Wittenberg Community Days gets underway June 7

Celebration lengthened to three days of fun for whole family

Wittenberg Community Days will expand to three days this year, June 7-9, at Washington Park, 104 Park St.

"The owners of Tri-State Amusements have been great to work with. They want to help make sure we are successful, and they want to grow this event together," said Angie Heling-Johnson, president of the Wittenberg Area Chamber of Commerce. "The expanded three-day event was a thought for awhile, and since we brought the rides back, we wanted to give adequate time to promote the carnival at our event since they travel quite a distance."

Mother Nature was also a factor in expanding the event.

"Other years, weather has been less than favorable, so with a three-day span, we anticipate we can potentially have one good day out of the three, in hopes we can make it a three out of three,"

Heling-Johnson said.

Activities will kick off with carnival rides from 5-11 p.m. June 7 with a variety of vendors selling their wares from 5-9 p.m. Night Shift will perform from 7-11 p.m.

The Lions Club will be selling their cheese curds, food and beverages, crafters and business booths, Walls of Wittenberg (WOW) mural tours, WOW emerging talents show, live music and carnival rides.

The Wittenberg American Legion Post 502 will run the food stand all weekend long.

The June 8 events begin with open vendor booths from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. and carnival rides from noon to 11 p.m. Krafts Kuddly Kritters will be open from 3-6 p.m., and face painting will be offered from 3-9 p.m. Road Trip will play from 7-11 p.m., and fireworks will be at dusk.

June 9 starts off with the Wittenberg Fire Department breakfast from 7-11 a.m. Carnival rides are again open from noon to 5 p.m., face painting is offered from 1-4 p.m., and a variety of craft vendors will be open from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The Natural Talent Polka Band will perform from 1-4:30 p.m.

"This is only the second year I personally have been involved with the chamber, so I am still a 'newbie' to the event," Heling-Johnson said. "I know last year's attendance was great, and we anticipate that each year we will grow the numbers."

The fire department will host a dunk tank fundraiser, and there will be a children's money dig at 2 p.m. June 9.

The big parade will begin at noon. All floats are welcome, and there is no entry fee. There will be prizes for the top three entries. The parade is alcohol-free.

Units will line up on College Avenue, in front of Redeemer Lutheran Church, at 11:30 a.m.

Eucharistic Pilgrimage to include Cecil parish

Catholic bishops call for revival in belief that Christ is truly present in Eucharistic bread

By KEVIN PASSON

A once-in-a-lifetime event will take place at St. Martin of Tours Catholic Parish in Cecil this summer.

The United States Council of Catholic Bishops has called for a National Eucharistic Revival, which includes a National Eucharistic Pilgrimage bringing Jesus to different cities and villages throughout the United States. Cecil is one of the stops along the Marian Route, with celebratory events scheduled for June 12.

"There are four national routes, each ending in Indianapolis in July," said Deacon Todd Raether, pastoral leader of St. Martin's. "A group of eight pilgrims will travel this entire route from its beginning in northern Minnesota. When the route was planned, it was decided they would spend the night at Camp Tekakwitha, which is in our parish. That's how we were chosen to participate."

Camp Tekakwitha is a youth summer camp of the Catholic Diocese of Green Bay, located on Lake Drive on the southern end of Loon Lake.

A core belief of the Catholic faith is that Jesus is truly present in the Eucharistic bread.

"A Pew Research Center survey showed only 30% of Catholics believe in the true presence of Jesus in the (communion) bread," Raether said. "The United States Conference of Catholic Bishops called for a revival with a Eucharistic Congress with the pilgrimage as part of it."

Raether said there are many reasons Catholics may no longer believe in the church's teaching around transubstantiation.

"There are plenty of worldly things that can push people away from this teaching," he said.

Events will begin at 2:30 p.m. with an hour of Eucharistic Adoration at the church, 407 S. Warrington Ave.

At 3:30 p.m., Raether will lead a Eucharistic procession from the church to the Retirement train arrives for Waukau

Superintendent for over 20 years, he plans to devote time to family

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

Education has been in Wendell Waukau's waking thoughts for 34 years, but when he retires at the end of June as Menominee Indian School District superintendent, those thoughts will be on a new focus — family.

Waukau has served as superintendent for 21 years. Before that, he spent nine years as principal for grades 7-12, which was preceded by time spent as a special education teacher, social studies teacher, varsity baseball coach and junior varsity basketball coach. Having been raised in Neopit, helping future generations to learn has been important to Waukau.

In 1990, Waukau was ready to put his college education to work as a social studies teacher for middle and high school grades. However, there were no social studies positions available, he said.

"At that time, they told us social studies teachers were like phy ed teachers — they were a dime a dozen," Waukau said. "I took a job as a SpEd (special education) teacher with a provisional license for the high school at Menominee, and I enjoyed it."

As fate would have it, as Waukau worked on getting a permanent license to teach special education, a social studies position opened up at MISD, because the teacher for the junior high was transferring to the elementary school. Waukau was teaching social studies, coaching, directing athletics and even serving as a dean of students, because administrators thought he might want to be a school leader someday. At that time, he said, it was the furthest thing from his mind.

However, in 1994, he found himself as a principal at the high school after his predecessor left under a cloud of misconduct. Waukau said he was put in the position to help "stabilize" the school district. Although he disliked the idea of giving up coaching to be an administrator, he said a mentor of his pointed out that he would still be coaching as a principal, but instead of influencing young minds, he would be influencing the influencers — namely, the teachers.

"Once I started my principalship, that's when things changed," Waukau said. "What really helped me was being around the kids every day."

In 2003, there were some issues at the school board level, and Waukau considered employment elsewhere. He got offered the job as principal of Shawano Community High School, he said, but the day he was driving to Shawano to sign the contract, he got a call from the school board president to delay his decision by one day.

Waukau said the school board held an emergency meeting and offered Waukau the superintendent position, as the person in that spot was a couple of years away from retirement at the time, and the board wanted to go in a different direction. He was amazed that the offer included paying for his education to get his superintendent credentials.

"The only request I made to the board was I would accept the position on one condition," Waukau said. "The board would need to allow me to work with the community, bring the community into the schools and develop programs for kids who maybe don't have that traditional path."

Waukau had his work cut out for him, as he realized that the traditional way to graduation did not always work with Indigenous students. He said the traditional being at a desk from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. was not motivating Menominee students to learn, so he sought community partnerships to help develop programs.

Waukau recalled in 2006 when the Associated Press contacted him and asked him what the solutions were, as the Menominee district had been identified nationally as a "dropout factory." He said he was "floored" at the suggestion and had to look up the phrase, which means a school that graduates fewer than 60% of its students. At the time, MISD's graduation rate was 56%.

"I started looking within, at first — within myself, within our programs," Waukau said. "We turned over rocks, and we said, 'Look, we're going to change the way we do business.'"

Since then, the graduation rates grew, with most classes in the modern era graduating at least 90% of its students.

Waukau said, looking back, the school district was dealing with a public health crisis. In 2014, the district initiated its trauma-responsive schools program; this includes working with the Menominee Tribal Clinic, which is directed by Waukau's older brother, Jerry, and tribal social services.

The trauma goes back several generations, Waukau said, with the boarding school era, along with the Menominee's termination as a federally recognized tribe. Even though the tribe's restoration took place in 1973, the inflicted pain continued for decades to come.

"There are now systems of support that we can now sustain," Waukau said.

Today, MISD has much to be proud of. Two years ago, a charter school was opened to immerse students into Menominee language and culture. Later this summer, the new Menominee Nation High School — dropping "Indian" from its name — will open with a range of options available to students.

Where other schools have classrooms for family and consumer sciences — long ago, home economics — the new high school will have a harvesting classroom, where students will be able to deal with plants and animals that become the food students consume and grow from.

"We can go back and do what our ancestors did, and not only just teach that, but to have all classes having the opportunity to work on that," Waukau said.

Three months ago, Waukau admitted he had mixed emotions about walking away from the district, even though he knew it would be in good hands. As the last month of his career arrives, though, he's feeling good about the decision.

"I'm leaving the district at a time that's good for me," Waukau said. "The district is growing. I feel like it's a good time to walk away. There's a lot less stress."

Waukau said he had no plans currently to return to the district, feeling that his time would be better spent with his family, especially his wife, Lori, who has had to sacrifice time with her husband while he catered to the learning needs of hundreds of students.

"I'm blessed, and I know the work is not done," Waukau said. "It needs to continue, but boy, to have been a part of it, I'm humble, but I'm also optimistic. I'm optimistic that the kids who are graduating today, they're going to be those adults that change our community. I'm convinced of that."

Historical plaques going up around Shawano

Shawano Has History hoping to have 20 installed by summer's end

BY LEE PULASKI
City Editor

The city of Shawano hopes to look to the future, but there are some who hope that future can be infused with some of the community's past.

Michael Oberle with the Shawano County Historical Society noted that Shawano Has History, a project more than two years in the making as part of Leadership Shawano County, has started putting up bronze plaques around the downtown Shawano area. Plaques have been installed at Franklin Park, Stubborn Brothers Brewery and Cornerstone Chiropractic so far, with Oberle hoping that 20 plaques will be affixed to properties by the end of this summer.

The plaques include information on the history of the property, a photo of how it looked way back when and, in an added touch from the 21st century, a QR code that smartphone users can use to access the historical society's website, www.shawanohistory.org, and go directly to the page that provides information on the building or site.

Ben Hartwig, left, and Michael Oberle stand next to a recently installed plaque at Franklin Park in Shawano, detailing how the property used to be a key part of the school system in Shawano, serving as a high school and later a junior high school.

"We've done (research for) almost 40 properties, and we've got plaques designed for 20 of them," Oberle said. "We keep adding."

Oberle noted that the idea of having history plaques is not a new one for Shawano, but things never seemed to line up. He said that's changing now that Shawano is in a phase of growth.

"There's kind of a resurgence and an interest in downtown Shawano," said Oberle, who noted that Shawano's business district is on the National Historic Registry.

Ben Hartwig, who went through the Leadership Shawano County program and spearheaded the Shawano Has History campaign, noted that Shawano has not had the popularity among locals and visitors that it does now.

"When I grew up, you didn't go downtown to do stuff," Hartwig said. "There was nothing to do, but now you've got all these events. You've got Franklin Park. You've got Stubborn Brothers and all of the events they have.

Now it's the place to be."

Oberle noted that research was done on plaque companies and the cost to make each plaque, which ranges from $2,000 to $3,500 depending on the size, before moving forward on the project, and then painstaking research into the history of the downtown buildings took up a lot of time.

"We called communities around the United States that have done this to talk to them about how they decided to do this," Oberle said.

Hartwig noted that a plaque is coming for the building housing The Stock Market, and two are coming for the building where Dreier's Pharmacy resides, and plenty more are on the way.

"I was at the new sorbet shop and eating in there, and I saw people reading the plaque on Cornerstone while waiting for the light to change," Hartwig said. "That's good to see."

Hartwig is looking forward to the day when there are multiple plaques up on buildings so that the people visiting Shawano for various events are aware of the community's rich history. Having the plaques also helps to promote the present-day businesses, he said.

"You get tourists here now, and you wouldn't know there was a school on this property," Hartwig said, indicating Franklin Park. "You look at the pictures, and you get to imagine how cool it was here. Some people have lived here forever and they don't know the history of some of these locations. It's good to get both the long-term residents of Shawano and the newcomers wanting to learn about the history."

One thing Shawano Has History wants to do once enough plaques are installed is to set up a passport program where the businesses have plaques might offer coupons or deals for people who check out the plaques, according to Oberle. Nothing has been set in stone, though.

"We want it to be an interactive way to learn about the history of Shawano," Hartwig added.

Trent Nolan with Nolan Signs has helped to install the plaques so far, according to Oberle. Although those plaques are permanent, the website will continue to evolve as more information comes to light about Shawano's historical buildings.

For Hartwig, the passion project has also given him the opportunity to learn about the history of his community, having lived in Shawano all of his life.

"I like hearing about all the history of Shawano — where stuff was, what it used to be," Hartwig said. "You see people looking in the windows of the buildings now, and they want to know what it was. They want to know why there's a name on the top of the building, who that person is, and hopefully that's what we bring about by having these plaques."

Although the project is primarily focused on Shawano, Oberle and Hartwig both hope to eventually expand it to other communities around Shawano County.

Veteran taking part in D-Day events in Normandy

Collicott served aboard bombed Navy destroyer during invasion

BY KEVIN PASSON
Editor-in-chief

A Keshena man will be among the American troops who will participate in the D-Day invasion in Normandy, France.

Navy veteran Vaughn Collicott, 100, will join about 70 veterans from across the United States on a trip honoring the 80th anniversary of D-Day, which will culminate in a visit to Normandy on June 6. The trip was organized by the Greatest Generation Foundation.

Collicott was a fire control technician working in the electrical center aboard the USS Meredith.

In the early morning hours of June 7, 1944, the USS Meredith got hit. The history books say the ship stumbled upon an underwater mine. Collicott believes differently, saying it was actually a German plane that hit the ship with a bomb.

Collicott said he was sitting on a stool at the time, and the explosion blew him off the stool and against the wall.

Additionally, on the History Channel Deep Sea Detectives documentary titled "D-Day Destroyer," shortly before the explosion, Collicott, manning the phones in internal control, heard personnel stating, "Here comes a plane."

The plane had no IFF signal, so it was an enemy plane. Next they heard a whistle, caused by the tail fins of an incoming bomb. The Meredith was then hit with devastating destruction which created a 65-foot wide hole.

Collicott told WBAY-TV the ship didn't sink right away; rather, it listed to the starboard side.

"When I came out, it was dark. There were four or five guys burnt black and were bleeding. One of the sailors had a Bible and a red flashlight; he was reading," he said. "And I could hear people screaming for help in the water, but it was dark. I couldn't see where they were. Now that alone is a different grieving. You want to help somebody, you don't know where they're at, but you can hear them."

Gidget Peerenboom, Collicott's granddaughter, will travel with him to Normandy, serving as his guardian as is customary on honor flights.

"We will be flying from Appleton to Dallas May 30," Peerenboom said. "The evening will be spent at a WWII-themed kickoff dinner at American Airlines headquarters campus. Celebrity chef (and Royal Navy Veteran) Robert Irvine will provide dinner, and there will be special entertainment. On Friday morning there will be a sendoff ceremony at the American Airlines headquarters followed by lunch, then it's off to Paris for three days."

While in Paris, the veterans will tour the city, visit the Eiffel Tower and take a cruise down the Seine River.

On June 3, veterans and their guardians will board a bus to the Normandy region for several more days of tours and special events, Peerenboom said.

"Then of course on June 6, we will attend the 80th Anniversary Ceremony at the Normandy American Cemetery," she said.

She said the veterans will be VIPs for the special occasion.

All will return home June 8, where Collicott and the other veterans will be surprised with a mail call of cards and letters of appreciation.

"I don't know whether I'm a hero or not," Collicott told WBAY. "I just did what had to be done."

Nearly 160,000 Allied troops landed in Normandy on June 6, 1944. Of those, 73,000 were from the United States, 83,000 from Britain and Canada. Forces from several other countries were also involved, including French troops fighting with Gen. Charles de Gaulle against the Nazi occupation.

They faced around 50,000 German forces.

More than 2 million Allied soldiers, sailors, pilots, medics and other people from a dozen countries were involved in the overall Operation Overlord, the battle to wrest western France from Nazi control that started on D-Day.

The sea landings started at 6:30 a.m. local time, just after dawn, targeting five code-named beaches, one after the other: Omaha, Utah, Gold, Sword, Juno.

The operation also included actions inland, including overnight parachute landings on strategic German sites and U.S. Army Rangers scaling cliffs to take out German gun positions.

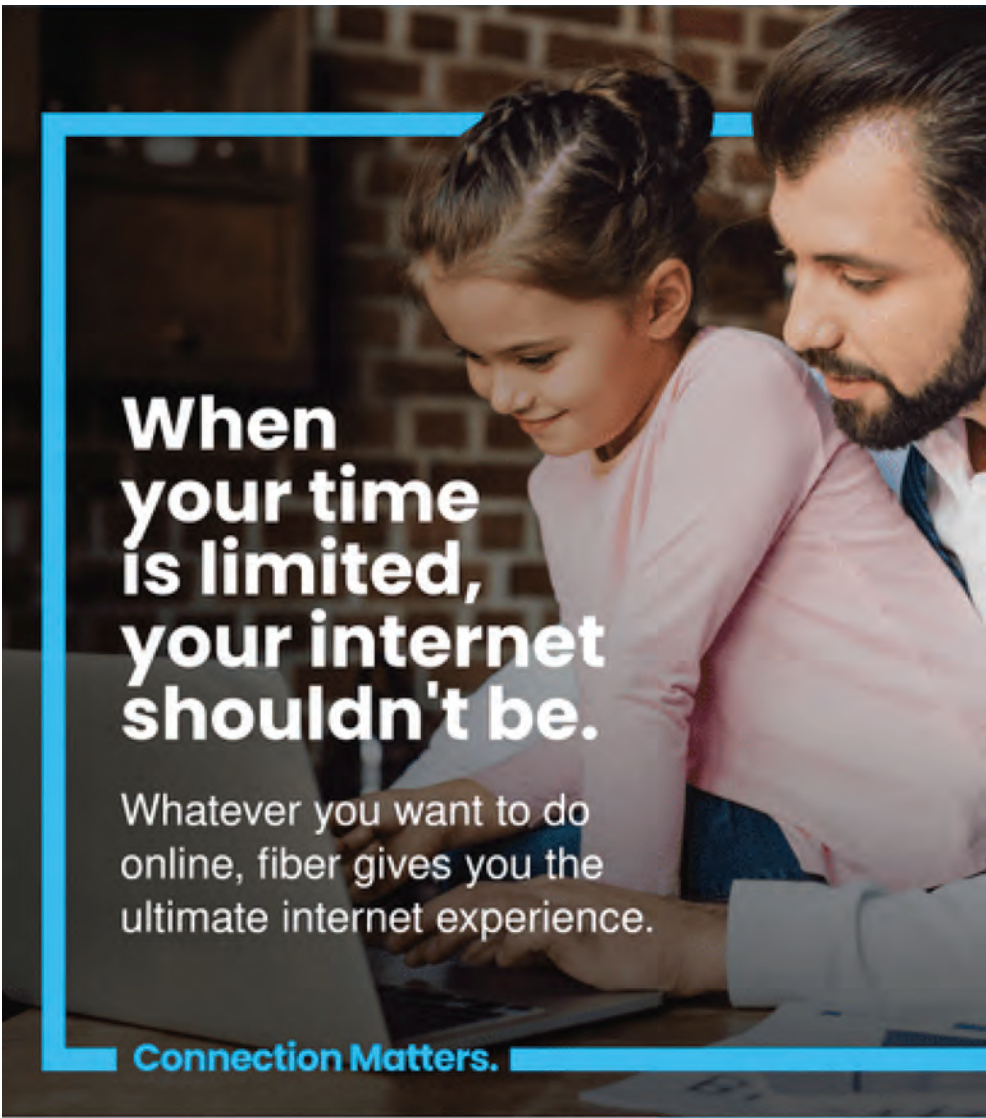

Around 11,000 Allied aircraft, 7,000 ships and boats, and thousands of other vehicles were involved in the invasion.

A total of 4,414 Allied troops were killed on D-Day itself, including 2,501 Americans. More than 5,000 were wounded.

In the ensuing Battle of Normandy, 73,000 Allied forces were killed and 153,000 wounded. The battle — and especially Allied bombings of French villages and cities — killed around 20,000 French civilians.

The exact German casualties aren't known, but historians estimate between 4,000 and 9,000 men were killed, wounded or missing during the D-Day invasion alone. About 22,000 German soldiers are among the many buried around Normandy.

OBITUARIES

Jan L. Atkinson

The earth lost a kind and beautiful soul. Jan Louise (Turner) Atkinson died peacefully at her home on May 26, 2024, in Wittenberg, at the age of 72.

A beloved mother, grandmother, daughter, sister, aunt, mother-in-law and friend, Jan's life was filled with many happy moments with the people she loved. Known particularly well for her kindness, generous spirit and tenacity, she spread love and light to many.

Jan is survived by her daughters, Ashley (Tyler) Hegewald and Nelli (Austin) Williams; her four beloved grandchildren, Grace, Mason, Evelyn and Morgan; her brother, Judd (Shawn) Turner; and two nieces, Katie Widman and Dawn (Tom) Ramerth.

She was preceded in death by her parents and nephew, Luke.

Jan was born on March 2, 1952, in Dubuque, Iowa, to Elvin "Gus" Edward Turner and Louise Helen Turner. She graduated from Dubuque Senior High in 1970 and continued her education at the University of Wisconsin-Platteville with a degree in education, later earning her master's degree from UW-Oshkosh.

Beginning in 1986, Jan and her two daughters called Wittenberg home. Jan became the librarian at Birnamwood School and Public Library. She continued there for 30 years, inspiring thousands of kids to love reading, starting the beloved Accelerated Reader program and successfully managed one of the only public/school libraries in the state — a model for other schools across the nation.

Her family remembers her as an incredibly patient and loving mom and grandma, and dear friend to many. She was always their biggest cheerleader, offering endless words of support and kindness whenever it was needed and frequently encouraging family adventures to make lasting memories for all — from the family cottage on the Mississippi to Alaska, and most recently, to Costa Rica. The grandchildren will remember her love of fishing, swimming, traveling, crafting, moose-sighting and the thousands of books she's read to them. She will be greatly missed.

In addition, Jan was very creative and had many talents. She loved to walk around town, getting her exercise. She was skilled at sewing, made incredible homemade bread, jam and dried herbs, and had a beautiful garden she enjoyed spending time in. She loved to fish, and one of her happiest places was fishing for bluegills with family and friends on her beloved Mississippi.

She loved giving back to her community through volunteering with the retired teachers network and making special gifts for family and friends. She loved going to the "Y" and being part of the amazing group of cancer survivors in the LiveStrong program. She lived her life with many mottos, including "Find something to celebrate every day" and "Because I can!"

A celebration of life will be held at 11 a.m. on June 20, 2024, at Redeemer Lutheran Church in Wittenberg, with a luncheon to follow. Pastors Peter Gunderson and Nick Hopman will officiate the ceremony. Visitation will be held from 9-11 a.m. All are welcome to attend and celebrate Jan's life.

Schmidt and Schulta Funeral Home is assisting the family with arrangements. Memories and messages of support may be shared at SchmidtSchulta.com.

In lieu of cut flowers, please consider a contribution to a memorial scholarship fund or flower bulbs so the family can plant them in their gardens to remember Jan. The family would like to thank the cancer care team at Weston Marshfield Clinic for their care throughout her journey.

so they have an idea on the number of entries.

There will be 50/50 raffles held each day and night.

A raffle with five chances to win is also part of the fun. There are a limited number of tickets available at $20 each.

Tickets are available at Refuel Nutrition, Shops on Grand LLC, Lisa's at Lakeside, Inspire Nutrition (Marion), All Aboard Nutrition (Shawano), Caroline Motorsports LLC (Caroline), Rachel's Roadside Bar and Grill, and T & C Lanes. Several individuals also have tickets.

First prize is a Polaris Sportsman 450 four-wheeler. Second prize is $1,000 cash, with $500 for third, $300 for fourth and $200 for fifth.

The drawing for winners will be 5 p.m. June 9 at Washington Park and live on Facebook. Winners need not be present.

"This event is ran mostly off of donations, we do not make a substantial amount of money off of the event itself," Heling-Johnson said. "The chamber hosts this event and partners with other organizations so we can all benefit from such a great community event; that's why we decided to add in a raffle this year. We are looking to expand our events and entertainment within our community and surrounding areas; therefore, we need to have a raffle to raise a larger amount of money in a shorter time span in order to reach our future goals."

Wittenberg Community Days is sponsored by the chamber with participation from several other community organizations.

"We are currently in the process of unveiling what our plans are for the proceeds. We can't share just yet, but we can ensure that it will be a benefit for the community," Heling-Johnson said. "We do have future plans to host movie in the park, a run/walk and other events that will enhance our all ready amazing community."

shores of Shawano Lake at Cecil Village Park. Shuttle buses will be available to take pilgrims back to St. Martin's Parish Hall for a picnic-style dinner.

After boarding a boat at the park, Raether will lead a flotilla-style procession around the shores of Shawano Lake, ending at a private dock on the north shore about 5 p.m.

Boat procession participants are also invited to St. Martin's for the picnic meal, which will continue until 7:30 p.m.

"The public is invited to attend any of the events; however, they should only plan to either walk or bring their boat," Raether said. "The logistics of trying to provide boat transportation to the walking pilgrims is simply more that we can provide. All in all, it promises to be a special event."

Boaters are encouraged to decorate their watercraft with festive flags and banners; political banners and flags are not welcome.

To ease congestion at the Cecil boat landing, consider launching from one of the many public landings on Shawano Lake. Launch fees will apply. There are landings at Swan Acre Drive, Stark Road and Shawano County Park.

To ensure there is enough food for all, registration is encouraged and may be completed online at www.stmartin-cecil.org. Raether is planning on a picnic that will feed 300 people.

The Store in Shawano to close its doors in July

BY KEVIN PASSON
Editor-in-chief

The Store convenience stores and gas stations are set to close following the declaration of bankruptcy by Mountain Express Oil Co., the company that owns its buildings and land.

This includes the convenience stores at 404 E. Green Bay St., Shawano, and 100 S. Rosera St., Lena.

The Store will end operations as of July 31, according to a press release from parent company Team Schierl Cos.

The Store entered into an agreement with Mountain Express to purchase its land and buildings in 2022. Mountain Express took ownership of land and buildings while The Store maintained all operations, including equipment, inventory maintenance, finance, employment of all associates and collaborations with local vendors.

Mountain Express initially filed for voluntary protection under Chapter 11 bankruptcy in March 2023 with the intention of achieving a comprehensive restructuring to strengthen the company's fuel distribution business, dealer network and retail business.

The company later converted to Chapter 7 bankruptcy and officially ended operations in August 2023.

"As of May 7, 2024, The Store has been notified that the property investment company will not be extending its current operational agreement," according to a news release from The Store.

The Store has 25 locations in Wisconsin and Michigan.

Crawford retires from TimberPro

Timber industry leader leaves decades-long legacy of innovation, generosity

After seven years as president of TimberPro, Lee Crawford has announced his retirement.

This draws to a close Crawford's nearly 40 years in the forestry machinery business, during which he consistently exemplified entrepreneurial spirit and a caring attitude.

Pat Crawford, Lee's father, was a third-generation logger whose company — Shawano-based Timbco — had become known for its popular line of levelling machines. But Lee Crawford never planned on entering the forestry industry, becoming an engineer at the Oshkosh Truck Company in 1982.

In 1985, however, his father asked him to join the family business at Timbco, where he started on the assembly line.

"It gives you credibility with your people," Crawford said. "And you learn the products. You learn what needs to be changed."

After his assembly line shifts ended, Crawford kept working, ordering parts and writing warranties.

Crawford eventually became vice president in 1992. In 2000, Timbco was sold to Partek, a Komatsu-owned company. The Crawfords bought back the wheeled division from Partek in 2002 to form TimberPro, which became recognized for its innovative track machine products. TimberPro was acquired by Komatsu in 2019.

Crawford considers everyone he works with his "TimberPro family." Patrick Anderson, product supervisor, joined TimberPro at its founding, and called Crawford one of the most compassionate people he knows.

"As vice president of the company, he went to fix a valve all the way out in South Dakota on Christmas Eve," Anderson said. "He's family first, but he still goes out of his way to make sure you can spend time with your family."

Joe Hardwick, vice president of New Hampshire-based logging company D.H. Hardwick and Sons, has a similar story to tell.

Two days prior to a logging expo in 2010, the engine of his machine died prematurely. The manufacturer wouldn't help because the warranty had expired just a few hours prior. Hardwick met Crawford at the expo and told him what happened to his machine.

Crawford, shocked that the company had done nothing, told Joe, "I will get you a new motor at no cost to you. The only thing I ask is the next time you buy a machine, you give ours a try."

Hardwick has remained a TimberPro customer since, and calls Crawford a "great mentor."

In retirement, Crawford plans to stay involved in charitable giving with the Ruth and Pat Crawford Foundation, which has donated millions over the years to community organizations and food pantries.

While the TimberPro family is sad to see Crawford go, the legacy of the Crawford's ingenuity and generosity will continue with Komatsu at the helm.

"By taking Komatsu's strengths and combining it with TimberPro's, we can be a leading supplier. We're really excited about the future," said Doug Morris, vice president, Forest Machine Business Division at Komatsu.

Crawford feels safe leaving his companies in Komatsu's hands.

"Komatsu wants TimberPro to grow. Komatsu has the means and ambition to plan and grow our offerings over time," he said. "My family was comfortable. Komatsu has the drive to get bigger and bigger and bigger. It's going to be exciting."

Tribe urges discussions about mental health, addictions

The Menominee Tribe of Wisconsin Drug Addiction Intervention Team (DAIT) is encouraging the community to take the opportunity to begin conversations about mental health and addiction.

"It is not unusual to have mental health issues contribute to addictive behaviors or substance abuse," said Addie Caldwell, DAIT co-chair and director of wellness programs at Maehnowesekiyah Wellness Center.

"When we open ourselves up to the conversations around mental health, we can help people find resources and solutions before moving to harmful actions."

In 2022, the Menominee Tribe issued an emergency declaration about the epidemic of drugs and addiction. Since then, tribal and county programs and departments have teamed together to identify and assess challenges and problems and then collaborate to provide valuable and needed resources and programs to the community.

Resources available on the reservation provide assistance and guidance to individuals and families facing mental health situations, addiction, substance use, recovery and more.

"Unfortunately, not everyone is willing to talk about these types of issues, sometime because they feel ashamed of what's happening," said Ben Warrington, DAIT co-chair and emergency management coordinator. "But hiding in shame doesn't help and can make it worse. That's why we're encouraging everyone to talk about it and do something about it."

Mental health and substance use resources available within the Menominee Reservation include:

- Maehnowesekiyah Wellness Center: 715-799-3835.
- Menominee Tribal Clinic: 715-799-3361.
- MITCAAP/Recovery Coaches Hotline: 715-972-3280.
- Menominee Tribe Family Services: 715-799-5161.

• Menominee County Human Services: 715-799-3861.

"Everyone is going through something — battling their own stressors or worries," said Caldwell. "Talking about those concerns in a safe and comfortable environment can create a healthier and happier home, work, school and social life for everyone. We have to join together and get this out in the open."

For additional services available within the reservation to assist with mental health, addiction or substance use, visit the Menominee Nation website at www.menomineensn.gov and click on the Community tab.

NCAC growing, reaching out more in Oconto County

On May 15, over 50 people met at the Lakewood Town Hall to share a meal and celebrate the formal introduction of Northwoods Community Assistance Coalition (NCAC).

NCAC is a group of local volunteers and health care providers in Wabeno, Townsend, Lakewood, Mountain, Suring and White Lake with the goal of helping those in need. The foundation for this group was laid over four years ago in 2020 when the COVID-19 pandemic hit.

Into the void stepped a cadre of volunteers in northern Oconto County. Led by Lakewood Nurse Practitioner Peggy Christianson, their efforts reached multiple communities. They made over 8,000 cloth masks, some of which were shipped as far away as Saudi Arabia. They delivered meals, provided transportation, and furnished whatever they could to support those in need.

NCAC has expanded its reach, drawn in more and more volunteers, and relied on the generosity of locals who contributed badly needed funding. They continue to provide meals, rides, and temporary financial assistance in emergencies. They built wheelchair ramps, installed handrails, and loaned medical equipment to facilitate safe mobility. Some mobilized an effort to adopt local restaurants, purchasing take-out meals and buying gift certificates that would provide critical income during those dark days.

The NCAC is in the process of becoming a 501(c)(3) which is essential to securing grants to further its mission. The group has lofty goals with bigger projects in the planning and development stage.

Volunteer forms are currently available at Bellin and North Lakes clinics in Lakewood, by email at ncac4u@gmail.com, or by visiting Northwoods Community Assistance Coalition on Facebook.

Teaching lodge constructed at CMN

Facility available for college classes, community teaching opportunities

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

The College of Menominee Nation is constructing a teaching lodge on its Keshena campus in hopes of reconnecting with the past and using its knowledge to help students move into the future.

During a presentation May 28, CMN President Chris Caldwell described the lodge as a resource to continue the teachings of the Menominee people.

"We need to have this teaching lodge for interns, students and the community," Caldwell said. "We all need to take responsibility for properly putting up this teaching lodge and advance the purpose of the college with this in mind."

The project was taken on through the college's Sustainable Development Institute at the request of faculty members and former SDI director Tom Kenote, according to Rebecca Edler, SDI's sustainability coordinator.

"We needed a place on campus that would be like a cultural space for our faculty and community members, artists, crafters — any individual that wants to do some sort of teaching for our students and the community," Edler said.

Menominee Tribal Enterprises provided to CMN the saplings used to form the framework for the lodge, according to Edler, which is being constructed with the supervision of community member Mary Webster. A number of community members and almost a dozen SDI interns are making the project a reality, Edler said.

"It's really nice because they can bond and they can meet each other over the construction of this teaching lodge," Edler said, noting the lodge will be 20 feet wide by 40 feet long. "It's being made by hand. There are no electric power tools."

The framework is almost complete, but the SDI is working to figure out what the covering will be made from, if it will be canvas or some other material, according to Edler. Covering it will allow the lodge to be used in any weather, even extreme heat or heavy rains, she said.

Edler noted that tribes like the Menominee "have different buildings for different purposes. This lodge would be for teaching. It would not be for ceremonial events. That would be constructed similar to it, but the purposes would be different."

In accordance with cultural teachings, the main door will face east toward the rising sun. Having an elder like Webster advising while the building is going up also is prescribed in Menominee culture, Edler said.

Webster previously helped with constructing a similar teaching lodge years ago with Maehnowesekiyah Wellness Center located between Keshena and Neopit. She noted that lodge was used by community members and elders to teach things like gardening.

"We're going to have sessions in here, groups," Webster said. "It's something that our relatives did in the past. It's a part of our culture, so our students are learning, as it's the first time they're constructing a teaching lodge."

Even with the work that's being done, the interns are having fun as they're getting to know each other, Webster said.

"The goal is to learn through experience. It's part of their culture," she said. "It's a whole different feeling when you're out in the elements versus in a building. If someone's going for a walk, they're connecting with nature and everything that's around us. They're learning about what our relatives did in the past."

Interns like Jeremiah Moses were eager to see the lodge completed, but taking part in the process is also fun.

"It's a really good thing bringing back our ancestors' traditions and the way that we're learning with each other," Moses said. "It's honoring our ancestors and honoring ourselves, as well."

This is the fourth summer Moses has interned for SDI, but it's the first time he's started off an internship like this, he said.

"It really helps build a good sense of community between interns and students and other school workers," Moses said. "I would say there's definitely a learning curve. We had to redo one of the support poles, because this is the first time we're doing anything like this."

Caitlyn Katchenago, another intern, is also enjoying the work going into making something culturally significant for the Menominee.

"I've never done it before," Katchenago said. "It's really calm and peaceful. It's nice to be able to work with my community members, and I feel so connected to the earth and my ancestors. I mean, they had to do this without all the tools that we have, which is amazing."

The work has gone very well, according to Katchenago, and even when challenges and obstacles have come up, she and the rest of the team have found a way to get past it and move forward.

"I feel like all of us are really fast learners, so it's going very well," Katchenago said. "We've had a couple of places that weren't so well because there's rock underneath, but other than that, it's going very well."

Machickanee Players announce new season

The Machickanee Players has scheduled their 41st season, and it includes two comedies and one drama to be presented at the Park Avenue Theatre, 408 Park Ave., Oconto.

The first, to be presented in October, is the comedy "Escanaba in da Moonlight." Written by Jeff Daniels, it is about hunting and its traditions in Upper Michigan. The Soady family, consisting of father Albert, sons Reuben and Remnar, and friend Jimmy Negamanee, go to their hunting camp, hoping that this is the year that Reuben, now 43, will finally get his first buck. The show will be directed by Jackie Kapla. Auditions will be held in June or July.

February will see the drama/romance "84 Charing Cross Road." New York City bibliophile Helene Hanff writes to the London Bookshop Marks and Co. in search of some titles she has not been able to turn up locally. Store manager Frank Doel responds politely to her chatty letter, and over the course of two decades, a deep, long-distance friendship evolves. "84 Charing Cross" is based on a true story and will be directed by Cathey Nelson.

The final show of the season will be the comedy "Keep On Laughing." The sequel to the well-received "Exit Laughing," it picks up the story of the original characters, but now Connie's daughter is married to her stripper boyfriend, and they're expecting twins. Connie, Leona and Millie have been touring the world and having the time of their lives, returning to tell hysterical stories of their adventures.

This time, one of those adventures has gotten out of hand. Level-headed Connie has met a man in Paris, and he's proposed to her. Everyone should be happy, but Rachel and Bobby are not, as Connie's new boyfriend is the same age as Bobby. The original cast and director will return.

Performances are held at 7 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays, with the Sunday matinee starting at 2 p.m. Dates will be announced.

Friday and Saturday shows offer dinner, catered by the Wooden Spoon on Main. For this option, choose Add Ons when ordering tickets.

The Sunday matinee has the Add On option of a piece of pie.

Tickets are available at www.machickaneeplayers.com.

Corn planting is well underway in May in Shawano County, even as the sun sets.

FARM LIFE FROM A FARM WIFE

Farming deeply rooted in Wisconsin life

From little on, because of my farming roots, I've always been mindful of what the sky is doing. Dad gave us kids the job of watching the weather report. Back in the day, we didn't have weather apps on our phone, much less have a mobile phone. We had a telephone attached to the wall with a rotary dial and couldn't even use it until one of our chatty neighbors got off.

Plunking ourselves in front of the TV, we'd tune into Channel 2 at 6:15 p.m. to catch the weather report in real time. One day it was my turn and I missed it. When Dad inquired, I hemmed and hawed and flat-out lied, "Partly cloudy!" figuring there would be a 50-50 chance it very well could be partly cloudy. Did he catch my red-faced lie and call me on it? Nope. Although I'm pretty sure he had a notion. Silent guilt speaks louder than words.

He'd figure when to cut hay depending on the weather. Three or four good sunny days in a row would be perfect for cutting, drying, side-raking and baling small-square baled hay that we'd have to hoist off the wagon onto an elevator and up into the barn. A lot of the hay harvested on our family farm though, was chopped dry hay, blown onto the barn mow floor in huge mounds. To feed cows, we'd fork it out through the hay chute down into the carts below.

One day, my older sister went up to throw hay down and thought she smelled something funny. Sticking her finger deep into the mound of hay she quickly withdrew it. It was so hot her finger burned. Running down to tell Dad set in motion fire trucks who flew out to our farm, lights flashing. Many, many neighbors came to help. Bringing their three-tined forks and rakes, they pitched hot hay out of the barn doors. The fire fighters doused the hay, drenching the glowing embers quickly before it festered into a full-blown blaze.

Columnist

The neighbor ladies brought food and gathered in our kitchen, serving it up to the workers along with plenty of water. There was action all over the place.

My sister's quick thinking — by first of all, knowing something wasn't right and secondly, calling for help — saved our barn that day. I'll never forget the stench of wet, smoldering hay. I can't even imagine my dad's frame of mind; he must have been torn, grateful our barn was salvaged yet sick at heart with all that work for nothing.

The farm I grew up on was on a dead-end road. Whenever anyone came down our driveway it was specifically to see us. We'd have regulars — the milk man, the artificial inseminator (until my dad took classes, then he took over breeding), occasionally the vet would stop and a farm service truck would pull in when we needed repairs on milking equipment.

Us kids would be outside playing and run to the barn when the AI guy came, as with a mischievous grin, he'd sprinkle baby powder across our bare toes. Oh, the simple joys of a kid on the farm.

Marrying a farmer and continuing to watch the sky, I greatly appreciate June Dairy Month, which honors farmers and their inexhaustible efforts, putting in long, grueling hours to bring food to tables across the land. With high-powered tractors and massive machinery, farmers work way past sundown, especially during planting and harvest seasons.

Back in the day, large equipment wasn't a necessity, because farmers owned and worked small family-owned dairies with land mostly surrounding their farms, so didn't require much road travel.

Most people don't mind the troublesomeness of sharing the road with these monstrosities. I've seen cars pull way over, letting the farmer take up more than his share of the road. Before planting always comes the season of spreading liquid manure. If you want to clean out your sinuses, inhale a good whiff of farm-fresh, country gold as its being spread.

A while back, a farmer friend of ours wanted to sell a parcel of his hunting land. The potential buyers were from the city and requested part of the field attached to the parcel he was considering not be spread with manure so that when he drove to his land and back home he wouldn't smell up his garage. Needless to say, the deal fell through.

Talking with our friend that day, he exclaimed, "I wonder how they think food gets on their table?" I gather the inconvenience of what it takes to grow crops is too much for some.

From childhood to adulthood, my farming roots run deep. Want to eat today? Thank a farmer and honor June Dairy Month.

("As the rain and the snow come down from heaven and do not return to it without watering the earth and making it bud and flourish so that it yields seed for the sower and bread for the eater, so is My word that goes out from My mouth. It will not return to Me empty but will accomplish what I desire and achieve the purpose for which I sent it." Isaiah 55:10-11)

Kay Reminger was born and raised on a dairy farm, and she married her high school sweetheart, who happened to farm for a living in Leopold. Writing for quite a few years, she remains focused on the blessings of living the ups and downs of rural life from a farm wife's perspective.

Trilliums blooming hardcore in northeast Wisconsin

The trilliums are coming.

Indeed, these traditional, heirloom wildflowers are beginning to bloom throughout Wisconsin, including large numbers right here in our area.

I enjoyed trilliums at a number of locations recently. Large-flowered trilliums are now in bloom at locations along the Wolf River and rich woodlands throughout Shawano, Oconto, Waupaca, Marinette, Outagamie, Menominee and Brown counties, as well as other locations.

Trilliums can be identified by their three-part leaf structure, as well as their classic, well-known, three-part bloom.

The most common variety of trillium now in bloom is the large-flowered trillium. Large-flowered trillium can be highly variable in size.

Some may only be a few inches tall, while others may reach almost a foot in height. Flowers also vary in size from just a couple of inches to nearly 5 inches across.

Large-flowered trilliums bloom in pure white. As they age and mature, their petals begin to blush in a beautiful shade of rosy pink, becoming almost purple before they fade away to brown and disappear.

Mature clumps of large-flowered trilliums may contain a dozen or more blooms. Left undisturbed, these clumps grow larger and larger.

Trilliums, like many

Trilliums are colonial by nature and, if left undisturbed, will form large masses of blooms. ROB ZIMMER of our native spring and summer wildflowers, remain in constant danger as development continues to destroy the woodlands and forests they call home. Even a small woodlot may be home to thousands of trilliums if undisturbed.

In some locations, massive colonies of large-flowered trilliums can be seen — boasting hundreds, if not thousands of flowers.

Other varieties of trilliums found in Wisconsin include: the prairie trillium, which blooms in rusty red; the wake-robin or upright trillium that blooms in bright, cardinal red; the tiny snow trillium, with blooms barely larger than a quarter; and the nodding trillium that features blooms that are suspended beneath the three-part leaf umbrella in a nodding fashion.

Enjoy the awakening of the trilliums over the next few weeks as they continue to bloom until the canopy flushes out overhead.

NEW Media's news editor is about to retire. We seek talented journalists who can seize someone's attention by being a talented wordsmith and photographer in a fast-paced news environment where digital comes first.

The news editor candidate would spend much of the time covering Oconto County, although occasionally a story could take them to Shawano County or Menominee County. The editor also works with freelancers to help out with additional stories when needed and seek out potential writers to add to the papers' richness.

While the office is a base of operations, we want someone who'll be out in the community gathering the news. All are welcome to apply, including recent or pending college graduates. Photography and copy editing skills are a must. Experience laying out pages is also helpful, but we can train in-house.

Send a resume, cover letter explaining why you want the job and four to six samples of your work to editor Kevin Passon at kpasson@newmedia-wi.com.

The determination of the American citizen

America is a melting pot of different cultures and individuals. Being a citizen of America can be seen as one of the most desirable things to many people in this world, and there is a good reason for that. Our country is renowned for the freedoms and incredible forms of expression that many other countries do not offer. To me, being an American citizen means being able to have the opportunity to accomplish anything you dream and working hard to better the place we call home.

In America, many think of the core values being freedom, wealth and independence. Although these are the most common ideas of American values, everyone has their own opinion on what America means to them. For the family business owner, it might be wealth and independence, but for the first generation immigrant, it might be equality, freedom and opportunity.

In my life, I see the American values of freedom and opportunity the most. As a young female American citizen, I can see that the opportunities I have in this country are some that I might never experience in other places. I have the ability to go to school, own a home, participate in sports, and even further my education with a bachelor's, doctorate or masters' degree. I benefit every day from my schooling, and it will guarantee me a future that many others are not fortunate enough to have.

In America, people are able to work hard and achieve success. Although success is defined in different ways, everyone is given a chance at theirs. Time and time again, we can see that American values shape the way we achieve our ambitions and define what it means to be an American citizen for each and every individual.

Americans are always striving for a better country. Whether it is the various presidents who have introduced new policies to make our country safer, or the different groups that work to preserve the land, Americans always work to better themselves and their country. So much effort is put into simple tasks like cleaning our highways or passing school referendums. These things have a common theme; progression and teamwork.

During both World Wars, Americans rallied together to conserve materials for the war at their own expense. Even though no one liked rationing food or having to grow their own gardens, they came together to support their country.

Another example of the way American people came together in support was during the Space Race era. Every person in America comes from vastly different backgrounds, but the one thing that was guaranteed to unite everyone was the joint goal of putting a man on the moon. The support of the entire country plus an estimated 400,000 individuals worked to help the moon landing become possible. In the end, an American man took his first steps on the moon.

America had accomplished a goal that everyone else in the world was working toward. We knew that we wanted to be the first country to land on the moon, and by working together, we were able to advance. Progression drives American ideals and fosters the hope of tomorrow. We live in a country where change is possible, and American citizens are the ones who work to make it a reality.

Millions of people around the world would sacrifice so many things to be a citizen of the United States of America. In the words of Gerald Ford, "We are bound together by the most powerful of all ties, our fervent love for freedom and independence."

Our country is not perfect, but we as American citizens see the hard work of many past generations, the determination of the present and the optimism of the future. We are able to see the things we want to be done and work diligently to achieve them. In turn, this fuels our country and is what makes it so desirable.

Ultimately, I believe that no American citizen is identical, but we all share the common prospect of seizing our opportunities and bettering the country we love.

Makenna Bubolz is finishing off her junior year at Shawano Community High School. This essay received an honorable mention and $500 cash award from the Gerald R. Ford Presidential Foundation 2024 Student Writing Challenge.

Supporting kids' mental health within our grasp

When people ask me what a major barrier is facing individual Wisconsin students today, I don't have to think hard to come up with an answer — support for their mental health.

On a visit last year to a school in southwest Wisconsin, several students told me their school is doing the best it can to support their mental health needs, but there just was not enough staff to go around. As a result, students who needed help couldn't get immediate access to support unless it was an emergency. Students also spoke about their friends and their own need for supportive mental health services. There wasn't a student in the room who wasn't paying rapt attention to their friends' stories, many nodding along.

It's common sense that if we support kids' health, including their mental health, they will be in a better position to succeed academically. I also want to say this bluntly — schools should only rarely have mental health emergencies to respond to. We can and must prevent these emergencies by investing in positive mental health.

At the Wisconsin Department of Public Instruction, and in school districts all around the state, educators know how much a student's positive mental health can set them up to thrive academically,

Jill Underly
Guest columnist

socially, and societally. We see the impact every day.

Strong students make for a strong Wisconsin.

Students who feel accepted, have strong, positive relationships with classmates and teachers, and those who have the support of their families and communities, can thrive. It's our collective responsibility to make sure that, when something is wrong, we have systems in place to help our students emerge stronger than ever. Otherwise, we all pay the price.

Lately, I'm sure you've heard Wisconsin students are struggling with their mental health, and the numbers have been mounting for years. The pandemic has exacerbated existing challenges, and we see the downstream effects on things like attendance rates. School is much different in 2024 than it was decades ago, and so are the needs of our kids.

It doesn't have to be like this. We have the know-how and the resourcefulness to address students' mental health needs and improve youth mental health outcomes in Wisconsin.

Many Wisconsin communities are already investing in innovative strategies to promote student and staff wellbeing, and the DPI is doing what it can to support students' mental health. In collaboration with other experts, the department developed the Wisconsin School Mental Health Framework, which is helping guide schools in developing comprehensive school mental health systems.

It's simple — our students and our schools need more from us.

Kids are experiencing record highs of anxiety and depression. The data shows it. The kids themselves have told us that they need help, and they need more school resources. Schools are doing what they can with the financial constraints they have. This past biennial budget provided an estimated $31 per student allocation to school districts and independent charter schools. No, that is not a typo.

This is not a "want." Our schools need investment in comprehensive mental health systems. They need it so learners can thrive both academically and personally, in school and when at home or out in the community.

You can't fix problems by ignoring them, doing nothing or trying to wish them away. Our students know this. Our educators know this. At heart, Wisconsiners, inspired by the values of fairness and progress, know we can do better.

Every person in every school community must be equipped with the knowledge and resources to support students' positive mental health. That means not just school professionals, but parents, community members, family and friends, and even students themselves.

We all have a pivotal role in understanding the importance of positive mental health, and knowing what we can do to support kids. We need to move from crisis mode to prevention mode, creating the positive change our learners and our state deserve.

The upcoming biennial budget process presents a crucial opportunity for our state to get it right. I will continue advocating for more state support to address the urgent needs of our kids, and I encourage you to join me.

Wisconsin's most important resource is the potential of its children. When we support healthy child development and promote positive mental health, we invest in their ability to contribute fully to our communities.

Jill Underly is Wisconsin's superintendent of public instruction. She took office in 2021 and has more than 25 years of experience as a local superintendent principal, and teacher.

Shawano's No. 1 doubles team of George Buerman and Tristan Sheldon headed to the Nielsen Tennis Center on the UW-Madison campus May 30-31 to compete in the WIAA State Tennis Tournament. The Hawks were looking to improve on last year's results.

Buerman and Sheldon had a first-round matchup with Quinton Maddox and Mouneth Venigalla of Sun Prairie United. The Hawks notched an impressive win of 6-2, 6-2 against a challenging Sun Prairie team.

This punched their ticket to May 31 and the second round, in which the Hawks had to face the No. 2 seeded Plymouth doubles team of Owen Plate and Jaren Baltus, who were 29-0.

Shawano came out hot and took the first game only allowing on score by a talented Plymouth team. The Hawks won one more game in the first set before getting overpowered by a very talented doubles team.

In the second set, the Hawks battled to 3-2 and had a chance to pull even. The strong serving and power of the Plymouth team were too much, and the senior season came to an end for Buerman and Sheldon.

The Hawks had one of the best performances of the tournament against Plymouth, coach Matt Zoll said.

Shawano's doubles team of George Buerman, left, and Tristan Sheldon won their opening round match of the WIAA state tennis meet at Nielsen Stadium on the UW-Madison campus. Their season ended with a loss in the second round May 31.

"It was great to see Lily in the 3,200 and Grace in the 800 finish out their high school careers with strong finishes. Our relays ran times that were not quite as fast as they ran at sectionals in order to reach the state meet but still were the second-fastest times ever run by teams from Shawano Community High School."

May 30
Bay Port 4, Pulaski 1
Bay Port defeated Pulaski 4-1 to claim the WIAA regional crown. Pulaski was seeded No. 6, and Bay Port was the No. 3 seed.

The Red Raiders, who were 11-7 and finished in fifth place in the Fox River Valley Conference, ended the season with a 14-12 overall record.

May 29
Bonduel 1, Wittenberg-Birnamwood 0
For the second day in a row, Bonduel waited until its last at bat to score the only run of the game.

This time, Easton Reinke led off the bottom of the seventh inning with a double. Then, after an intentional walk to Brodie Hartmann, Karson Stoss stepped up to the plate to get the game-winning hit. Stoss smacked a single to right center and scored Reinke from second with the only run of the game, a 1-0 regional title win over Wittenberg-Birnamwood.

Cade Johnson and Chris Sippl both threw outstanding games and matched zeroes unto the seventh.

Johnson pitched all seven innings, giving up three hits. He walked two and struck out 10.

Sippl pitched 6 1/3 innings, giving up one run and three hits. He walked two and struck out six.

Johnson struck out the side in the top of seventh to set up the Bonduel rally in the bottom half of the inning.

Reinke and Hartmann had doubles for the Bears, and Stoss had the game-winning single.

Nate Waupekenay had two hits for the Chargers, and Ian Salvesen had a single.

The Bears advance to sectional play June 4 with a 21-3 record.

Three Lakes/Phelps 7, Lena 3

The Wildcats were in fifth place with a 5-7 mark in the Marinette & Oconto Conference and were 9-9 overall.

May 28
Bonduel 1, Oconto 0
Brodie Hartmann tripled to lead off the bottom of the sixth inning and scored on a sacrifice fly by Karson Stoss, and that was all Bonduel needed to pull out a win in their WIAA regional opening game.

Noah Weier and Devon Bostwick matched scoreless innings through three innings, and then Bostwick left with an injury. Riley Susa joined in the fun and held the Bears scoreless until the sixth when Bonduel got on the board.

Weier threw a great game and gave way to Cade Johnson to finish the seventh inning for a save.

Kyle Bowman and Joey Bailey had Oconto's two hits.

Bonduel had five hits and three were for extra bases. Colin Margelofsky and Beckett Hartlaben doubled and Brodie Hartmann tripled for the Bears.

Bonduel (20-3) advances to play Wittenberg-Birnamwood on May 29.

Wittenberg-Birnamwood 5, Coleman 0

The Chargers shut out Coleman 5-0 to advance in regional action.

Wittenberg-Birnamwood started with a 2-0 lead after the first inning, then scored one in the fourth and two in the fifth.

Owen Dickman and Zandy Barke each hit 2-for-3. Dickman and Ian Salvesen each had a double in the game.

Nathan Waupekenay had two RBIs, and Connor Mevenden had one.

Waupekenay was the winning pitcher, giving up only two hits in seven innings while walking two and striking out six.

Lena 10, Wausaukee 8
Lena scored four runs in the top of the seventh, and then held on as Wausaukee scored one in the bottom of the inning, to win 10-8 and advance in WIAA regional play.

It was a back-and-forth game from the beginning.

Lena led 1-0 after the first half inning, but Bonduel's Beckett Hartlaben waits for the pitch before taking off for second base as Wittenberg-Birnamwood's Owen Dickman is anxious for the ball. The Bears won the regional title with a 1-0 victory, with the run coming at the last at bat.

TINA BACON

Chris Sippl, a junior at Wittenberg-Birnamwood High School, lets loose another pitch against Bonduel in the regional title game May 29. Sippl pitched 6 1/3 innings, giving up one run and three hits. He walked two and struck out six.

TINA BACON

Wausaukee took the lead 2-1 in their half of the inning. Lena bounced back with two runs in the second inning to lead 3-2, but then Wausaukee scored three in their half of the inning and led 5-3.

Neither team scored in the third, but Lena added a pair of runs in the fourth to tie the game at 5-5.

Wausaukee's two runs in the fifth put them on top 7-5, while Lena's run in the sixth made it 7-6.

That's when Lena opened up for four runs in the seventh inning to lead 10-7. Lena's final run in the bottom of the inning ended the scoring at 10-8.

Lena will travel to Three Lakes/Phelps on May 29 for a sectional matchup.

CORRESPONDENTS

NEW Media is looking for correspondents to help with every aspect of our information efforts. We're looking for the following:

- NEWS CORRESPONDENTS: With limited staff to cover government meetings, community events and other things taking place in Shawano, Oconto and Menominee counties, we're looking for people who like to track down news, write stories and take photos to keep locals informed. If you have the interest but not necessarily the skills to write stories, we can provide you with training through the Wisconsin Newspapers Association to help you learn how to be a top news hound.
- FEATURE CORRESPONDENTS: While hard news tends to dominate the papers, we occasionally get to showcase the brighter side of northeast Wisconsin, especially Shawano, Menominee and Oconto Counties. From incredible volunteers to brilliant authors and artists to theatrical productions and so much more, we want to show it all. Feature writers who are good at photography grab a lot of attention online and in print, and the area has plenty of talented people in the shadows that we hope to bring into the light.
- SPORTS CORRESPONDENTS: We're looking for sports writers interested in covering games in Shawano, Menominee and Oconto counties. These correspondents might also be asked to cover things like college signings and player features. We cover more than a dozen high schools in the area, and writers who can report a game fairly and accurately while producing jaw-dropping action photos can go far with us.

Send a cover letter describing your interest and writing/photography samples, if available, to city editor Lee Pulaski at lpulaski@newmedia-wi.com.
