was driving with her father in the passenger seat and mother in the back seat.

A witness told deputies that Wimber had been tailgating him and swerving on the road behind him, then passed at a high rate of speed. Moments later, the witness saw a puff of smoke and came upon the crash scene.

Multiple witnesses saw Wimber leave his vehicle and drop something in the woods or ditch before coming back, despite significant injuries, the complaint said. One witness, an ICU nurse, said Wimber's eyes were dilated and he made a comment about being afraid of being caught with items that had been inside his vehicle.

Oconto County K-9 officer Emma was deployed into the woods to search for any contraband and alerted on a partially opened black box, the complaint said. Inside the box, deputies found seven clear plastic bags of a white powder that tested positive for cocaine, as well as two plastic bags with a substance that tested positive for heroin, the complaint said. The box also contained a semi-automatic 9mm pistol.

Wimber admitted to an investigator that he had consumed heroin and cocaine earlier in the day, according to the complaint.

The next day, a friend of Wimber's reported that his SUV had been stolen after he left it at Wimber's overnight because he had been intoxicated. The friend said he did not give Wimber permission to drive the vehicle Sept. 8.

Wimber has an extensive criminal history according to online court records and was currently on probation after being convicted in 2021 of possession of methamphetamine, possession of narcotic drugs, and possession of a firearm by a person convicted of a felony. A Fond du Lac County judge had imposed and stayed a 7½ year prison sentence, then placed Wimber on five years of probation with conditions including that he not possess or use controlled substances without a prescription.

Menominee history, forest subject of conference

Event to begin with tour of cultural center, logging museum

The Forest History Association of Wisconsin is partnering with the Menominee Tribe's Historic Preservation Officer and its forest manager to tell the story of change in the lives of tribal members and their forest that began more than 200 years ago and continues even today. The storytelling began in September with a pair of free webinars to be followed by a conference in Keshena, set for Oct. 11-12. Registration for the conference is at www.foresthistoryassociationwi.com.

Dr. Carol Cornelius, a professor at UW-Green Bay, presented the first webinar Sept. 11. It was based on her 2023 book "A History in Indigenous Voices: Menominee, Ho-Chunk, Oneida, Stockbridge, and Brothertown Interactions in the Removal Era." Tribal Historic Preservation Officer David Grignon offered a second webinar a week later that told the Menominee story of the arrival of the New York tribes to Wisconsin Territory.

Meeting in one of the final planning sessions for the Forest History Association of Wisconsin (FHAW) fall conference in Keshena next week are, from left: John Grosman, representing the FHAW board of directors; Ron Waukau, forest manager for Menominee Tribal Enterprise; and Jennifer Gauthier, executive director for the Menominee Sustainable Development Institute.

The conference itself will begin with a tour of the Menominee Cultural Center and Logging Museum, followed by a site visit to a stand of timber harvested within a design for natural regeneration of a new forest. The final stop for the day will be at the Sustainable Development Institute on the campus of the College of the Menominee Nation. There, students are engaged in the study of sustainable practices that served the tribe as they lived in harmony with the forest ecosystem in centuries past, as well as current science of renewable practice with applications for the future. Three student projects will be featured in poster sessions at the conference itself. The Oct. 12 slate of speakers will begin with a review of tribal life in the centuries before European contact, with a reminder that they were targeted for removal to what is now Crow Wing County, Minnesota, in the middle 1800s. Chief Oshkosh successfully made the argument that his people's lives were intimately tied to the forested Wisconsin landscape and did not fit the prairie environment to which the government wanted them to relocate. A talk on forest gardening will inform conferees of their practice in growing food and medicines to sustain a healthy lifestyle. The director of land management for the Menominee will cover the reality that the Menominee were terminated as a federally recognized tribe in 1954 and then restored as a tribe with a reservation in 1973, and the impacts on tribal life for this 19-year period. The final speaker will address how Chief Oshkosh's vision of sustainable practice continues to guide modern silvicultural practice in the present day. The conference will close with audience question and answer engagement of a panel composed of the webinar presenters and the conference speakers. While the conference design has been tailored to fit educators, others — including researchers, students of sustainable forest practice and ordinary "history buffs" — will take value from this offering. The Oct. 11 tour will be limited to 50 people, and the full conference will be limited to 125 people. Registration closes Sept. 27.

Menominee Chief Oshkosh's vision of sustainable practice continues to guide modern silvicultural practice in the present day.

Chief Oshkosh to be discussed at conference

Chief Oshkosh was inducted into the Wisconsin Forestry Hall of Fame last year at the Society of American Foresters annual meeting at Wisconsin Dells. Next month, the Menominee chief will again be a topic of discussion when the Forest History Association of Wisconsin holds its fall conference in Keshena. Among the panel discussions will be how Chief Oshkosh's vision of sustainable practice continues to guide modern silvicultural practice in the present day.

Chief Oshkosh (1795-1858) is celebrated by the Menominee community for his commitment to ensure the tribe stayed on its ancestral lands, negotiating treaties and meeting the federal government with persistence against a proposed move to Minnesota. He is credited most for a famous, prophetic quote shared regarding the land ethic of the Menominee people: "Start with the rising sun and work toward the setting sun, but take only the mature trees, the sick trees and the trees that have fallen. When you reach the end of the reservation, turn and cut from the setting sun to the rising sun and the trees will last forever." The forest management practices of Menominee Tribal Enterprise, Menominee Tribal Forestry and Menominee Environmental Services have been rooted not only through this quote but in recognition of Chief Oshkosh's dedication to the protection of the future generations of Menominee people. Chief Oshkosh and the Menominee endured great hardship within his lifetime. Chief Oshkosh fought to resolve conflict and provide a model of guidance that ultimately led to the 220,000 acres of diverse, rich forest. The Wisconsin Forestry Hall of Fame was founded in 1984 by 10 public and private forestry organizations to honor those who have made exceptional contributions to the field of forestry in Wisconsin. The Forestry Hall of Fame exhibit is located in the College of Natural Resources at UW-Stevens Point. It is open for viewing during school hours.

Dairy processor grants due Oct. 7

The Wisconsin Department of Agriculture, Trade and Consumer Protection (DATCP) has invited Wisconsin dairy processors to apply for Dairy Processor Grants through Oct. 7.

These grants aim to foster innovation, improve profitability and sustain the long-term viability of Wisconsin's dairy processing facilities.

"Wisconsin's dairy processors are a vital part of Wisconsin's dairy and agriculture supply chain, and I have been proud to support their growth and success in each of my budgets through the Dairy Processor Grant Program," said Gov. Tony Evers. "Dairy is core to who we are as a state. These grants play an important role in supporting this critical industry across our state."

A total of $500,000 is available for this year's dairy processor grants, as part of the biennial budget signed by Evers. Eligible applicants must operate a licensed dairy processing plant in Wisconsin that is engaged in pasteurizing, processing or manufacturing milk or dairy products.

Funding from these grants can be used to address a wide range of dairy business needs such as food safety, staff training, plant expansion, modernization and professional consulting services.

"Dairy processors are part of why Wisconsin is known as a leader in dairy," said DATCP Secretary Randy Romanski. "This grant investment supports Wisconsin's dairy processors as they stay at the forefront of emerging technologies, sustainability and growth."

Grants will be awarded for projects up to $50,000 and two years long. Processors must provide a match of 20% of the grant amount. Recipients will be chosen through a competitive selection process.

More information and the grant application are available at <https://datcp.wi.gov/Pages/AgDevelopment/DairyProcessorGrants.aspx>. Applications must be submitted by 11:59 p.m. Oct. 7 to datcpdadgrants@wisconsin.gov. Grant recipients will be announced in January 2025.

A PURR-FECT PLACE OF JOY IN GRESHAM

Lifelong love of animals prompts woman to create cat sanctuary

By KAY REMINGER
Correspondent

Joy's Place Animal Rescue, a non-profit located in rural Gresham, is a safe haven for cats of all sizes awaiting their rightful owner.

"When I realize the cats are starting to trust me, I know this is what I'm truly supposed to do," said Sarah Magee, founder for Joy's Place. "I've seen that recently when some were a little shy — then I know I can find them a good home."

Growing up on a farm in Navarino, Magee experienced all kinds of animal adventures from little on, which nurtured her love for animals. Her parents instilled in her a tenderness for all of God's creatures, and to honor her late mother, Magee decided to name her nonprofit after her mother, Joy.

Settling in to chat, Magee's face lit up as she recalled how she rehomes cats that need it.

"Whether they are strays or sometimes people just cannot keep them any longer, I will take them and find them a new home," Magee said.

Inquiring why she decided to launch her nonprofit, Magee said she was looking for something to do on her own, and even though she enjoyed doing trap/neuter/release, she liked finding new places for the cats to go.

"As most of the work was with feral cats, I knew I could probably do this with inside cats as well," Magee said.

Understanding the need was great, Magee realized there were a lot of homeless cats. Wanting to make a connection with animals and people, she launched Joy's Place.

The demand got much busier for rehoming than she expected it to be, with all the other rescues in the area.

"It's hard to say no when there was a need," Magee said. "I started in spring (March 2024), which is also the start of kitten season; some came litters at a time. With the community pitching in and covering many needs, I was able to help them get the vet care they required."

Magee has been involved in a volunteer basis with animal rescue for more than 30 years.

"I had a separate, full-time job that didn't have anything to do with animals, and I was looking for a change of pace," Magee said. "I definitely feel this is my calling. Honestly, those connections between the animals and people are just the most rewarding thing that I've ever experienced, and those days I know I'm doing what I'm supposed to be doing."

Magee has a few people who foster kittens for her, which lightens her workload, plus she has an onsite helper.

"I truly appreciate these like-minded helpers who have the same philosophy when it comes to animals," Magee said. "We all have the same goals — rehoming those animals and giving them a second chance."

Because her day-to-day work with her cats is all-consuming, any long-range plans are put on the back burner for now, but Magee can see herself in this capacity for at least another 10 years.

"We are tentatively considering bringing dogs in as well," Magee said. "We want to keep it small and manageable, so if we do bring dogs in, it would only be four or five at a time. Dogs have different zoning and operational needs."

Magee has not had to purchase anything as far as supplies go, and her generous donors pay vet bills.

"I am not making a living at this, not taking a wage at all," she said. "I just make enough to provide for the animals I have. Community support has been amazing. I've paid nothing out of pocket and receive private donations. I do have an Amazon and Chewy wish list, with links on my Facebook page. This is an easy way to donate, which is what a lot of people appreciate."

Magee still offers trap/neuter/return or trap/neuter/release and is happy to provide transport for people in the Shawano area to Appleton or other clinics. Charging roughly $50 per cat, this includes getting fixed, vaccinated and dewormed.

"The only way we can cut down on the population is to TNR," Magee said.

Magee has been married to her self-employed husband for close to 31 years, and they have three adult children and one granddaughter.

Tenderly caring for God's creatures, her goal every day is to do her very best for the cats she has in her care, and to get the word out to the public that she is here to help in any way she can.

Theresa Goel said they had gone to Door County in the past to pick apples but found Everflow in a Google search. They have cows, apple cider, pears and a lot of other things in addition to apple-picking, she said.

Bonduel orchard everflowing with apples

While picking fruit, families can take part in fall fun

By LYNN ZAFFRANN

"Something for everyone" isn't an exaggeration for visitors to Everflow Farm and Orchard at W3945 Landstad Road south of Bonduel, especially at this time of year.

Visitors can pick their own apples or buy pre-picked in the farm store. Raspberries are available to self-pick, and the owner doesn't mind if visitors toss a few raspberries into their mouths.

People are welcome to just stroll through the orchard of more than 2,000 apple trees. Hay rides and a corn maze will be open soon. Apples are available to hand-feed to the cattle behind the farm store.

Homemade caramel apples, made-fresh cider apple cake doughnuts and apple cider slushies are available. The farm's own honey, jams and jellies, popcorn, maple syrup, farm-raised beef and more can be found in the bright and spacious farm store.

Owner Luke Cackovic purchased the 120-acre property in 1991 and planted the first apple trees in 2009. He moved to Wisconsin from northeastern Ohio.

"I just like to grow things," Cackovic said. "Wisconsin is my home now."

Lisa Koepp, of Bonduel, joined Cackovic six years ago to help run the operation.

"She came to buy Transparent apples, and I helped her to get them from the orchard," Cackovic said.

Koepp planned to take the apples to the Founder's Day celebration that year in Bonduel. She returned three months later.

"She's never left," Cackovic said.

"I asked him if he needed help to pick apples, and it's become part of my everyday life," Koepp said.

Writers plan to meet at night

The Shawano Area Writers (SAW) decided that, to reach out to more people who have the desire to write, an additional monthly meeting should be made available to the public.

Normally, SAW has held its monthly meetings from 10 a.m. to noon every third Thursday at the Shawano County Library. but members feel that there are many people out there who are working during those hours and cannot attend daytime meetings.

Starting Oct. 17, SAW will meet from 5:30-7 p.m. at Shawano's Café, W7389 River Bend Road, Shawano.

"We are planning to hold two meetings per month from now on," said John Mutter Jr., SAW treasurer. "We hope to attract people from all age groups and different degrees of writing talent. We will help people become knowledgeable in how to get going on that writing project that they have put off for far too long. Some people just need a little advice on how to start whatever they want to write. We can't perform miracles for a person, but we are here to give advice, advice from people who have been writing for years and some for decades."

Barb King reads a chapter from "Tug Lake Tales," a fictional tale of a one-room schoolhouse in Wisconsin she published a few years ago at an event at the Shawano County Library. King is the vice president for the Shawano Area Writers and a very active participant.

SAW has been working and writing in the Shawano area since 1966 and is one of the oldest writing groups in Wisconsin. The organization has helped with the Shawano Story-Shawano Centennial 1874-1974 book and the Shawano County Sesquicentennial 1853-2003 book.

During meetings, members read excerpts from what they've been working on, ranging from poetry to short stories to personal essays to novels. Some members have published books, some are retired teachers, and others write just for the fun of it.

Through the years, SAW published 14 anthologies, with work from 112 writers. The group is beginning to plan its 15th anthology and would welcome local writers' submissions.

SAW has also been promoting the written word for the next generation through the George Putz Memorial Student Writing Contest that SAW is planning for the 19th year. This contest is open to all children from first grade through high school who live or go to school in Shawano and Menominee counties.

For information, call Mutter at 715-524-4520 or go to www.shawanoareawriters.org.

on the farm. With her husband, Rob, and sons William, Luke and Jack, the Koepps are Cackovic's only help.

"We are a pick-your-own apple orchard," Koepp said. "We also have pre-picked apples. When in season, we also have pears, peaches and plums."

Homemade apple cider cake doughnuts are available Fridays, Saturday and Sundays through October. They also sell homemade apple pies.

"We recently added cider slushies on the weekends," Koepp said.

The slushies are topped with whipped cream, caramel sauce and an apple cider doughnut.

"It's a nice activity for families to come out and spend time in the orchard," Koepp said.

Cackovic added that people are welcome to just come out and walk through the orchard, even if they don't plan to pick apples.

The pick-your-own orchard includes more than 40 varieties of apples. Apples are available for tasting before heading out to the orchard.

"People can taste apples that maybe they've never heard about," Koepp said. "We want you to love our apples before heading out the door."

There is a tasting area inside the farm store.

Harvest hayrides will be offered this fall, along with a corn maze. They will have pick-your-own pumpkin, ornamental corn, mini pumpkins, gourds, corn stalks and straw bales. The farm's Facebook page will have information about when the hayrides and corn maze will start.

When Cackovic and Koepp decided to have a corn maze, they simply got on the lawnmower and cut down new growth corn, without really following the layout they originally planned to copy from the backs of cereal boxes.

"It worked," said Cackovic. "I even got lost in there."

Depending on the season, sweet corn, pumpkins, cucumbers, potatoes, tomatoes, bell and jalapeno peppers and many other home-grown vegetables and fruits are available. There are perennials for sale, including fall mums.

Apples are kept in storage and are generally available for purchase until February. Beef cuts are available into winter, also.

The farm has about 40 acres of field corn and about two acres of sweet corn. Soy beans are also one of Cackovic's crops.

He also raises beef cattle. Cackovic doesn't use growth hormones; everything is all natural and raised on the farm.

Cedar Wedge Farm in Bonduel does the butchering of the cattle for Everflow Farm.

"We sell our beef in the store," Koepp said.

She said that if a customer is looking for a particular cut of beef and it isn't in the freezer, they should ask to see if it's available.

There is a map of the orchard for customers to be able to locate the varieties they want to pick. The Transparent and Zestar varieties ripen in August. Other varieties that may be available at this time are Honeycrisp, Cortland and Macintosh.

"We have a couple new later varieties, Rosalee and Fireside," Cackovic said.

Cackovic and Koepp encourage customers to check out the Facebook page to see what is currently available.

Cackovic sells apples to Shawano and Bonduel schools, starting when school opens and at least through January, until they run out of apples.

Bags of reject apples for wildlife are also available.

The farm is open sunup to sundown. Payment must be in cash, on the honor system.

"We're family-oriented, low-key, noncommercial," Koepp said.

Successful 24 Hour Theater program returns

Abrams Spotlight Productions (ASPI) will present a series of spooky skits at its second annual 24 Hour Theater event.

Individuals ages 14 and older are invited to participate in this Halloween-themed creative event on Oct. 25-26 at the Nancy Byng Community Theater, 5852 Maple St., Abrams.

Within 24 hours, participants will write and produce a 60- to 90-minute performance from scratch. The production will consist of a series of short plays. There's no cost to participate, and no experience is necessary. In fact, 24 Hour Theater offers the perfect opportunity for people to try something new.

In its inaugural year in 2023, the event attracted 10 participants ranging in age from 15 to 65. One participant, Gail Irwin, described the event as an exhilarating, yet exhausting 24 hours.

"In my busy schedule, 24 Hour Theater was perfect," she said. "The compact, mixed-age experiment in creativity and improvisation felt like a grown-up play date with a bunch of friendly strangers. The fact that it was free and open to all ages made it accessible to anyone with the guts to try it, regardless of experience."

Mike Eserkaln, ASPI director and owner of Comedy City De Pere, coordinates and oversees 24 Hour Theater.

The event begins at 7 p.m. Oct. 25, when participants gather at the theater in Abrams. The creative process begins with ice-breaking activities before organizers randomly assign writers to work with two to five actors and a director. The writers draft short plays until 7 a.m. Oct. 26.

From 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Oct. 26, participants memorize lines, find props, choose costumes, rehearse and manage technical aspects like lighting and sound cues. At 7 p.m., participants present the skits they created. Admission to the event is $5, and tickets can be purchased at the box office on the day of the event.

Registration is recommended, with sign-up at www.abramstheater.com.

DID YOU KNOW?

The National Athletic Training Association suggests the following tips to vary your child's sports activities:

- One at a time. Children and teens should play only one sport per season.
- Eight-month rule. A teen or child should not participate in the same sport for more than eight months of the year.
- Hours per week. Young athletes should not participate in an organized sport or activity more hours per week than their age. For example, a 10-year-old should not practice or play their sport for more than 10 hours per week.
- Rest days. Kids and teens should have two days per week when they are not practicing or playing their sport.
- End-of-season break. When a season ends, kids should step away from that sport to provide their body time to physically and mentally recover. Jumping from a sport's club season right into a school season raises the chance for injury or burnout.

Specialization in sports not healthy for young athletes

The popularity of professional athletes and sports events can lead kids and their parents to dream of sports stardom and scholarships.

This has also led to a new trend that is concerning — sports specialization.

The American Academy of Pediatrics and National Athletic Training Association warn against sports specialization at a young age. They point to studies showing it can lead to an increase in overuse injuries, overtraining, and burnout.

"We understand that parents want the best for their kids," said Dr. Nickolas Linkous, sports medicine and orthopedic surgeon with ThedaCare Orthopedic Care. "Some may believe that focusing on a single sport can lead to greatness. Unfortunately, it can also lead to physical and mental health issues. Participating in multiple sports is better for a child or teen's physical and psychological health."

When children participate in the same sport for most of the year, they are at higher risk of developing an overuse and other types of injuries, according to a study from the American Journal of Sports Medicine. Common overuse injuries include tendon damage, stress fractures, and knee and joint pain.

"When kids play only one sport, it often doesn't provide time for the child's body to rest or recover. A small injury can get worse quickly," Linkous said. "Resting is important, especially as children's and teens' bodies are still growing. Repetitive motion is tough on their bones and muscles."

Beyond physical issues, training for a single sport throughout the year can potentially lead to burnout or psychological stress. The constant pressure to compete can be difficult for kids and teens. This comes on top of regular stressors, such as fitting in with peers and performing well in school.

Kids spending a lot of time at their sport also may miss out on valuable social interactions with their peers who are not a part of that activity. In addition, they may become overly anxious about their playing time and performance.

"It's important for children to have time to play and participate in non-sports activities," Linkous said. "It's all about balance. Parents should try to avoid overscheduling and spending too much time on any single sport."

Linkous said he recognizes there's a lot of pressure for children and teens to specialize. However, it's best to hold off as long as possible.

The American Academy of Pediatrics recommends delaying specialization for most sports until after puberty (around 15 or 16 years of age for most kids). This will minimize the risks and lead to a higher likelihood of athletic success.

Instead, keep encouraging kids to participate in a variety of activities. These can include walking, biking, hiking, swimming and yoga.

"There's no question that participating in sports has a positive impact on children and teens," Linkous said. "Taking smart steps to keep kids well-rounded can help them avoid physical and mental health issues."

FARM LIFE FROM A FARM WIFE

Animal kingdom has own way of communicating

Being around animals my whole life, and especially dairy animals, I've come to discover they definitely communicate over and above our human awareness.

For example, a mama cow has a definitive moo when she calls for her calf, a different moo when she perceives harm toward her little one, another moo is a feed-me-now-or-I'll-die-right-here. Unfamiliar territory fuels yet a different kind of stressful moo. Also, when their udder is full — you know it; an urgent moo. They need to get milked.

Pigs have a language all their own, as well and being housed side-by-side to our heifers, interact with them. The other day, it was my job to feed our pigs. We got six 40-pounders back in April, and they've grown fat and happy; their snouts maintain perpetual grins. I can't help but wonder what they're thinking. Snout-to-nose with the heifers, they intermingle through the fence.

They delight in playing with their water tub, tipping it over even though it's heavy, chained and full of water. Filling it up one day, I stuck my thumb over half of the spout, creating a waterfall across their backs. Mid-September had been unseasonably warm, and they love a cool shower relieving late afternoon heat. Rolling in the mud made from my sprinkling system, they communicate their pleasure in low-grunt cadences.

The talk coming from these six pigs vary depending on the time or temperature of the day. I've heard them snort, grunt and squeal; gurgle and slobber. They fight — oh, they fight — when I sprinkle their feed into their troughs, even biting each other's floppy ears. The way they compete for food you'd think they were starving. They do not look starved.

Going up to the barn mow, my two rescue cats come running to greet me. When I first got them, they were timid and very skeptical of their new digs. Over time, I eventually gained their trust. It's such a pleasure to have them purr and intertwine themselves around my ankles, looking up at me with blinking eyes that definitely say, "I'm glad to see you." How satisfying it is to have them respond to me in this way. Their good morning meows are music to my ears. They also have different languages depending on the situation.

One day, there was an uninvited visitor — a neighboring cat — who thought she could just come on in and nibble on their food. Immediately, the body language of one of my cats changed. The intruder was met with a deep, threatening growl that seemed to vibrate through my cat's whole body. I quieted myself, watching them interact. Soon, the visitor got the hint and slinked away through a hole in the barn door.

One of the pigs on the Reminger farm interacts with the heifers on the other side of the fence. KAY REMINGER

Our dog, Molly, gone now close to three years, was a sweet-tempered lab. Looking at her, I could tell if she needed to go out, wanted a snack, was afraid or just content to faithfully follow me around.

If anyone came to the door, she put up an astounding fuss, growling deep in her throat and letting out a string of startling German shepherd-style barks that would send any would-be ne'er-do-well off running. They wouldn't have known she'd have killed them with kindness. I was glad to have her by my side.

One night, I was awakened by my husband's snoring so decided to bunk out on the back room couch, which happened to be right next to Molly's bed. Blissful silence, I was just about to drift off when, all of a sudden, she started snoring. I couldn't win.

Out in my raspberry patch, I'm bombarded by buzzing bees. The insect world has their own cornucopia of music. I never swat a bee. I literally tell them, "You leave me alone and I'll leave you alone; there's enough fruit out here for everybody." I don't mind — the patch is healthier when the bees are active.

Recently, my husband and I got a chance to get away up north for a few days with my siblings and spouses. Renting a lakeside Airbnb, we took a pontoon boat out fishing. Off in the distance, we'd hear an occasional loon. The fish started biting, and we were enjoying time away when all of a sudden, a loon came up and started dive-bombing at the worms on our hooks. Astonished, we quickly snatched up our poles, not wanting the poor loon to get snarled on one of our hooks.

We pulled up anchor and took off for the other side of the lake. Casting our lines out, we found the loon had followed our boat. The stinker dove under the pontoon boat, only to come up unexpectedly on the other side. It quickly dawned on us that this loony loon had learned the how-to after being rewarded for its behavior. In other words, this wasn't his first rodeo. He was well-versed in snagging fresh food dangling just below the surface.

All animals have their own language, and we are their caretakers. I feel privileged to share the good earth with them.

("Know well the condition of your flocks, and pay attention to your herds." Proverbs 27:23)

Kay Reminger was born and raised on a dairy farm, and she married her high school sweetheart, who happened to farm for a living in Leopold. Writing for quite a few years, she remains focused on the blessings of living the ups and downs of rural life from a farm wife's perspective.

Gardens can produce food for migrating birds

Growing food sources for wild birds is a great way to help these winged wonders during their peak fall migration season, already underway for many species.

Robins and bluebirds are flocking up, roaming the countryside and backyard gardens looking for fruiting trees and shrubs.

Many varieties of warblers, vireos and thrushes are migrating through, even as we speak. Fall migration is underway.

Berry-producing shrubs are one of the best sources of fresh fruit for songbirds during their migration. Ripening during the late summer and fall seasons, these berries are perfectly timed with the peak movement of songbirds throughout the area.

A number of different berry-producing shrubs are excellent choices for benefiting birds throughout the fall season, even into winter.

Many viburnum species produce wonderful fruits used by birds heavily during migration. Highbush cranberry, technically a viburnum, Arrowwood viburnum, Nannyberry and others are wonderful berry-producing shrubs. As a bonus, all produce wonderful clusters of blooms during spring to attract hummingbirds, orioles and more.

Another excellent choice is staghorn sumac. Lush clusters of tasty red berries are produced during late summer and fall. What doesn't get eaten remains on the plant into next spring when returning robins and orioles — along with bluebirds, catbirds and others — feast upon the nutritious berries.

Rob Zimmer

Wild blackberries are not only delicious for humans, migrating birds enjoy the nutritional fruits, as well.

ROB ZIMMER

Several species of dogwoods also produce abundant berries during the late summer and fall season. Red twig dogwood, gray dogwood, pagoda dogwood, alternate leaved dogwood, yellow twig dogwood and others are all excellent choices for a bird garden.

Fruiting trees such as crab apples and mountain ash are also an excellent source of nutritious fruits for birds on the move.

Currants and gooseberries are still ripening on shrubs in backyard gardens, as well as in forests throughout the area. Blackberries are also full of fruit this time of year.

Common elderberry is another lush, berry-producing shrub. In many areas locally, elderberry is ripening or at its peak now, just in time for hungry warblers, thrushes, catbirds, cedar waxwings and more.

Also ripening now is wild grape, its vines laden with delicious, nutritious fruits — maturing just in time to feed wave after wave of migrating songbirds as they move south.

Add a few of these to your landscape to benefit the songbirds as they begin their migration this fall.

Thundercatz come up short in homecoming game

Bonduel, Lena win to stay perfect in '24

By NEW MEDIA STAFF

Sept. 27
Port Edwards 50,
Marion/Tigerton 22

Port Edwards started scoring in the first quarter and didn't let up until the final buzzer as they put a damper on Marion/Tigerton's homecoming with a 50-22 win.

Port Edwards was up 34-0 before Braylon Mielke scored on a 2-yard run to make the score 34-8 at halftime.

Then, down 42-8 in the third quarter, Mielke scored again, this time on a 48-yard run. That was followed by a 23-yard touchdown pass from Joey Zimdars to Logan Zietlow to make it 42-22.

Port Edwards added a final TD in the fourth quarter for the 28-point win.

Zimdars completed 8-of-15 pass attempts for 85 yards with one TD and one interception.

Mielke led the run game with 139 yards on 26 carries. Zimdars carried the ball 19 times for 79 yards.

Thomas Grimm caught four passes for 42 yards, and Zietlow caught four passes for 33 yards.

The Thundercatz will travel to Tri-County for a 7 p.m. Oct. 4 game.

Pulaski 42, Ashwaubenon 14

The Red Raiders scored in every quarter en route to a 42-14 win at home.

After a 7-yard run by Bohdan Schmidt that put Pulaski up 7-0, the Jaguars tied the score on an 80-yard TD pass.

Pulaski scored three touchdowns in the second quarter. First, Brock Weideman scored on a 2-yard run. That was followed by a 4-yard run by Sawyer Goodness. An Ashwaubenon TD was answered with a 54-pass scoring pass from Schmidt to Calan Bock to put Pulaski up 28-14 at the half.

Spencer Hakes scored on a 1-yard run in the third quarter, and Schmidt completed a 6-yard scoring pass to Jeffrey Smith in the fourth quarter to end the scoring.

The Hawks prevailed with two second-place finishes to help propel the Hawks into that fourth-place slot. Jaelyn Hietpas and Ava Hoffman, a newly formed doubles team, stepped into the No. 2 role at the sixth seed. They were the bracket busting Cinderella story of the tournament, making it to the championship match before falling to perennial conference champs Xavier. The next step is the WIAA sectionals Oct. 8. At No. 1 singles, Ireland Setterman lost 6-1, 6-1 and then won 6-0, 6-1. Carroll's victories were 6-0, 6-0 over Marinette and 6-3, 6-0 over West De Pere. earned a degree in education from UW-Stevens Point, and later a master's degree from Northern Michigan.

Martin began his Shawano School District career in 1956, after teaching for six years in Viroqua. He was a math teacher and coach during his tenure in Shawano.

He coached many underclassmen and prepared them to play at their highest level as they became varsity players. Martin not only taught the skills of the sports, but he also taught the athletes and students what it meant to be a person of character.

He inspired them to succeed and instilled in them the commitment to be a team player by being respectful of each other, as well as their competitors. He had fun with the students, while also commanding respect and teaching them to become the best people and athletes possible.

Martin dedicated 33 years to the Shawano School District and was a favorite of many students and athletes. He coached junior high basketball, freshman boys basketball, football, and track and field.

In track, he was the head coach for several years and specialized in coaching the pole vault. He coached dozens of athletes who qualified for state.

The success of some coaches and athletes cannot be measured by wins and losses. Martin was a role model for his students and athletes. He knew or coached many of the individuals who are currently a part of the Hall of Fame.

Martin retired from teaching and coaching in 1989. He and his wife, Mary, were married for 73 years and raised three children before his death in 2023.

PRAYER TO ST. JUDE

Most holy apostle, St. Jude, faithful servant and friend of Jesus, the Church honors and invokes you universally, as the patron of hopeless cases, of things almost despaired of. Pray for me, I am so helpless and alone. Make use I implore you, of that particular privilege given to you, to bring visible and speedy help where help is almost despaired of. Come to my assistance in this great need that I may receive the consolation and help of heaven in all my necessities, tribulations, and sufferings, particularly (here make your request) and that I may praise God with you and all the elect forever. I promise, O blessed St. Jude, to be ever mindful of this great favor, to always honor you as my special and powerful patron, and to gratefully encourage devotion to you Amen

NEW Media’s news editor is about to retire. We seek talented journalists who can seize someone’s attention by being a talented wordsmith and photographer in a fast-paced news environment where digital comes first.

The news editor candidate would spend much of the time covering Oconto County, although occasionally a story could take them to Shawano County or Menominee County. The editor also works with freelancers to help out with additional stories when needed and seek out potential writers to add to the papers’ richness.

While the office is a base of operations, we want someone who’ll be out in the community gathering the news. All are welcome to apply, including recent or pending college graduates. Photography and copy editing skills are a must. Experience laying out pages is also helpful, but we can train in-house.

Send a resume, cover letter explaining why you want the job and four to six samples of your work to editor Kevin Passon at kpasson@newmedia-wi.com.

UW-Extension holding cover crop field day Oct. 4 in Gillett

By NEW MEDIA STAFF

Farms are increasingly utilizing cover crops as a method of managing soil erosion and improving overall soil health. Cover crops are known to have benefits, but they can also have drawbacks in some situations.

University of Wisconsin-Madison Division of Extension is conducting a cover crop realities field day next month to help farmers think through the opportunities that cover crops offer, as well as how to optimally manage them for maximum benefit.

The field day is being hosted Oct. 4 by Fifield Farms, 7488 Red Bank Road, Gillett, starting at 10 a.m. Fifield is one of five farms in the region that are taking part in a clover cover crop research project aimed at deriving accurate nitrogen management and economic return benefits from utilizing cover crops after winter wheat or similar crops.

Field day attendees will be able to view the research plots and take part in the discussions that will take place. Topics of discussion will include cover crops in action, cost-share opportunities, possible issues and how cover crops fit into conservation and nutrient management plans. Leading the discussions will be a farmer panel, along with conservationist Jeff Maroszek and UW-Madison educators Chris Bandura, Dan Marzu and Scott Reuss.

The event is free to attend and will include a light lunch. Pre-registration is not required, but it is appreciated to assist with meal planning.

To register or for more information, contact Reuss at 715-732-7510, 715-701-0966 or scott.reuss@wisc.edu.

BITTERSWEET DEFEAT

Love returns, Jones feeling at home, leaving Vikings 4-0, Packers 2-2

BY LUKE REIMER
Green & Gold Express

In his first game back since spraining his MCL in Week 1, Packers quarterback Jordan Love registered his best statistical game as a pro. After Malik Willis led Green Bay to two wins in Love's absence, many eyes were on Love in the big NFC North matchup against the Vikings, as this game was as close to a must win game as a game can be within the first four weeks of the season. To start the game, it certainly looked like Love had some rust on him. With Green Bay down 28-7 and Love throwing two interceptions at halftime, it would have made some sort of sense to bench Love for the remainder of the game and let Willis continue to play and develop. Green Bay didn't go that route, and as it turned out, made the right decision, as Green Bay was just a few points away from making an incredible comeback. Either way, Love looked healthy, as he was able to move well in and out of the pocket, while for the most part avoided taking big hits. "It feels fine coming out (of the game)," said Love, about his knee. "As far as it affected me - no, I think that I was able to play through it. I took a hit to it, which had some pain on that, but I was able to play a full game." While it certainly wasn't the plan to throw the ball 54 times in the injury. "I don't think that we envisioned throwing the ball 54 times. That is never the plan, going into any game." It was obvious that Love was confident that Love could play at a high level without risking a further injury. And that somewhat paid off, as Love threw three touchdowns in the fourth quarter against Minnesota to almost complete the improbable comeback. All in all, LaFleur commended Love for competitiveness and toughness. "We have a lot of trust, belief and faith in him and I love who he battles," said LaFleur, on Love. "That is one of the things that you absolutely love about him is just his composure. He is never too high, he is never too low and he keeps competing and keeps battling. I was super proud of his effort." The reality is that with Minnesota playing incredible football in the first quarter of the season, it looks like the No. 1 threat to win the NFC North. With expectations surrounding Green Bay, it is also expected to vie for the division, so anytime Green Bay gets a matchup against a major competitor, the best players have to play if they can, including Love. Love's knee got put to the test early in the game, as he was tackled on a run, to which he said his knee did hurt, but the pain was not nearly enough for him to exit the game.

LOVE WINLESS AS STARTER, HEADING WEST

Green Bay needs to tighten every aspect of its game

By JACOB WESTENDORF

Packers Offense vs. Rams Defense

Jordan Love is back. The quarterback returned from his knee injury after a two-game absence. His return was up and down, featuring the highs of throwing four touchdown passes, tying a career high. He also tied a career high with three interceptions, two of which were egregious as the Packers dug a 28-0 hole in the first half of their 31-29 loss to the Minnesota Vikings. This week, Love should be able to go again barring any setbacks in practice. He came out of the game just fine, and thinks he should continue to progress on that front.

The passing game took a significant blow in Sunday's loss to the Vikings. Christian Watson was injured on one of Love's interceptions and did not return to the game. They got good news out of the game, with Watson saying he thought it was just a sprain according to Matt LaFleur.

Either way, it's tough to imagine Watson being able to play this weekend against the Rams.

That puts some of the onus on Dontayvion Wicks. Wicks, like Love, had some highs and lows during the team's loss to the Vikings.

He had three tough drops but also scored two touchdowns. One thing about Love, is he'll continue to target his receivers even if they are struggling that day.

The Packers' final numbers from Sunday look good.

They piled up 465 yards against the Vikings but struggled in the red zone early, and turning the ball over got them in trouble as well.

Overall, other than Watson, the team is healthy now, and should be able to find some holes against this Rams' defense.

One thing is certain, they'll want to get Josh Jacobs more than the nine carries that he got on Sunday.

That was largely in part due to the game script

Green Bay quarterback Jordan Love scrambles to get away from Minnesota's defense Sept. 29. In his big comeback game from a knee injury, Love threw for 389 yards and three touchdowns but his inconsistent play doomed the Packers in their loss to the Vikings. Green Bay has a better chance of defeating the Los Angeles Rams on Oct. 6.

GREG MELLIS | GREEN & GOLD EXPRESS

that had Green Bay down by two scores after they'd touched the ball once.

Despite Jacobs' reputation as a workhorse, he has been splitting snaps and carries with Emanuel Wilson the last two weeks.

Wilson has done some nice things, but Green Bay needs their top back to be one of their focal points.

Los Angeles' defense has one gaping hole in the middle of it at the moment. Anytime the Rams have played the Packers in LaFleur's tenure, they've had Aaron Donald.

Donald is one of the greatest defensive players to ever play in the NFL.

He's gone now after retiring in the offseason.

The Rams' defense has been good to start the year, with one major exception.

They came into Week 4 with the worst passing defense in football.

Perhaps they can be the medicine that cures the ills of Green Bay's inconsistent offense to start the season.

Packers Defense vs. Rams Offense

Green Bay's defense is certainly good at forcing turnovers early in the season.

They got two more against Minnesota. Sam Darnold threw an interception to Xavier McKinney, his fourth in four games.

McKinney is the first Packer to accomplish that in team history. The other turnover came on a strip sack from Keisean Nixon, who hunted down Darnold like a heat-seeking missile.

The fumble was recovered by Edgerrin Cooper and helped get the Packers back into the game.

One of the issues the Packers are having is that teams are able to move the ball with relative ease if they're not forcing turnovers.

Darnold looked comfortable in the pocket. Aaron Jones was good enough in his return to Lambeau Field on Sunday. The pass rush is where there are some alarms going off at the moment. After an eight-sack performance against the Tennessee Titans, they were nearly blanked by the Vikings. They did finish with two sacks in the game, but Darnold was comfortable more often than he was not. Jeff Hafley has emphasized taking the ball away and making big plays on defense, and they have certainly done that early in the season. They could have some opportunities against Matthew Stafford, who has been prone to the turnover through the course of his career. That's going to require the Packers to be much better at rushing the passer than they were on Sunday against the Vikings. The Rams' offensive line is decimated by injuries at the moment, as is their receiving corps.

The biggest challenge for Green Bay with their front's ability to get after Stafford will likely come in the run game.

Kyren Williams is someone that Sean McVay has tried to lean on when the matchups are advantageous toward him.

The Packers failed their first two tests in run defense, after Saquon Barkley tore them apart for three touchdowns.

Jonathan Taylor ran for more than 100 yards on just 12 carries.

Aaron Jones had 93 yards on 22 carries. They did keep him out of the end zone, but four yards per carry allows the opposing offense to stay on schedule.

When you give up 31 points, everything needs to be better on defense, and the Packers have to get things on track this week against a Rams team that will be missing a ton of players.

Two of those players are their top two receivers.

Cooper Kupp and Puka Nacua will not play Sunday either. Green Bay could be missing Jaire Alexander again, so perhaps that is a tradeoff they would take?

Whether Alexander plays or not, Nixon and Eric Stokes both need to be much better than they were on Sunday.

Other teams have them circled. They need to start making more plays in the passing game.

Special Teams

The Packers have not benefited from the new kickoff rules as of yet. Keisean Nixon has one chance at a return this season, and it was one that was ill-advised.

There's little reason to think that will change anytime soon. They didn't do anything on Sunday in the return game, and Nixon's job is mostly to take touchbacks at this point.

Green Bay's kicking situation remains a work in progress. Brayden Narveson missed two more kicks on Sunday. This evens out the one from Week 3, where he missed a 48-yarder, but it was wiped out by a seldom-called defensive holding penalty on a defensive tackle.

He is currently tied for the league's lead in missed kicks. He'd have the outright lead if not for the penalty wiping one of them away.

Narveson will continue to have some leash as the season progresses. Brian Gutekunst said he needed to be more patient with specialists. LaFleur insisted again after the game that his confidence was not shaken in him.

Punter Daniel Whelan has been excellent in the early part of the year as well.

The Rams have been run by Chase Blackburn, who is in his second season with the team.

Until Green Bay's kicking situation figures itself out, they're likely going to be at a disadvantage in these special teams matchups. They've given points away each of the first four weeks. That is something that cannot continue.

Trio of 4th quarter TDs not enough in 31-29 loss to Vikings

Four turnovers doom Packers in divisional matchup

BY LUKE REIMER
Green & Gold Express

It was a tumultuous return to action for Jordan Love, as his four touchdown passes were overshadowed by three interceptions in Green Bay's 31-29 loss to the Minnesota Vikings on Sept. 29.

Finding itself down 28-0, Green Bay outscored Minnesota 29-3 from the 15-second mark in the second quarter but was unable to recover a desperation onside kick attempt with 56 seconds left in the game and dropped the NFC North matchup.

"I am super proud of our guys' effort," said Packers head coach Matt LaFleur. "That is one thing – these guys battled. It is interesting when you are down 28-0, like how you are going to respond, and I think you saw the character of our locker room today, in terms of just how our guys went out and competed."

In total, Love finished the game completing 32-of-54 passes for 389 yards, four touchdowns and three interceptions. Love's 389 passing yards and four touchdowns mark career highs, while the three interceptions tie a career high.

Wide receiver Jayden Reed was the main beneficiary of Love's big day through the air, as the Michigan State alum recorded 139 yards on seven receptions and one touchdown. Dontayvion Wicks added 78 receiving yards and touchdowns, while tight end Tucker Kraft finished off the quartet of touchdowns.

Flat in the first half, Green Bay's defense looked better toward the end of the game, but the deficit was too much for the Packers as they lost the divisional game to the Vikings.

"As the game went, it seemed to me that he looked more and more comfortable. We made more explosive plays, which is tough to do when a team is sitting back in two shell (coverage)," said LaFleur, on what he saw from Love in this game. "There are a lot of good lessons that come out of every game."

As for Minnesota, quarterback Sam Darnold completed 20-of-28 passes for 275 passing yards and three touchdowns. With Packers defensive back Jaire Alexander out of the game, Minnesota star receiver Justin Jefferson led the air attack with 85 yards and a touchdown on six receptions. Jordan Addison and Josh Oliver each also scored a touchdown.

In his return to Green Bay, Vikings running back Aaron Jones finished the game with 93 rushing yards on 22 carries and 46 receiving yards on four receptions.

Minnesota jumped out to a blazing start, as it scored on its first three drives of the game, putting Green Bay into a big 21-0 hole. That 21-0 hole was exasperated by Green Bay missing two field goals and throwing an interception on its first three drives.

"I think that it comes down to that we just didn't make enough plays," said Love, on the Packers' slow start. "I had a turnover early, and we just didn't make plays. Just did not play well enough, personally. Accuracy was a little bit off, a little bit shaky, and it was definitely making it hard on some of the guys, which led to us getting off of the field early and not being able to put up points. We got in a hole early with all of that."

Following the 21-point deficit, things only got worse for Green Bay, when Love threw his second interception of the game. Minnesota immediately capitalized on the interception, as Darnold connected with Jefferson for a 14-yard touchdown.

After Green Bay turned the ball over on downs in its next possession, the teams traded punts. That is when Green Bay caught a spark of life.

Punting the ball away, Vikings returner Jalen Nailor lost the punt in the sun and muffed the punt. Green Bay recovered the ball on Buffalo's 4-yard line. Love connected with Romeo Doubs close to the end zone, but after a bobble was marked short. In an attempt to stop the clock to take another look at the play, the officials did not see LaFleur trying to call a timeout, so the Packers coach ran out onto the field screaming at the officials and was called for an unsportsmanlike conduct penalty, pushing Green Bay back to the 15-yard line. On the next play, Love connected with Reed to score Green Bay's first points of the afternoon.

After a scoreless third quarter, Wicks and Kraft converted a touchdown each, while Minnesota traded in a field goal. Wicks' second touchdown of the day came with 56 seconds left and cut the deficit to two, before Minnesota ended the game by recovering the onside kick.

"I am just happy that we just continued to play," said Packer linebacker Quay Walker. "Sometimes, our best is not going to lead to a victory, and sometimes you have to be OK with that."

"It is just one of those things where you take a hit and it is painful," said Love. "It was painful, I felt it and I got up and was able to move around on it still, so nothing really there."

While it doesn't sound like a positive, hearing Love say that even though the hit was painful, he was able to get up and walk around can be seen as a positive. Love, LaFleur and the rest of the coaching staff were able to immediately test Love's knee to see how much he could handle.

As Love said in his post-game press conference, football is a physical sport and injuries happen for everyone.

If someone can play, they are going to play, because every game matters for a team like Green Bay with Super Bowl aspirations.

"It's football, you know, we play a physical sport and there is injuries and you have to fight through some stuff," said Love.

My favorite Green Bay Packer memories

"I have been a Green Bay Packer fan all my life. I remember sitting on my Dad's lap at City Stadium (now East High) when I was 7 years old. When Lambeau field was built, my dad bought 6 season tickets and today our family still has those tickets. They have been passed down from generation to generation. My Grandson's are the 4th generation to sit in those seats."

KEYS TO THE GAME

Brace yourself for game against Stafford

By JACOB WESTENDORF
Green & Gold Express

The Green Bay Packers are forced to lick their wounds following a loss to the Minnesota Vikings at Lambeau Field.

They trailed by as many as 28 points and looked like they were in a different weight class from the Vikings through three quarters.

Ultimately, they did put up a fight, before falling 31-29.

This week, they'll face the Los Angeles Rams, led by Green Bay's old nemesis, Matthew Stafford.

Stafford and the Rams have been competitive through four weeks of the season.

They beat the San Francisco 49ers two weeks ago, and took the Detroit Lions to the brink in the season opener.

They've also lost to the Chicago Bears, struggling to find much in the way of points against a stingy Chicago defense.

The Packers are at 2-2 and 0-2 against NFC opponents. It's hard to call a game a must-win this early in the season, but a third loss against an NFC opponent would make tiebreaker scenarios much trickier in what should be a loaded NFC playoff picture.

Here are our keys to the Packers ensuring they get to 3-2.

Jordan Love vs. Turnovers

One of Jordan Love's biggest developments last season was his ability to avoid the turnovers and bad decisions.

Love had not avoided either of those things in the two games he has started.

Sunday was his second three-interception game of his career.

He did throw four touchdown passes as well. He made some explosive plays against a defense that is one of the best in football.

Unfortunately, the offense resembled the group that stumbled all over itself in the first half of 2023 than the group that set the league on fire in the second half of the season.

A lot of their issues against the Vikings came because they turned the ball over too much.

Minnesota scored 14 points off of Love's first two interceptions in the first half, which helped lead to the 28-0 hole.

Matt LaFleur always says the quarterback's No. 1 job is to take care of the football.

Love needs to start taking care of the football next week.

Matthew Stafford vs. Green Bay's Front 7

Green Bay's pass rush went MIA again on Sunday against the Minnesota Vikings.

Sam Darnold struggles when he is pressured, and they needed their highly-decorated front to find their way to pressure him without Jaire Alexander.

Instead, Green Bay was unable to get much pressure with their front four, which forced Hafley to send extra guys in pressure.

Any defensive coordinator will tell you they prefer to get pressure with just four guys, leaving more in coverage.

Stafford is one of the best quarterbacks of his generation, and that is especially true when he is kept clean.

The Rams are decimated by injuries on the offensive line and the receiving corps.

Stafford has done a good job of making chicken salad the last two weeks, but this is something the Packers need to be able to take advantage of.

That starts with Rashan Gary. Of all the disappointing players through the first four weeks of the season, Gary is likely near the top of the list.

He has one sack in four games. That one came against Lane Johnson, who clearly was not ready for the ball to be snapped.

Gary needs to turn his season around starting on Sunday.

Jeff Hafley vs. Sean McVay

Defensive coordinator Jeff Hafley had his first big test of the season on Sunday when he faced Kevin O'Connell with the Minnesota Vikings.

Of all the offensive minds the Packers have faced this season, O'Connell is the best one.

They failed their first test, falling behind 28-0 and giving up touchdowns on four of Minnesota's first five possessions.

Yes, Alexander did not play on Sunday. He may return this week.

Hafley failed in that regard, as did the players.

This week, Hafley has another test. Sean McVay is on the other sideline.

McVay is widely regarded as one of the best offensive minds in football. If Kyle Shanahan and Andy Reid are considered the two best offensive coaches in the NFL, a straw poll would likely earn McVay the honors as third on that list.

Hafley got caught in three separate blitzes last week, when the Vikings had a screen on. His players did not recognize the play quickly enough to make a play on the ball.

Hafley will need to be better this week than he was a week ago.

Jordan Love completed 32-of-54 passes for 389, four touchdowns and three interceptions in his comeback game against Minnesota on Sept. 29. GREG MELLIS | GREEN & GOLD EXPRESS

Rookie kicker Brayden Narveson missed field goals of 37 and 49 yards in Green Bay's 31-29 loss to Minnesota on Sept. 29. Narveson is now 9-of-13 this season — a miserable 69.2%. Narveson has missed a kick in three of Green Bay's four games. And in the fourth game, Narveson missed a field goal, but Tennessee was offside, and the play was nullified. GREG MELLIS | GREEN & GOLD EXPRESS Tight end Tucker Kraft caught a 13-yard touchdown pass from Jordan Love in Green Bay's Week 4 loss to Minnesota at Lambeau Field. Kraft pulled in six catches for 53 yards in the game.

Kraft emerging as a go to player in Green Bay

By JACOB WESTENDORF
Green & Gold Express

Green Bay tight end Tucker Kraft was drafted by the Packers in the 2023 draft. Against the Vikings on Sept. 29, he caught six passes for 53 yards including a 13-yard touchdown catch.

What does a tight end in a red jersey do in practice?

I guess do your best not to get thudded up by your teammates. Usually if I'm about to hit one of my teammates, I'll tell them, like, 'Hey, I'm coming at you, just give me like 75%, let me work on my hands and feet.' That's great, too. If I'm in pass protection with one of the guys, you get engaged and then I'll say go, now just go.

For a guy who likes to block, is that hard to back off?

Well, yeah, I mean there's, I would say, more pros than cons about it, because come Sunday I can really just unload, but I feel like I'm someone who plays with good leverages and techniques, so I get that on the field in practice. I just don't get the collisions.

This have anything to do with the pec injury?

No, this is has nothing to do with my pec. This is just, like, they're just trying Tight end Tucker Kraft is emerging as a go-to player in Green Bay. As a rookie last year, he appeared in all 17 games and made eight starts. He finished with 31 receptions for 355 yards and two touchdowns. In May, Kraft suffered a torn pectoral muscle, causing him to miss part of Green Bay's offseason training program.

to take some hits off me.

You have pick up blitzers to keep Love from getting hit?

Yeah, that's just us being locked in to our responsibilities. They're going to give us so many different fronts, different defensive personnels, they have blitz tendencies, they have packages, and the things we're trying to do is we're not trying to so much make it about personnel, but just spots and people.

Between the running back and I and wide receivers just all being on the same page of who's responsible for who and just running off the football to try to play fast.

Do you have to keep Jordan protected?

Of course, protect the quarterback at all costs, for sure.

What do you think about pass rushers lining up over the tight ends?

You've got all week to watch the film and know where you're going to put your tight end, so I wouldn't say that the defense was creating that matchup. I was saying that I would be in the offense's hands to create that matchup. Learning how to pass pro a pass rusher in the NFL is a hard thing to do as a rookie. I've seen the Texans film. I know what to expect from a physical pass rusher. What's important is staying inside out, getting hands on, maintaining a base, keeping your hips behind you. I mean you have to really be locked into your technique when you're going against guys that are 15, 20 pounds heavier than you, Favorite Aaron Jones memory?

I mean, he was just such a nice guy. It didn't matter if you just got in that week to be on the practice squad, he'd treat you the same as if you were an eight-year vet. One of my favorite memories is when we got into the fight with that defensive back after the Vikings game. Someone got a picture of it, and I framed it and I had him sign it. So that was a funny, cool memory.

Weird seeing him get into a fight?

We were breaking it up. He just took a glancing blow to the face. He caught a stray fist there, so we all had to step in and protect everybody, I guess.

You could've stayed on the sideline (against the Titans), but you went back in even though the game was in hand?

That wasn't even in a question in my head. I desire to be on the field.

No big picture view to play it safe and stay out?

Last night, I got on YouTube and I looked up Mark Bavaro, so that's just kind of the mindset I'm going with from now on. I'm going to be tough. I'm going to play through things; everybody does. God gave us all the ability to endure, so I'm just choosing free will right now. Checking that box.

You weren't even alive when Mark Bavaro played.

Yeah, had a lot of people tell me to look him up, especially coach Rich Bisaccia. He said you've got to give this guy a look.

I did, and I was amazed.

What did you learn?

Just being physical, being tough. YAC, that's really all that guy was worried out. He set a precedent in the run game, so just trying to channel my inner Bavaro.

Did you give Emanuel Wilson any hurdling tips?

I don't know, maybe not so far in the box still. Wait until you're one on one on that one. Naw, I don't know. That looked like it hurt, though. I've been there.

You were big part of win at Minnesota last year.

What happens when they're blitzing, when they're sending five, sending six, you leave holes in your defense. We took advantage of those. There was guys open. We had a pretty complete game. We were able to take our starters off the field in the fourth quarter. That was a New Year's Eve game, so it was great to be able to get some reps off our bodies. The key to that was finding the voids.

Communication with Love on that?

Yeah. The quarterback can change protection out there at any moment. I could not be involved and he sees seven guys walked up on the line of scrimmage and we're going to use our cadence, he's going to bring me down. It's all just about communication. I'm using my peripherals to see if Jordan, if he takes a look at me, look back at him. He could signal me something, he could directly tell me something.

Usually, we're only one position - we're No. 3 as far as field, boundary receiver sets, so we're still pretty close to the quarterback, we can hear what he's saying.

Like to watch the blocking or receiving part of your game more?

Getting around and picking on a DB, it's cool and all, but getting the opportunity to do something with your legs, like catching a short route and making the first guy miss, that's my mentality. I never want to be tackled by the first guy, let alone a DB. My mentality as soon as I catch the football is I'm just seeing probabilities of run lanes. That all really goes back to my nine-man high school running back days. I got a lot of reps with that in high school. I'd get 40 carries a game, got a lot of opportunities to run with the football. In college, same thing. I established the larger part of what I could do as a tight end was be physical. I'm still as a pro trying to define the space between where physicality and precision meet, and I feel like I'm getting there. I love catching the football. That's great, but I love breaking tackles.

WEEK 4
PACKERS 29, VIKINGS 31
THE MOMENT

Green Bay wide receiver Bo Melton recovers a muffed punt at the 3-yard line during the Week 4 game at Lambeau Field. Late in the second quarter, the muffed punt by Jalen Nailor — who was back there for a banged-up Brandon Powell — led to a Packers touchdown that gave them some life.

GREG MELLIS | GREEN & GOLD EXPRESS

Green Bay quarterback Jordan Love completed a 15-yard touchdown pass to wide receiver Jayden Reed, who made a jump ball catch over the defender to get the Packers on the board. Reed finished the game with seven receptions for 139 yards and one touchdown. On the year, he now has 17 receptions for 336 yards and two touchdowns.

Bigger is not always better, but better is how we get bigger. As the smallest media covering the NFL's smallest market, the Shawano Leader is proud to have brought top-notch Packers content to the community for the past 100-plus years. Perseverance is not a long race; it is many short races one after another. The same can be said for every Green Bay Packers football season ... and also for the Shawano Leader – the smallest market, bringing quality content to the community since 1881.
