Homeless issue brought to council's attention
Concerns arise as SAM25 shelter closes for season

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

The problem of homelessness was not on the agenda for the May 14 Shawano Common Council meeting, but it received a fair amount of attention and ended with a plan to look into the issue. There is a homeless shelter that is run through Shawano Area Matthew 25, but it's only open from Nov. 1 through April 30, leaving those who find themselves out on the streets with no local place to sleep the other six months of the year. Shawano resident Mark Quast finds that to be a problem.

"Right now, if you're homeless from May now until November, you have to sleep on the street," Quast said during the public comment segment. "If you're homeless, and you have no money, where do you go? You can't sleep in the park, because if you sleep in the park, you get a trespassing charge."

Quast believes the city should do more to address the homeless situation in Shawano, even though the city has no jurisdiction over SAM25 and when the shelter is open.

"My suggestions would be to open SAM25 year-round or the other thing is, if you could, have a safe zone for people that are homeless where they could sleep at night, because obviously there's no place to sleep," Quast said. "You can't sleep in the park, so where do you go? Do you walk around all night? A person's got to sleep."

Matthew Klein knows this firsthand, because he is currently homeless. Klein spoke to the council during public comments about how he has received several tickets for sleeping at night in places where he's not supposed to. Currently, city parks are closed when the sun goes down.

"During the day, we don't have nowhere to go or anything, and at night we don't, either," Klein said. "We go and try to camp out in the woods, some of these back woods — mostly I try to stay on the trails — but I keep on finding police contacts and getting tickets for trespassing. I'm trying to live. I'm just trying to find a place to stay. I'm not trying to cause any

Shawanokasic tells CMN classmates of his struggles with learning

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

The College of Menominee Nation conferred 57 degrees and technical diplomas on its graduates during a ceremony May 16 at the Menominee Casino Resort, each of them with their own journey about reaching and obtaining higher education.

Joshua Shawanokasic was one of those graduates, and his journey took a little longer than most. Shawanokasic, who was selected as this year's CMN student speaker at graduation, might be recognizable to some as a patrol officer for the Shawano Police Department. For those who've known him longer than that, they might recognize him as a high school basketball player.

What some might not realize, however, is that school was not always foremost on the Menominee man's mind. He told a packed ballroom at the resort about how he went from being a minimally present student athlete to a graduate with a bachelor of science in business administration with high honors.

"My time at CMN has been an incredible journey, shaped not only by the education I received, but by the people who made it meaningful and have positively impacted me along the way," Shawanokasic said. "The faculty here didn't just teach. They took the time to connect. They cared about life outside of the classroom, and I'm especially grateful for those who took an interest in me personally."

Shawanokasic attended Shawano Community High School, and he admitted he was not a particularly good student when he attended. He only focused on doing the bare minimum to allow him to play basketball.

"I never thought about the future, and I rarely did my schoolwork," Shawanokasic said. "I had one goal in mind at that time, and that was to play basketball."

He made it to the varsity team his junior year, and he thought he'd made it to where he wanted to be. However, three failing grades in the first term left Shawanokasic ineligible.

"I recall that day being the worst in my young life," he said, noting that the failing grades resulted in his mother taking his phone and car away and driving him to school daily, much to his embarrassment.

Fortunately, teachers gave Shawanokasic the opportunity to improve his grades by writing four reports, which brought his grades to a passing level and put him back on the basketball team just in time for the first game of the season. He said that he paid better attention in school after that, because being ineligible for basketball was not acceptable to him.

Shawanokasic's athletic prowess helped him get to Viterbo University in 2009, as his GPA at SCHS was only 2.7, but he struggled once again with juggling basketball and learning with a job that he needed to pay for college, despite his belief that getting away from the Menominee Reservation might help him better focus.

"I skipped classes, and I was more focused on sleeping in than showing up," Shawanokasic said.

He soon found himself on academic probation, and he was told by university officials he would have to take summer classes to be allowed back the next academic year. He decided he would rather return home.

Shawanokasic tried again to engage in higher learning in 2012, this time at CMN. Although he didn't have to worry about basketball being in the mix this time, he continued to have difficulty in his classes despite being "back home."

"I skipped classes, fell behind and eventually stopped showing up altogether," Shawanokasic said. "Looking back, I

OBITUARIES

Fabian Holewinski

Fabian Holewinski, 85, passed away peacefully May 13, 2025, at Aurora Baycare Medical Center in Green Bay, surrounded by his loving family. The son of Antone and Anna (Brusky) Holewinski was born in Maple Grove on Feb. 21, 1940.

Fabian was a lifelong resident of Hofa Park, where he married the love of his life, Cynthia Dziubla, and they were happily married for 60 years. Here they raised a loving family, fostered his passion for outstanding cows and his love of the land. His most favorite outside seasonal job was planting corn on his farm. He loved preparing and showing his prized Holstein dairy cattle at local shows and at the Shawano County Fair. He was the first person in Shawano County to milk cows three times daily, a true picture of his outstanding work ethic, which he passed on to all his children.

Fabian served in the U.S. Army, where he perfected his tuba playing skills. He later went on to play in several local polka bands, often playing for residents of local nursing homes. In addition, he was a member of the Pulaski Community Band for several years.

When he wasn't spending time on his farm, he could be found attending his children's and grandchildren's sporting and showing events. He was an avid sports fan, with a fondness for the Green Bay Packers.

He especially loved playing sheephead and cribbage, and could count cards like the best Vegas superstar. He looked forward to family gatherings, where he cherished time with his children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren. Furthermore, Fabian was a tree expert and could identify all different types of trees.

Anyone who met Fabian loved him. He was unassuming, approachable and humble. We invite all of you to live each day to the fullest, and live by his famous motto: "It's a wonderful day to be alive."

Fabian is survived by his wife, Cynthia (Dziubla) Holewinski; six children, John (Beth) Holewinski, Annette (Peter) Lenss, Christine (Martin) Jacobson, Pamela (Ryan) Liebergen, Jeannine (Erik)

now realize that I was not ready — not mentally, not emotionally and definitely not with the right mindset."

Turning to law enforcement as his career, Shawanokasic joined the Menominee Tribal Police in 2015 and then later found himself with the Shawano Police Department. He finished the police academy with a 3.1 GPA. Besides keeping the community safe, he also went through a variety of training programs.

It was drug recognition expert training that made Shawanokasic discover he was finally ready to pursue higher academics at age 29, as the lowest score he got on any of the exams there was 86, and his final exam score was 94.

"Through that experience, I discovered a deeper sense of discipline and maturity," Shawanokasic said. "Education was no longer a burden, and it had a meaningful reason behind it. I had grown, not just as an officer but as a student committed to learning."

With that, Shawanokasic returned to CMN in 2020, and he realized he was not pursuing higher education just for himself. He was doing it for his family.

"I wanted to obtain my degree and show my (three) daughters where education and perseverance could lead," Shawanokasic said. "I wanted them to see me walking across the stage and thinking, 'I could do that someday.'" problems or anything with anybody."

The council doesn't engage in dialogue during public comments, but Mayor Bruce Milavitz asked Police Chief Mike Musolf his thoughts about the earlier comments when the chief was giving his monthly report. Musolf said there's not much that officials can do under the current circumstances.

"It's difficult. If you're looking at somewhere to stay overnight, it's hard to allow people to stay in the parks because that's what the ordinance says," Musolf said. "Also, the Mountain-Bay Trail seems to be a place, an area where a lot of people tend to tuck off the trail. But a lot of times that's private property, and you don't have permission to be there, so that's another issue that occurs."

Once the council concluded its regular business, Alderman Kevin Barkow

Joshua Shawanokasic, the 2025 College of Menominee Nation commencement speaker, told about his journey from being a high school basketball player who barely cared about academics to being a father of three who was walking across the stage to get his bachelor's degree May 16 at the Menominee Casino Resort.

LEE PULASKI | NEW MEDIA

The learning journey isn't over for Shawanokasic, though. Besides getting his bachelor's degree May 16, it also marked the end of his first semester with the University of Wisconsin-Parkside as he pursues a master's degree in business administration.

"Every obstacle, every failure, every moment where you thought about giving up, you've always got the power to turn it around," Shawanokasic said. "I know this, because I lived it. My journey was full of false starts, missed opportunities and hard lessons, but eventually I chose to stop running from my failures and start learning from them."

recommended that the council revisit the homeless issue when it meets in June.

"This homeless thing is kind of bothering me a little bit," Barkow said. "I don't know if there's anything we can do as far as putting a committee together or looking at this a little bit more, but I think we definitely need to work on something to get this thing fixed."

Alderman Jack Young suggested inviting a SAM25 representative to the next meeting to discuss the situation, and City Administrator Eddie Sheppard said officials could reach out to the organization, pointing out that the city has had a positive relationship with the shelter.

"That way, maybe we can have a more organized conversation," Sheppard said.

2 parents speak out about violent coach

Action urged to prevent future issues

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

Two parents told the Shawano School Board on May 12 that a coach within the school district is acting out with impunity, despite numerous complaints from other parents on the issue.

School board meeting rules do not permit the naming of the coach in question, perceiving name reveals as personal attacks on individual employees. The speakers also did not indicate at which school the coach works.

Dave Passehl said the coach in question is “not being held to the highest ethical standards.”

“They continuously act contrary to the athletic code within the school district’s coach’s handbook,” Passehl said. “I don’t feel like I’m being heard. I have become more frustrated and now even suspicious of what happens when athletes, parents and fans bring concerns to administration about Shawano athletics.”

Passehl said he’s been told on multiple occasions that the success of the district’s athletic programs is not tied to win-loss records but by how the individual athletes grow. “They should feel a Parent Dave Passehl tells Shawano School Board members May 13 about how he has submitted complaints about a coach in the school district, even going so far as to make an open records request to see if any disciplinary action has taken place, only to be told no action could be taken.

connectedness and have fun and form positive lasting memories,” Passehl said. “I do suspect in some of our sports in Shawano that is the case, but I know it is not the case in one of the sports that I care about. Unfortunately, when a coach historically and repeatedly does not uphold their own code of ethics themselves, it makes it very difficult for the athletes to achieve the district’s definition of a successful season.”

Passehl said he distributed a letter that received 30 signatures from parents, past players and fans that outlined several issues the coach allegedly has violated, including “exemplary bench conduct,” being a good role model and modeling good sportsmanship.

“Particularly frustrating is that we know we’re not the first group to bring these concerns to the district, but yet the behavior has not changed, and we have noticed that year over year,” Passehl said. “For the past several months, many parents have either requested or successfully held meetings with our administration and athletic department to share concerns about the past season.”

Passehl expressed frustration with how the coach continues to get a contract renewed; as a result, the parents have filed complaints and submitted open records requests to get to the heart of the issue. He said a few days prior to the board meeting, district officials claimed the investigation into the matter has been concluded but did not find any “actionable findings.”

“This is very interesting and makes us wonder, does the district even hear us?” Passehl said. “Do they really care when a group comes together with concerns. When a collection of athletes — yes, current athletes — parents and fans come to the district each year, one would expect some action.”

Passehl claimed complaints have gone back for at least a decade, and that he expected the open records request to yield multiple documents. Instead, he said, it yielded one document from 2017 that the coach was reprimanded for swearing at athletes and broke a seven-day contact rule. The coach faced a two-game suspension but completed mandatory training instead.

“I’m here to say that something just doesn’t add up,” Passehl said. “What is the district hiding when it comes to a coach that consistently breaks the code? Where are those notes? Where are the complaints?”

Passehl called for “a new direction, a new vision,” and higher standards for excellence when it comes to hiring coaches.

“Shawano is missing the mark,” he said.

Passehl also suggested that athletic director Joel Wondra should be allowed to focus on athletics and not be required to oversee non-athletic extracurriculars, claiming it does a disservice to students when Wondra’s time is spread too thin.

Nick Nordin, another parent, blasted the lack of a paper trail when it comes to parents filing complaints against the coach in question, saying it has caused a small problem to grow larger over time.

“Maybe you have to use a trigger word: ‘official complaint,’” Nordin said.

He suggested that having documentation of discussions with people complaining would likely have lent credence when he and Passehl registered their complaints.

Nordin also cited the district’s athletic handbook and questioned why it was not being followed.

“Nowhere does it state in the school district that we will allow coaches to yell and gaslight the students,” Nordin said, adding that administrators and board members should read surveys at the conclusion of each athletic season to gauge a coach’s performance. “The mental health of our students should not be in the hands of unqualified staff.”

Athletes are held accountable for their actions, Nordin said, so it’s important that the coaches be held to the same standards. He claimed the coach he was speaking about has thrown fits of rage and occasionally thrown objects, along with blaming the athletes for a “failing legacy.”

“How can student athletes place trust in their coach when they see violations, and the school administration does not follow with consequences?” Nordin said.

He cited statistics showing that at least 1,200 coaching changes have been made in schools throughout Wisconsin in the past year, so getting a different coach is not out of the question.

More students leave than enter Shawano schools

Gap of more than 2-1 continues to elude local district

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

The open enrollment gap continues to widen in the Shawano School District, as more area students are attending schools in other districts compared with outside students coming to Shawano.

The district received 17 new applications in a three-month open enrollment period ending April 30. Fourteen were brand new students, while the other three were students who had been attending Shawano schools but moved elsewhere while still wanting to attend the local schools, according to Cory Kaisler, the district’s data systems coordinator.

The 17 new applications bring the total of students open enrolling into Shawano to 165.

“We had no denials and no special ed applications,”

Kaisler said.

The number of students living within the Shawano district but leaving for other schools is another story, according to Kaisler. This year, the district had 298 students open enrolling out of Shawano, but 60 additional applications were approved. Of those, 15 currently attend Shawano’s public schools.

The Shawano School Board approved the numbers at its May 12 meeting, and letters will be sent to affected families no later than June 6. The families will need to let the district know by June 30 if they still intend to be in Shawano public schools.

“Just because they’re accepted doesn’t mean they’re going to come to Shawano,” Kaisler said. “If the parent fails to notify the school district, we reserve the right to decline the acceptance that we gave them.”

There is a second open enrollment period that opens July 1 and continues through the next school year.

One of the big factors for students enrolling outside the school district is to have a virtual option instead of attending school in person, according to Kaisler. Shawano recently partnered with the Rural Virtual Academy based in Medford, and it is hoped that having the option locally will curb the high number of students leaving the district.

“This year, we have 23 applicants that want to apply to the Rural Virtual Academy,” Kaisler said. “Nine of them currently attend a Shawano school.”

Open enrollment numbers do not include students in the school district boundaries who attend parochial schools, Kaisler said.

Husband charged with wife’s 9-year-old murder

Radford claimed suicide, but investigation shows otherwise

By NEW MEDIA STAFF

The Shawano County Sheriff’s Department has closed a 9-year death investigation with charges of murder being posed to the husband of the victim.

James C. Radford, 39, is being charged with first-degree reckless homicide in the death of his wife, Sabrina Radford.

Deputies responded April 11, 2016, to a residence on County Road J in the Town of Fairbanks for a report of a woman who had sustained a gunshot wound. The caller, identified as her husband, reported that his wife had shot herself.

At the time of the initial response, investigators were unable to conclusively determine the cause of death. However, due to the suspicious circumstances surrounding the incident, a formal investigation was initiated.

Over the course of nine years, investigators dedicated significant time and effort to this case, according to a sheriff’s department press release. Numerous interviews were conducted with James Radford and other individuals connected to the case, and previously collected evidence was reexamined. With the aid of advanced investigative tools, evolving forensic technology and the involvement of expert witnesses, investigators determined that the death of Sabrina Radford was not the result of suicide.

On April 15 of this year, James Radford was taken into custody in Waukesha County. He was subsequently transported back to Shawano County, where he was booked into the Shawano County Jail and held on a cash bond of $800,000.

“Our deepest condolences go out to Sabrina’s family,” Sheriff George Lenzner said in a press release. “We understand the past nine years have been long and difficult, but please know that this case was never forgotten. Our office has worked diligently to bring answers and accountability.”

Currently, attempts are being made to find an attorney to represent James Radford, and the time limits for a preliminary hearing have been waived. A status conference has been scheduled for 1:30 p.m. June 9 on Branch II of the Shawano County Courthouse.

Renard takes charge of Shawano School Board

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

Shawano School Board member Tim Renard was elected president for the board May 12 after two rounds of voting.

Renard replaces Mike Musolff as president, who said he could no longer perform the duties of president since being promoted to police chief for the city of Shawano.

"I want to thank the community for allowing me to be president for the last few years," Musolff said. "With my other position, I've decided not to be president this year — not that that diminishes anything else for anybody else."

That left the position wide open with three board members nominated. In addition to Renard, Bobbi Lemerond and Jeana Winslow were jockeying for the post.

Board member Karen Houston suggested that Winslow, given the amount of time she's been on the board, would be the best choice for president.

"Although I appreciate all the gifts and talents of everyone on this board, I would like to nominate Jeana Winslow as the president because of her experience as a board member and her training and involvement," Houston said.

The first round saw Renard and Winslow receive four votes each, with Lemerond being eliminated with just one vote. In the second round, Renard won with a 5-4 vote.

In between the two rounds of voting, Renard said: "I was looking for some white smoke," making a reference to the recent election for the new pope at the Vatican.

Renard is in his first three-year term on the board. His seat, which represents the towns of Wescott and Washington, expires next year.

"I have some big shoes to fill with Mike, and I'm glad he's hanging around with us," Renard said. "I'm relatively unknown to some of the people here, but I've been in the district for three or four years now having moved up here from Milwaukee."

Winslow wound up taking the vice president position by unanimous consent. Al Pyatskowitz was named as the clerk, Winslow's previous position, after Lemerond declined her nomination. Houston was named treasurer.

Agreement reached on stray dogs in Town of Richmond

Humane society will be called to assist

By KEVIN PASSON
Editor-in-Chief

Town of Richmond officials agreed May 12 on a new procedure to deal with stray dogs in the community.

The change comes after a town supervisor shot and killed two stray dogs last month, albeit in accordance with town policy at the time.

Town officials will now call the Shawano County Humane Society to assist the town's constable with picking up stray dogs. The animals will be housed at the humane society at no cost to the town.

The town will also post photographs of stray dogs reported to them on its social media accounts to help reunite the animals with their owners.

Community residents collected hundreds of signatures asking the board to end the practice of shooting stray dogs.

"I'm really happy that they are going to use who we have for catchers to come in and help out," said Pam Nowak, executive director of the humane society. "I'm grateful they will reach out to us when they have a stray dog."

On April 8, Town Supervisor Ken Damveld, acting in accordance with local and state policy, killed two dogs that appeared to have been abandoned. At least one of the dogs appeared aggressive, according to a report filed by the Shawano County Sheriff's Department.

Ken Damveld's son, Steve Damveld, is the town constable but is regularly out of town several days a week. Ken Damveld fills in upon request.

Town Chairman Steve Gueths hopes the matter is now settled.

"It'll be nice to get this behind us," he said. "I hope what we did tonight will do that."

"We now have a path. We have a plan; we can work together," Nowak said. "We all understand, and we're clear."

Wolf River Lutheran graduates 6 students

Small school leaders talk of the value of faith in education

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

Sometimes small is better.
For the six who graduated Wolf River Lutheran High School on May 16, they know this to be true, not only for the necessary learning to get through high school, but to strengthen their faith as well.

Shayla Kroenke, valedictorian, knows that the finish line has been a difficult one as she worked through her autism to be the top student in her class.

"This isn't just about crossing a finish line," Kroenke said. "It's about recognizing the journey that brought us here, and everything we've learned along the way. Let me tell you, I've learned a lot since I first walked through the doors of Wolf River Lutheran High School. Wide-eyed and naive, I had no idea what kind of ride I was in for."

Kroenke knew that being different was something she needed to overcome, but she also knew that she couldn't give up, even though there were days when that seemed preferable to going to school.
"There were days when I struggled just to get out of bed, unsure of what the day would bring," Kroenke said. "I wrestled with where I fit in, how to connect with others and what it meant to be accepted. Many days, I felt like an outsider, watching everyone else but feeling like I never belonged. I often questioned myself, wondering if I was the problem."

She soon realized that many people with autism feel the same way, with the ability to form connections being difficult and with loneliness hitting hard. However, she realized she was never really alone with Jesus by her side.

"For a long time, I thought that if I just acted a certain way, if I masked my true self, I'd finally fit in," Kroenke said. "I thought I'd find a group, join somewhere and avoid judgment. This just left me more confused, more exhausted and more alone. Pretending not to be autistic didn't protect me."

Shayla Kroenke, Wolf River Lutheran High School valedictorian, tells her fellow classmates and a group of 150 parents and community members about how transformative high school was and that, even with her autism, she achieved great things.

Kroenke urged her fellow graduates to remember that fitting in does not always lead to standing. She said that attending Wolf River Lutheran was not just attending a school, but also a gateway to transformation.
"Be mindful who you surround yourself with," Kroenke said. "You are a reflection of those closest to you. Not everyone who claims to share your beliefs will live by them."
Nohelia Cuenca, salu-

torian, said she enjoyed her time at Wolf River Lutheran, with smaller classes allowing her to get whatever help she needed to learn.
"We have been blessed with an opportunity to form an environment of encouragement, love and support showcasing what it means to be a community rooted in Christian values," Cuenca said. "We have walked through these halls together, navigated the challenges and triumphs of high school."

Rita Trinko walks a 4-mile trek daily through downtown Shawano. No matter the weather, Trinko says: "Every day is beautiful."

LYNN ZAFFRANN

Nothing can break Trinko's stride through Shawano

Red hat, constant movement common sight in city

By LYNN ZAFFRANN
Correspondent

Rita Trinko is an integral part of Shawano's cityscape.

With her red hat and distinctive stroll, she is well-known throughout the community.

Trinko, 81, walks from her home to downtown and back, a 4-mile trek, almost every day. Walking started as simply something for her to do.

"I don't know; I just felt like getting outside," Trinko said.

She said that she likes to keep busy and doesn't like to just sit around.

"When I first started walking, I had my red hat on, and after a while, it started to be a thing," Trinko said. "I used to do 4 miles in the morning and 4 miles at night, but things changed. My work schedule changed, so now I just do my 4-mile night walk. Once in a while, I'll get an extra one in, and I won't take a chance on walking when it's icy."

Trinko walks the same route every time. From her home north of town, she walks south toward Main Street, to the Twig's truck. There she turns around and heads back home.

Trinko is a lifelong Shawano County resident.

"I grew up over by Hermansfort, by Gresham, near County (Road) U," she said. "Then, when I got married, we moved to Shawano."

"I grew up on the farm and proud of it. It's still a farm. I stopped there a while back, just to go through the house."

Trinko's maiden name was Reinke. Her dad was from Pella, and her mother was from Leopold.

"I was the farmer's girl," she said. "I drove tractor, bailing hay — all that good stuff."

Trinko was the baby of the family, with a brother and sister older than herself.

She was 18 when she married Lee

Caught on one of her daily walks, Rita Trinko wears the distinctive red hat for which she is known by Shawano residents.

LYNN ZAFFRANN

Trinko. They met in Tilleda, at a dance hall. On Saturday nights in the late 1950s and early 1960s, Trinko's parents would drive her and girlfriends there for polka dancing.

Trinko attended Shawano High School.

"We're the good class, 1961. You turn 1961 upside down, and you still have 1961," Trinko said. "I mentioned that at one of the class reunions, and since that time, it's been a 'thing' for the class."

She has one son, Mark, who lives in Ohio, so she doesn't see him too often.

"It's quite a distance. We drove down there a couple times, but it's a nine-hour drive."

He's a church organist.

"I'm not prejudiced, but he's very good," Trinko said. Two grandsons also live in Ohio.

She's had two major accidents in the past few years.

When describing her last injury, Trinko said: "When you stand on the top of a ladder, you wonder why you fall off."

She said she learned her lesson. She spent a month in a local rehabilitation center, Evergreen Health Services.

"They were wonderful," Trinko said. "This last time, I broke my hip and crushed my ankle."

Three years earlier, she was hit by a car. She has rods in both legs and one arm from that accident.

"Other than that, I'm fine," Trinko said. "I started back to work about six or seven years ago, at Qualheim's. It felt good going back to work; it's a good place to work."

They just are good people."

Trinko also volunteers at Shawano County Historical Society.

"There is the Rhubarb Fest coming up in June, and I'm going to take the brochures to downtown businesses on one of my walks," she said.

Her usual job is on Mondays, and she files clippings of interest to the historical society.

Trinko said that she needs things to pass the day, that she just can't sit without doing something. She enjoys watching football. She keeps busy with embroidery. She always helps out at the potato pancake breakfast in Tilleda but usually doesn't travel out of town. She does most of her home maintenance, including mowing the lawn.

The Trinkos were Green Bay Packers season ticket holders. Her husband inherited his seats from his father.

"We had bad seats," Trinko said, keeping a straight face. "They were 23 rows up on the 50-yard line. Just horrible seats."

She kept the tickets until about three years ago, when she transferred them to her nephew. "They stayed in the Trinko name."

She has a birthday coming up soon. Her elfin smile and positive attitude definitely seem to contribute to her popularity in the community.

"Every day is beautiful," Trinko said.

GARDENING WITH MELINDA MYERS

Boost outside enjoyment by managing ticks, mosquitoes

Summer is synonymous with fun outdoor activities like barbecuing, playing lawn games, hiking and gardening. It can also mean unwanted pests like mosquitoes and ticks. Employing a few preventative strategies can help minimize the annoyance and reduce the risk of tick- and mosquito-borne diseases.

Start by creating a landscape that is less inviting to mosquitoes and ticks.

Reduce mosquitoes' daytime resting spaces by keeping your garden weeded.

Melinda
Myers
Columnist

Removing weeds and managing neglected garden spaces will make your landscape less inviting to these pests.

Evaluate drainage patterns in your landscape. Improve drainage by amending the soil in garden beds with organic matter. Consider adding a rain garden to capture water run-off from the roof and hard surfaces, putting it to work in a garden filled with beautiful flowers for you and pollinators to enjoy. Water collected in these gardens drains within 24-36 hours and doesn't provide a breeding ground for mosquitoes.

Drain water from toys, buckets or any objects that can hold water and serve as a breeding ground for mosquitoes. Clear debris from gutters so the water flows freely through the gutter and out the downspout.

Change the water in birdbaths at least once a week. Make it part of your routine whenever you water container gardens. You can install a small pump to keep the water moving, which prevents mosquito breeding.

Toss a Mosquito Dunk (www.summitresponsiblesolutions.com) in birdbaths, rain barrels and water features. This certified organic insecticide only kills the larvae of mosquitoes, black flies and fungus gnats. It won't harm bees, butterflies, birds, pets and people.

Help reduce the tick population in your landscape by keeping the grass mowed and removing brush, groundcovers, firewood piles and bird feeders near your home or where your family frequents. Consider creating a tick-safe area where your family frequents, and limit time spent in tick-infested areas.

Widen pathways, properly prune trees to increase light, exclude deer and discourage rodents to reduce the risk of exposure. Place children's swing sets away from the woods, and cover the soil with woodchip mulch. Eliminate invasive barberry, honeysuckle and buckthorn that create a tick-friendly habitat.

Wear light-colored clothing to more easily spot ticks before they move onto your skin. Loose fitting, light-colored clothing is also less attractive to mosquitoes. Wear long pants and tuck them into socks and tuck your shirt into your pants. Ticks often gain access through pant legs or shirttails and crawl up, looking for a place to settle in and feed.

Consider spraying your clothing with an insecticide labeled for repelling and killing ticks and mosquitoes. Select an in-

Memorial Day important as list of dead grows

Looking for a place to commemorate Memorial Day this year? I recommend you attend Sylvan Post 44 American Legion Ceremony at 10 a.m. at Veterans Park in Wabeno. Jon is a Legionnaire, and I am an Auxiliary member. Join us; we would love to meet you. If you go, be sure to visit the beautiful memorial honoring Wisconsin military killed in Afghanistan and Iraq.

Here is the story behind it. With the war in Afghanistan already underway, the Iraq War began with an invasion in March 2003. Jon and I did not support the decision made by the Bush Administration to invade Iraq. However, we unconditionally supported the men and women of the U.S. military called upon to do the fighting.

Reports of casualties repeatedly appeared in the media, as we knew they would. We grieved, heartbroken over each, knowing every single one had a family, friends, schoolmates, co-workers, military comrades — a life. Fearing, as so often happens, that these precious war dead would be quickly forgotten, we wanted to make sure this time it did not. We searched for ways to accomplish our goal, finally deciding to establish Lester Marsh Memorial Island on a tiny island we own in the Townsend Flowage. At first, the goal was to recognize the sacrifice of every soldier, sailor, Marine and airman killed in action in Afghanistan and Iraq. As the KIAs quickly mounted, we knew that was impossible. Instead, we decided to honor those who had deep ties to Wisconsin. With the help of Bruce Beno, we cleared the center of the island and enclosed it with a white picket fence.

Each of the heroes was memorialized with a cross that included name and hometown. Bruce made the crosses from composite lumber. I ordered the nameplates from a business in Antigo. Jon fastened them to the crosses. We installed a large aluminum flagpole, and Old Glory was easily visible from all around the Southern part of the Flowage. A small dock was added to facilitate access.

Much to our dismay, the memorial grew and grew and grew. Each time we added a cross, we recited aloud all the names that preceded it, then lovingly placed the new one amid its brethren. We always said a solemn prayer of gratitude while standing near a 4-foot white cross that stood guard over the site. That special cross memorialized Jon's uncle, Lester Marsh, an Army sergeant killed in New Guinea in 1943.

Word spread. Kayakers, jet skiers and boaters stopped to pay tribute to the fallen; families and friends of those honored came from all over the state. We took scores of loved ones out on our pontoon to visit the island. It was emotionally draining as we cried and hugged and agreed on the futility of war to solve human problems. I will never forget the time a little girl ran up the path and searched until she found her father's cross. "Look, Mommy," she cried out. "Somebody loves my daddy as much as I do."

The wars dragged on; more and more crosses were added. Each time a new cross, a new nameplate, a new tragic loss occurred, we were more determined than ever to preserve their memory. We lovingly tended the memorial for a decade until it proved too much. Our children live far away; we wondered what would happen when we could no longer keep it up. Then, from out of nowhere, the answer came.

Gerry LaFont, Boy

Phyllis Marsh and Jon Marsh stand next to the 4-foot cross commemorating their uncle, Lester Marsh, who was an Army sergeant in World War II, as other crosses remembering dead members of the U.S. Armed Forces sprout up in front of them on Memorial Island in Townsend.

KATHLEEN MARSH

Scout Troop 1048 Lake-wood approached Post 44, looking for an endeavor to earn his Eagle Badge. The project he chose was to move the crosses from Marsh Memorial Island to Legion Memorial Park. The post's involvement was critical in completing the mission, as was Blackwell Job Corps. Today, we are pleased that what we like to call a "Mini-Arlington" is easily accessible from Highway 32.

Of all those honored there, the only one we knew was Jesse Thiry. Jesse was a Marine corporal from Casco, killed in 2004 in Anbar Province. Jesse had worked at Mike's Supermarket in Townsend one summer before he enlisted. I'd walk to the store each morning to get a newspaper, and I began conversing with him. I'll never forget how his face lit up as he shared his dream of becoming a Marine. How could either of us know his dream would send him thousands of miles from home to die for his country? Jesse's gold star mother still lives here.

Life is a series of small moments that create monumental memories. Who would have thought at the time that Jesse, Jon and I would be forever linked by our determination that his life, and the lives of all those honored there, will never be forgotten? Isn't that what Memorial Day is all about — to remember and pay tribute to those who made the ultimate sacrifice? In my opinion, that's the least we can do.

Finding, identifying birds easier with Merlin

It's May 10 as I write this, World Migratory Bird Day, and this morning we are out scouting for birds. We feel a bit of urgency, as we realize that it won't be long before the trees — now newly green and just starting to leaf out — will be fully decked out in their summer foliage, blocking our view of the birds singing in their branching arms.

We drive a hybrid car. We call it our stealth machine when birding as it is quiet and acts as a great blind. We do not want to disturb the birds so we bird from the car with binoculars, a field guide, a camera and the Merlin app on our phones to help us with identification.

Merlin is a bird identification app that helps you identify birds using three methods: a step-by-step guide, a photo and sound. It's been a boon to birders, especially because of its ability to provide a list of birds you are hearing by their calls and songs. Check out the app and download it to up your birding adventures; best of all, it is free.

Early morning is the best time to bird while the birds are more active and singing, but then, anytime is a good time to bird. You just see more in the mornings. We are hoping to see warblers today, those small colorful neotropical migrants that travel to or through Wisconsin during migration. Many of them breed to the north of us, so now is the time to look for them before they move on.

We creep along the roads (in our stealth machine) near the bay, scanning the trees. We like to target the newly budding willows, as many birds like this type of habitat, picking off buds or insects as they forage for food. Merlin "hears" five species of warblers about. We focus in on a couple of colorful birds flitting about the willows — warblers never sit still for long, so we track them, calling out the colors and patterns we see to help identify them.

Birds have distinguishing features such as white eye rings, colorful or streaked breasts, sides or bellies, wing bars, black "masks," crests, etc. Learning some of these features helps with their identification.

After some study, we are thrilled to have identified a chestnut-sided warbler. It has chestnut colored patches on its sides, a yellow patch atop its head, white belly and yellow wing bars. Wow, a first for us.

Then we track a second colorful bird with our binoculars. It sports a striking black necklace and has bold black streaks on a yellow breast, white wing bars, a jaunty black mask and a white patch above its eye. We learn this is a magnolia warbler, another first.

We also make out the yellow warbler, a more familiar species with its bright yellow coloring, reddish streaks on the breast, black wing bars and a splash of rusty red on top of its head. The palm warbler is here too. This is another yellowish colored warbler with a rusty red patch atop its head, a black streak through the eye, yellow "eyebrows," and olive-brown back. The palm warbler wags its tail a lot, a giveaway characteristic for this species.

Merlin also picked up the song of the common yellowthroat warbler, one we'd loved to have seen but did not. This is another warbler with yellow coloring that cuts a dashing figure with its broad black mask.

Getting to observe four of the five species of warblers on our morning "hunt" was rewarding. The hope of seeing a common yellowthroat gives us a reason to come back; maybe tomorrow will be our lucky day. As my husband has so aptly stated, birding is a treasure hunt.

May is a great month to look for birds and remind ourselves what amazing creatures they are. They've evolved to be great aviators, to inhabit all corners of the world, sport beautiful colors and patterns, sing to us, spread cheer and even navigate by the stars and "feel" the magnetic pull of the poles.

Officially, World Migratory Bird Day is celebrated the second Saturday in May (May 10) as migratory birds journey north to their nesting grounds and again on the second Saturday in October (Oct. 11 this year) as they return to their wintering grounds. This year's theme revolves around helping to build bird friendly environments. Go to www.migratorybirdday.org to learn more.

Celebrate birds by finding ways to help them and take time to enjoy their very existence. Catch their song and notice them as you go about your day. Download the free Merlin app to help you identify some of these small lively treasures. They will expand your world and brighten it with delight, color and song.

secticide spray like Summit Green Armor Insect Repellent labeled for use on clothing. Read and follow label directions and let your clothing dry before wearing it.

Remove and check your clothing for ticks anytime you have been outdoors. Showering within two hours of spending time outdoors can greatly reduce your risk of Lyme and possibly other tick-borne diseases. Always conduct a tick check, paying special attention to your underarms, belly button, in and around your ears, hair, behind your knees and around your waist.

Keep mosquitoes away when hosting a party, gardening or relaxing outdoors. Use a fan to create a gentle breeze that keeps weak-flying mosquitoes away from you and your guests. Some gardeners even take a small fan into the garden while weeding.

Citronella oil and scented candles have some mosquito-repelling properties. Scatter the candles in outdoor spaces within a few feet of where family and friends gather for some short-term relief.

A combination of these strategies will help minimize your exposure to these biting insects so you can better enjoy the outdoors this summer.

Three Bonduel athletes sign letters of intent

Bears to continue academics, sports competition

By KEVIN PASSON
Editor-in-Chief

Audrey Weier, Madalyn Sokolski and Cade Johnson announced in early May they will each continue their chosen sports and academic careers at the college level in the fall.

A ceremony was held in the school gym, where each announced their college plans and signed letters of intent.

Weier will attend Lawrence University to study business management and play volleyball.

"My parents have always had my back, pushing me to stay focused and work hard — even when multiple things were going on, even doing two sports at the same time," she said. "Even when I wasn't sure volleyball was my sport, my mom made sure I stuck it out, and it worked out in the end," she said.

"I'm also really thankful for my coaches who have taught me everything I know about the sport," Weier continued. "Their dedication and time should not go unthanked because putting up with moody teenage girls every day is not easy."

In volleyball, Weier was named MVP three times, earned first-team all-conference and was selected for first-team all-state.

Sokolski will attend UW-Stevens Point to continue her wrestling career and study nursing.

"My family has had the largest impact on me, not only in wrestling, but in every aspect of my life," she said. "My mother has taught me to be strong and kind to everyone no matter what, and my father has taught me to never take things too seriously. My brothers made me into the athlete — more specifically, the wrestler — I am today. They coached me and pushed me my entire career to achieve the goals I set for myself."

Sokolski also thanked her many coaches over the years.

At Bonduel, she played at the varsity levels for four sports, played in band, joined many clubs and managed the football team.

She earned her certified nursing assistant license at 16 and began working as a CNA at 17.

Sokolski received the academic all-state award three times, achieved 100 varsity wrestling wins and placed at the state tournament all four years.

Johnson will attend Ripon College to study physical education and health while also playing baseball.

At Bonduel, he earned first-team all-conference football honors as a defensive back and quarterback, was conference champion and sectional champion; was part of the first basketball team to compete at the state tournament, winning a regional and sectional championships along the way; and was part of the first Bears team to play at the state tournament, again winning regional and sectional titles.

He thanked his coaches and parents for their support.

"These coaches have taught me more than just playing a sport; they have taught me what it means to be a leader and to hold my head high when things don't go well and stay humble when things go well," Johnson said. "Also, my parents and family — the biggest supporters I have — I just want to thank them for pushing me to be my best self and helping me accomplish this goal."

Chris Rank, BHS activities director, told family, friends and coaches at the May 7 event that everyone had a great time watching the three athletes compete over the past four years.

"I know they're very dedicated, disciplined and that whatever they do, whether it be sports or in the classroom, this will not change once they move on the college level," he said.

Shawano Community High School seniors Adalyn Barkley and Madisyn Weinig announced to family, friends and coaches their college intentions at a May 14 ceremony at the high school.

Barkley will be a part of the track and field team at Winona State University, where she will pursue a degree in nursing.

Steve Stomberg, Shawano's head cross country coach, shared a few words about Barkley from her first day of practice four years ago.

"I didn't know who she was then, but it didn't take long to recognize that she was a diamond in the rough, someone who could soon make a lasting impact on our team," he said. "Her accomplishments speak volumes."

Barkley has been part of a cross country team with four straight appearances at the state meet. Along the way, she helped win the Bay Conference championship and sectional titles, and earn first-team all-conference honors.

"She does not accept defeat easily and strives for excellence, not just for herself but for her teammates as well," Stomberg said.

Track and field head coach Joel Guenther praised both athletes.

"She's (Barkley) going to graduate holding school records in the 400, as part of the 4x200 relay, the 4x400 relay and the 4x800 relay and the triple jump," Guenther said. "I think she's only scratched the surface of what she's capable of."

Weinig committed to attend St. Cloud State University to compete on its track and field team. She intends to major in elementary education.

"Shot putters, discus throwers are kind of on their own island sometimes," Guenther said. "It's been nice having someone who's dependable."

Coach Jim Heinz

praised the athletes' parents for sacrificing and supporting the girls.

"She's (Weinig) done a lot of out-of-year practicing, going to camps, separate instruction, which I promote heavily, because I don't know everything," he said. "She will excel. I'm very excited for her."

The girls will continue their 2025 seasons, with regionals and sectionals this week and the state meet June 6-7.
