Witt-Birn's school taxes to drop 71 cents in 2025

School board passes $15.7M budget for the new year

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

The tax rate for the Wittenberg-Birn-wood School District will be dropping 71 cents as the school board signed off on a $15.7 million budget on Oct. 28.

The current tax rate is $7.29 per $1,000 of equalized valuation, which means the owner of property worth $200,000 can expect to pay $1,458 in school taxes for this year. The district originally thought that the rate was going to drop to $6.95 at its annual meeting in August. Once the district got the final property values from the state in October, the drop will actually be 9.7% to $6.58.

However, the lower rate does not translate to lower taxes overall due to the property values increasing.

Superintendent Garrett Rogowski said the general fund for the 2024-25 school year is up about $50,000 from last year.

Capital projects are expected to total around $1.3 million, according to Rogowski. Among some of the planned projects are roof replacement at Wittenberg Elementary-Middle School, which is expected to cost $85,000. The planned renovation at Wittenberg Elementary was budgeted for $1 million, but Rogowski expects the project will come in under that. There is also $200,000 budgeted for heating system replacement at both elementary schools, but Rogowski noted that might only require control work now.

Underly seeks universal free meals at schools

School leaders like concept but some wary of financial impact

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Jill Underly is proposing that the Wisconsin Legislature put an end to charging families for school lunches and breakfasts as part of the 2025-27 biennial budget.

Currently, one of four Wisconsin high school students said in the 2023 Youth Risk Behavior Survey that they were hungry due to lack of food in the home. Underly's proposal would cost nearly $294 million to expand access. Currently, free meals are only provided to low-income families, with some just above the threshold paying a lower price for the meals.

"Access to food is one of the most basic human needs, and yet many Wisconsin kids are telling us they don't know when — or if — they will have their next meal," Underly said. "When we make sure all our kids are properly nourished, we are nurturing the leaders of tomorrow. My budget proposal makes sure that every kid, no matter their background, has access to the nutrition they need to succeed at no cost."

Underly's proposal would also do the following:

- Fund school breakfasts at a reimbursement rate of 15 cents per meal. This would also be expanded to independent charter schools, residential schools and residential child care centers, which is expected to cost $6.1 million over the two-year period.
- Provide full funding for school milk programs so more students can access milk at school, which is expected to be funded with $458,900 in the next two years.
- Create a new grant program to allow schools to purchase milk coolers or equipment to convert to bulk milk dispensers. This would cost $150,000 during the budget period.
- Create a new program encouraging school districts to buy directly from local farmers and producers to bring in fresh, high-quality food for their meal and snack programs. There's a $10 million price tag attached to this caveat.

The universal free meals proposal got a thumbs-up Oct. 30 from Kristie Feffer, food service director for the Gillett School District. Feffer has been working in food service for 11 years, and she noted that the district spends a lot of time working with families who cannot afford school meals.

"In my experience, a lot more kids ate when we could provide free meals," Feffer said. "There was a time before I was the director when I was required to deny students lunch because of outstanding balances. I felt so guilty that I went in and paid balances so I could make sure kids ate."

Feffer recalled that the federal government provided funding for free meals during the COVID-19 pandemic, even when students couldn't be in school, and more children were eating. That funding expired a couple of years ago as the pandemic wound down.

Feffer's enthusiasm for free meals was seconded by Nathan Hanson, Gillett's superintendent. An educator for 25 years, Hanson recalled working in another school district that contracted with a collection

Lions Club presents boy, 7, with snowmobile

As an infant, first grader in Gresham contracted meningitis, had both of his hands and feet amputated

By KEVIN PASSON
Editor-in-Chief

Landyn Harrison was awestruck when the Gresham Lions Club presented him with a MXZ120 Ski-Doo snowmobile Oct. 28.

“He cried and was overwhelmed,” said Landyn’s dad, Jason Harrison. “It was a big surprise for him. After the initial shock wore off and he realized they had done this for him, you couldn’t get him away from the machine.”

Landyn, a 7-year-old first grader at Gresham Elementary School, contracted bacterial meningitis when he was 9 months old, which resulted in him having his hands and feet amputated.

The snowmobile will have gas and brake pedals retrofitted for Landyn, as well as a steering wheel to accommodate him.

“I’m sure as soon as we get some snow, he’ll want to get out there and go,” Jason Harrison said.

Heart-wrenching diagnosis

Harrison vividly recalled July 3, 2018, when his wife, Codilou, called him and said Landyn wasn’t feeling right. He was cold despite it being in the 80s that day.

A trip to the hospital in Shawano led to a diagnosis of a double ear infection and medication. When he was given the medicine the following morning, he promptly vomited it back up, which led to another trip to the hospital and more medicine.

“We (he and his wife) talked for a few minutes and decided we needed another opinion,” Harrison said. “We went to the emergency room at Aurora in Green Bay. By then, he was getting dehydrated, and they ran a bunch of tests. We were told, ‘We don’t know what’s going on, but we know you aren’t going home.”

He was transferred via ambulance to St. Vincent Hospital, which has a pediatric intensive care unit. Harrison said a doctor felt the top of Landyn’s head and determined a spinal tap was needed. Fluid surrounding Landyn’s brain had caused the soft spot on his head to bulge outward. Landyn’s oxygen levels dropped significantly, and he was placed in intensive care.

“You don’t know what’s all going,” Harrison said. “He had ice packs on his body, a 105-degree fever and his limbs had turned purple.”

On the night of July 5, Landyn had a seizure, and the following day he was airlifted to Children’s Hospital in Milwaukee.

Dialysis was necessary, but doctors warned the Harrisons that the machine would pull the blood out so quickly, it could kill Landyn.

“We decided to go with the treatment; we had to,” Harrison said. “He did fine. The next day, doctors were calling hospitals all across the country for help.”

While the Harrisons wanted everything possible to be done to save their son, they didn’t want doctors using Landyn as a guinea pig for experimental treatments. Those feelings led a heated conversation with medical staff.

On July 8, the Harrisons were told this would be Landyn’s last day. Doctors had done everything they could. His heart rate had dropped to 34 beats a minute. Nothing more could be done to speed that up, and it would slowly get lower.

Without an explanation, his heart rate began to reverse itself the next day. Then, more bad news.

“His hands and legs had turned black like you see if you have frostbite,” Landyn’s dad explained. “There were becoming hard and shriveled up.”

Then Landyn caught chicken pox.

“We were told he had less than a 1% chance of survival,” Harrison said. “The last time he went to his neurologist, she cried because he isn’t supposed to be like he is. The whole top layer of his brain is gone, but he’s just like any other 7-year-old.”

Landyn’s hands were amputated at the wrists, and his feet were amputated about halfway up the shin.

Landyn is now a happy first grader who is learning to use his prosthetic hands and legs.

Modifying the machine

Harrison worked with Tim Bosman and his Gresham High School students in making adjustments to the snowmobile so Landyn can ride and steer it.

“We’re going to make the gas pedal and brake pedal side by side like in a demolition derby car,” Harrison said. “I’m not sure what we’ll do with the steering wheel yet, but we’ll make it safe for him.”

The machine travels at speeds of about 5-13 mph and can be adjusted toward the low end as Landyn gets used to it.

“It’s really one of his favorite things to do,” Harrison said. “It won’t be long and he’ll be asking me if we can go out.”

When Landyn rides with his dad, the two of them cruise around their two-acre yard. Landyn has been riding with this dad since he was 5.

The snowmobile was purchased by the Lions Club, which held a raffle (250 tickets at $20 each) with prizes valued at more than $2,300.

Codilou Harrison works with Gresham Lion Raymond Rigsby at Gresham School. During a break last school year, she mentioned to him that her son told her he wanted a snowmobile.

Rigsby spoke with fellow Lion Dan Huntington; both are members of the Tilleda Sno-Riders Snowmobile Club, and the two decided to present it to the Gresham Lions Club as a service project.

The Gresham Lions Club quickly jumped on board and put the project as a budget item for the year. Rigsby initiated a raffle to raise money and awareness.

There were 15 chances to win with the grand prize of $1,000.

Club members aren’t stopping there, though. Members are actively preparing for their 65th annual fish derby on Jan. 25, 2025, at the Lions Shelter, W10821 Upper Red Lake Road, Gresham. The day will be full of food, beverages and raffles in a heated shelter with live music by DriveWest starting at 4 p.m.

Commission OKs permit for graphics company

Rogue Graphx to expand with additional building on Waukechon Street

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

Rogue Graphx received a favorable recommendation Oct. 30 from the Shawano Plan Commission to add a new building to the existing property at 814 Waukechon St.

Jarrett Bryzek, the owner for Rogue Graphx, is going through the process of getting a conditional use permit for the new building, which is required in any areas zoned as light industrial.

The new building is considered to be a group development under the city code, which requires a permit. The plan commission was the first hurdle for Bryzek, but the permit must still get final approval from the Shawano Common Council when it meets Nov. 13.

Bryzek said the building is needed because the business has really taken off since he purchased it in 2022, even with expanding the existing building over the winter months of 2023.

“About 10 minutes after we finished that, we outgrew it,” Bryzek said to the commission. “We’ve already got some land to the northwest that we already have that’s not being utilized at all.”

Rogue Graphx was previously B&J Graphics, which was formed in 1998. Bryzek noted that it was still a “mom and pop operation” when he purchased it, but it has exploded into a major player in graphics, listing how it does the detail work for all the fire engines and box trucks for Marion Body Works, firetrucks for Seagrave, police squads for Oshkosh and more.

“Currently, we are traveling each day for onsite installations throughout Shawano, Clintonville and Marion,” Bryzek wrote in his overview sent to the city. “This cuts into our work time, is hard on our employees and shaves some profit from our bids. With the proposed additional building, we will be able to do approximately 90% of all installs in house with client’s delivery (of) their fleets to us.”

The proposed building will be 3,000 square feet with a wood frame and steel sided on the interior and exterior. There will be 16-foot internal height ceilings, insulation and three large overhead doors. The building will act as a staging area for large trucks and fleets that will also protect vehicles and workers from the elements.

“We’ve gotten to the point now where we’re offsite so much, whether at Marion Body, Seagrave’s or whatever, let alone municipalities — we do garbage trucks — we’ve gotten to the point now, just this week, where Oshkosh P.D. has 10 new squad cars and they had to bring them one at a time, because we can only fit so much in our building,” Bryzek said.

He added that the vehicles are already outfitted with cameras and all the other necessary equipment for law enforcement, and leaving them out in the open is not desirable.

According to Bryzek, Rogue Graphx works on 10-15 vehicles in a given week. He said that the additional capacity will allow him to immediately hire more installers to keep up with the demand.

Besides the building itself, Rogue Graphx will install a paved entrance apron of at least 20 feet via Waukechon Street into and out of the gravel road and driveway. Bryzek estimates the building could be finished by the end of the year, weather permitting.

“We don’t plan on working in that building consistently, but it will get worked in,” Bryzek said. “We’ve got a plow truck that needs to get stored. We’ve got equipment like scissor lifts and things like that we’re currently stepping over in our current space, so we need the building.”

Wolf River Habitat executive director retiring

Mark Flunker attaches Tyvek HomeWrap to a new home being built by Wolf River Habitat for Humanity in Gresham on one of his last days as construction supervisor for the Shawano-based housing ministry. Flunker retired on Nov. 2 after 10 years with the organization. The Gresham home is being built for a couple with three children, who are investing 500 of their own sweat equity into the property.

Flunker oversaw construction, more during his 10-year stint

BY LYNN ZAFFRANN
Correspondent

Mark Flunker saw four new homes built and three remodeled during his 10-year stint with Wolf River Habitat for Humanity in Shawano. He retired on Nov. 2.

As construction supervisor, he oversaw and coordinated Habitat's home building activities, and served as the executive director.

"I was with Habitat for 10 years as of Oct. 15," Flunker said. "I probably could have retired in May when I turned 65, but because it would be 10 years in October, I waited."

The last house he was involved in building, the 19th overall for Wolf River Habitat since it began in 1998, is currently being built in Gresham.

In addition to new homes, Flunker worked on three houses that were moved from one location to another.

"They're done with moving houses now," he said.

According to Flunker, by the time a house was torn apart and rebuilt, it was just like remodeling a house. He said it's a lot easier to build a new house.

Kevin Culhane, president of Wolf River Habitat, said that Flunker has worked on housing for eight families.

"His construction crew is pretty dedicated," Culhane said.

"I've spent a lot of time with these guys," Flunker stated. "They work a lot harder than some of the guys I paid to work for me when I was in business."

He attributed part of that to the age of his volunteer construction crew, and noted that they are men in their 70s, with one being 80.

Recently, volunteers from ThedaCare and Little Rapids helped on the new Gresham construction.

"Mark has a particular skill to tolerate beginners, mentoring them. He definitely set people up for success," Culhane said.

Flunker, who has lived on Shawano Lake for 43 years, came to Habitat with the perfect experience for the construction supervisor job.

"I did 12 years of remodeling. I owned Sandy Drive Remodeling," he said. "Before that, I worked 20 years at Hillshire Farm in New London, doing all sorts of utility work."

Flunker's replacement will be responsible for continuing his success in working with Habitat families, employees and volunteers. Overseeing the entire home building process, including budget, permits, plans, material procurement and coordination of volunteer and subcontractors is a large part of the job description.

Flunker was looking toward retirement. He said that the Habitat operation has grown so much, that he really didn't have time to do much else.

"It's a good time to retire," he said. "Time to get some fishing and hunting in."

Flunker might still volunteer with Habitat down the line, if needed.

"I told them that I need some time off after Habitat, but I'm sure that I will probably volunteer there," he said, noting that he might help out with demos and building ramps, where he will only be dedicating a day or two to that work, with some supervisory responsibility.

Culhane said Wolf River Habitat is looking for a new construction supervisor.

"We're looking for someone who has the patience to mentor and will promote the Habitat mission," Culhane said. "That's what Mark has pretty much done in the community, to promote that mission."

Flunker gave some words of wisdom for the new construction supervisor.

"If you work with the volunteers, they work with you really easy," he said.

Interested applicants can send a resume to info@wrhabitat.org with the subject "Construction Supervisor." For more information, call 715-524-3007 or visit www.wrhabitat.org.

Shawano School Board adopts budget, levy

All numbers will be affected by Nov. 5 referendum

BY KEVIN PASSON
Editor-in-Chief

Residents at the annual meeting, and then the school board in special meeting immediately thereafter, approved budgets and levies dependent on whether the Nov. 5 building referendum is passed by voters.

The $51.23 million proposal would address maintenance, efficiencies, repairs and updates at all four schools, as well as athletic facilities.

If the referendum is approved, the school district will move forward with a 2024-25 budget of $46,111,950, tax levy of $13,725,690 and a mill rate of $6.24 per $1,000 of equalized value.

If the referendum is unsuccessful, the budget will total $45,560,412, the tax levy will be $12,473,415 and the mill rate would be $5.67.

Bryan Kadlec, director of finance and business office manager for the district, said the board had to pass two resolutions because of the timing of the referendum. He said state law requires the levy and mill rate be set before the end of October, but with the referendum not going in front of voters until Nov. 5, the board needs to have both plans in place.

"Once we certify the election results, we can move forward with the appropriate paperwork," he said.

A successful referendum will mean the tax levy will remain the same as 2023-24. A failed referendum will result in a tax levy decrease of 8.13%.

General fund revenues in 2024-25 will total $34.2 million, and expenses will total $34.7 million, leaving a budget shortfall of about $550,000.

"At the conclusion of 2023-24, we designated fund balance to cover about $530,000 of one-time expenses," Kadlec said. "So, what we're projecting at the conclusion of 2024-25 is that the unassigned fund balance just goes down by a little bit."

The state-imposed revenue limit increased to about $26.7 million and includes a declining enrollment exemption.

"The other big piece of this is the private school voucher aid, which is over $1.6 million," Kadlec said. "While it looks like our revenue limit went up by quite a bit, this $1.6 million does not touch the district. As soon as we receive it, it goes out immediately as an expense."

The revenue limit is partly driven by a three-year average of the resident pupil count, which dropped from 2,202 last year to 2,190 this year.

The 2024-25 levy includes funds for existing debt service payments.

With this new levy and money already received for debt payments but not spent, the district intends to pay off all existing debt if the referendum fails. It will have then money freed up to make capital improvements that need to be done whether the referendum passes or not. Chief among those improvements is replacing the roof at Shawano Community Middle School, Kadlec said.

“Particularly with the Wittenberg middle school, that’s where we’ve had more of our control issues,” Rogowski said. The food service fund had $50,000 more in expenses, $705,000, than in revenues, but Rogowski said the $50,000 is going toward replacing an industrial dishwasher for Wittenberg Elementary. “Overall, I feel pretty confident that we’re in pretty good shape,” he said of the budget. The district tax levy approved is around $5.8 million, which is a less than 1% increase from last year’s levy. Of the $6.58 rate, $3.69 goes toward the general fund, and 31 cents pays for the district’s community service fund. The remaining $2.58 goes toward repayment of debt, which for Witt-Birn means the 2019 referendum. “We levied $25,000 less in Fund 80 (community service) this year because our nature center budget is healthy this year,” Rogowski said. “In addition, we’re logging two of our three schools, and all of that revenue will go toward expenses at the nature center.” In other good news, the district learned its student count, which is taken the third Friday in September each year, has increased again from 1,157 to 1,174. The more students a school district has, the more funding it will receive from the state to offset local property taxes.

agency to recover outstanding meal balances. He said this had to be done because any negative balance in the school's food service fund had to be offset with general fund money, which is used to pay for teachers' salaries and curriculum.

"The state passed some pretty extensive reading reform legislation, and it sure would back up that commitment if we could ensure every kid in the state never went hungry while at school," Hanson said. "It is a struggle for hungry kids to learn how to read."

Hanson noted that the proposal would help to connect other education proposals that would improve learning for all children.

"My hope is that the state considers funding for school lunches and breakfasts, but I also hope they give strong consideration to the idea to raise state funding for special education to 60%," Hanson said. "Imagine the commitment to education that could come out of this next legislative session: We want to provide support for the children in our state who have the greatest needs by providing better funding in special education and ensuring that no child will ever have to try to learn while hungry. That would be a commitment I would be proud to support."

Garrett Rogowski, Wittenberg-Biramwood School District superintendent, was supportive of the free meal concept like Hanson, but he stopped short of fully endorsing it due to questions about funding that he thinks need to be answered before it becomes state policy.

"For example, what is the plan to make this program sustainable beyond the biennial budget?" Rogowski said. "Is she suggesting that free lunch for all students be the responsibility of all taxpayers, or is the current system of free and reduced lunch reimbursement working acceptably for those families that struggle to meet these basic needs? Additionally, I'm not sure what the full Bowler Elementary School students line up for breakfast Nov. 1 in the school cafeteria. About 91% of Bowler's student population qualify for free and reduced meals, including lunch, but the Wisconsin Department of Public Instruction is looking at making all school meals free for students.

reimbursement rate per meal would be under this plan and whether or not it would cover the full cost of providing the meals."

Glenda Butterfield-Boldig, Bowler School District superintendent, was equally skeptical about whether the district's finances would be better off with universal free meals. She noted that funding for breakfasts would bring in $2,600 to her district, and funding the milk program would bring in another $700.

However, that funding pales when compared to the $70,000 Bowler has budgeted to transfer from its general fund to keep food services solvent, according to Butterfield-Boldig. Without further details from the Wisconsin Department of Public Instruction, she's concerned about whether her district would have to relocate other funding to make the mandate of universal free meals possible.

"This deficit is not new, but our district has not experienced it in the past three years do to the influx of federal dollars in response to COVID," she said. "The state did not provide any additional funding for public schools when the federal government announced the ESSER funds, so now we are truly experiencing the fiscal cliff across in every aspect of our budget, not just in our food service."

Bowler currently is part of DPI's community eligibility provision program, which allows the district to offer free breakfast and lunch to all students already. According to Butterfield-Boldig, Bowler receives $2.84 for each breakfast and $4.50 per lunch for the economically disadvantaged students, which make up 91% of the student population, while the remaining 9% brings in 39 cents per breakfast and 52 cents per lunch.

Butterfield-Boldig noted there is one part of the program, specifically the milk coolers, that she considers a positive.

"We will need to replace the milk cooler within the next few years, as it's getting pretty old. So if we could get help with that, (it) would be appreciated," she said.

Kurt Krizan, Shawano School District superintendent, favors the universal free meals program, because it would ensure more students have access to food during the school day and eliminate the shame of being low-income and getting meals without cost.

"During COVID, when all student meals were free, we saw 500 more students eating breakfast and 400 more students eating lunch," Krizan said. "Besides the increase in meals provided to students, this invest would remove the stigma associated with free or reduced paid lunches and would provide access to nutritious meals for all students."

The Hawks won on scores of 25-23, 25-23, 25-17.

Beginning at 10:30 a.m. Nov. 8 at the Resch Center in Green Bay, No. 2 Luxemburg-Casco will take on No. 3 seed St. Thomas More, followed by No. 1 Catholic Memorial and No. 4 Shawano.

The Bears won the right to compete at the Resch Center in Green Bay with a 3-0 sweep of Cedar Grove-Belgium for the sectional championship in Brillion.

"The win tonight was a total team effort," coach Abby Krull said. "The trust they had in themselves and each other to go out and play fearlessly and aggressively was so fun to watch. I am so happy for the girls and excited they get the opportunity to represent Bonduel at the state volleyball tournament."

Set scores were 25-11, 28-26, and 25-23.

Bonduel started out really strong in the first set, taking an early lead and winning convincingly. Sets two and three were a very close, back-and-forth battle the whole way. Bonduel's balance offensively was a key to the match.

Audrey Jacobs contributed 10 kills, hitting .555 with no hitting errors.

Juliana Jacobs contributed nine kills. Setter Jayla Reinke had 38 assists and six digs. Marlie Hartmann contributed behind the service line, scoring 10 service points.

Gary Gurnee, left, a Shawano artist, discusses the techniques he used to create his "4th of July" multimedia painting with Austin Stickney, a 15-year-old Shawano Community High School student, attended Gurnee's one-man art exhibition at the Mielke Arts Center in Shawano on Oct. 26. Stickney is an aspiring artist, who has shown his work at Mielke fairs.

Gurnee sets sail with new art exhibit at Mielke

Longtime Shawano resident became hooked on boats when in Florida

The work of local artist Gary Gurnee was featured at the Mielke Arts Center in Shawano on Oct. 26.

Called a "Sail-ebraction," the one-man show highlighted Gurnee's fondness for using sailboats in his art, in addition to many other paintings with various themes.

His multimedia artistic creations will remain on display in the Mielke's lobby until at least Christmas.

"Everything I have is a one-of-a-kind, because they are hand-painted," Gurnee said about his works displayed at the show.

One of the paintings shown at "Sail-ebraction" will be a permanent addition to the Mielke Center.

"I bought a picture of Gary's for the arts center's collection," said Cheryl Folkerts, a member of the Shawano County Arts Council and the Box in the Wood Theatre Guild.

"When I was talking with Gary at the Art Fair in July, I asked him if he'd like to do a one-man show," Folkerts said.

That became the "Sail-ebraction."

Gurnee, 80, will show more of his art at the annual Merry Mielke Art and Craft Fair, which is scheduled for 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Nov. 9.

"People will be shopping for Christmas," Folkerts said, as she encouraged Gurnee to bring some of his smaller pieces to sell that day.

Folkerts and Gurnee discussed how it's very hard for an artist to be self-supporting.

"Most of my life, this was a sideline," Gurnee said.

"Most people have art as a hobby, unless you have a gallery here that you can always use," Folkerts added. "We've talked about that. Shawano could support that now, with all of the businesses that could sponsor it and be a patron of the arts."

Gurnee said a real estate agent approached him and said he had a space available that would be suitable for a gallery.

"I had to tell him that at my age, I don't want to start something like that," Gurnee said.

There are so many talented artists in the Shawano area who could benefit from this type of gallery, according to Gurnee.

"I would support one, throw in my two cents," he added.

Liz Allie, one of Gurnee's children, provided a biography of the artist, which was hung on the lobby wall along with the pieces he brought for the show. She created the tagline "Sail-ebraction."

His granddaughter, Morgan, also attended the show.

"She is into art and came with me to the Peace through Art sessions at Peace United Church of Christ when she was just 4," Gurnee said.

The Peace Through Art sessions allowed artists to get together and discuss what they were doing. It was described as a place where peace of mind could be found through the creation of art.

Gurnee created and painted Plexiglas windows for the church that look just like stained glass.

Gurnee's artistic career started in Appleton, where he grew up.

"Where I really got excited and started doing it was at Appleton West High School, where the art teacher was really into art," Gurnee said.

He said that he enjoyed the teacher, who took students to Milwaukee to tour the Milwaukee Art Museum. The teacher encouraged him to apply to Milwaukee's Layton School of Art. Gurnee said that he was among nine students out of about 300 who made it through the curriculum to graduate from Layton in 1968.

After earning a teaching certification, Gurnee taught K-12 art classes in the Freedom Area School District for four years. Following that, Gurnee moved to Florida.

"I lived in the Tampa-St. Petersburg area for four years. I ran a big art studio. It had 18 artists," he said.

Gurnee became interested in painting sailboats when he was in Florida.

"My wife's brother had a twin keel, so we could sail around, and we went to the islands around there," Gurnee said. "That's where I really got interested, after seeing all of the beautiful and different boats."

One of the works at the show is called "4th of July." Gurnee painted vibrant fireworks above a yacht basin filled with sailboats. At the show, he took time to talk with a young student from Shawano Community High School, Austin Stickney, about how he created the picture, which incorporated tissue paper into the work.

Stickney, a 15-year-old student with an artistic gift, met Gurnee for the first time at the show. He said he usually paints with acrylics, sometimes with oil.

"I learned to paint mostly from my grandparents, who taught me how to paint — and my aunt," Stickney said.

Gurnee has lived in Shawano with his wife, Bonnie, for 50 years.

Ledfoot Larry coming to Keshena

Performer brings rock, country vibes to his music

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

Some people are a little bit country, while others are a little bit rock 'n' roll.

Ledfoot Larry doesn't quite fit into either category. He's done both genres and doesn't plan on settling snugly into either one.

Whether you like one type of music or the other, it'd be a good bet that Larry's concerts Nov. 15-16 could be entertaining when he hits the Spirit Island Lounge at Menominee Casino Resort, N277 State Highway 47-55, Keshena.

Larry started as a solo artist in 2014 in St. Paul, Minnesota, before getting together a band in 2017. He's made a name for himself in Minnesota and Wisconsin, performing at festivals, street dances, rodeos and more in both states. However, that name he's made is not the name his parents gave him, Lorenzo Michelutti, which he noted was one that, in his view, did not make for an attention grabber in the music industry.

Larry's played rock 'n' roll for years, he said, but whenever he got into his vehicle, the radio dial moved toward stations playing Willie Nelson, Waylon Jennings, Kris Kristofferson and other country legends. He noted his performance of cover songs and his own hits tend to circle around the 1990s style. That tended to swing his performance interests toward country.

"I remember telling my wife at the time, 'I think I want to do country. I love country,' and she said, 'Well, that makes sense,'" Larry said. "I couldn't go out there with 'Lorenzo.' It just didn't scream county or Americana."

The first part of the name, intentionally misspelled, can be attributed toward Larry's penchant for racking up speeding tickets, he said, as well as enjoying Led Zeppelin's music growing up. The name had to be some-Ledfoot Larry is a St. Paul, Minnesota-based musician who likes to blend rock and country tunes in his concerts. He'll bring his songs over to Keshena when he performs Nov. 15-16 at the Menominee Casino Resort.

#LanguageBack poetry event coming to CMN

Poetry personifies the power of the spoken word. It weaves ideas into cathartic messages that spill out from the page, connecting people to one another across time and space. As Dr. Kimberly Blaese states, “Poetry is both ‘affective’ and ‘effective’ — beautiful as language, but does something in the world.”

A citizen of the White Earth Nation, Blaese is a past Wisconsin Poet Laureate as well as the founding director of Indigenous Nations Poets, known colloquially as In-Na-Po. An emeritus professor at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee, Blaese is a decorated poet, photographer and scholar, and she will be part of a workshop held at the College of Menominee Nation’s Keshena campus on Nov. 9.

According to their website, In-Na-Po is a national Indigenous poetry community committed to mentoring emerging writers, nurturing the growth of Indigenous poetic practices and raising the visibility of all Native writers — past, present and future.

The site additionally states, “In-Na-Po recognizes the role of poetry in sustaining tribal sovereign nations and Native languages,” which is the reason Blaese and others will be hosting a workshop for Indigenous poets.

Funded in part by the Wisconsin Humanities, with funds from the National Endowment for the Humanities, the In-Na-Po #LanguageBack workshop “centers on writing poetry that incorporates Indigenous languages and tribal teachings.”

“We both learn and teach Indigenous languages through poetry writing and performance,” says Blaese. “Because the language carries important teaching — environmental, spiritual and subsistence teaching (among others) — using the language in poetry can also carry that traditional Indigenous knowledge into the world at a time our planet desperately needs it.”

CMN will host the first of three workshops held in various tribal communities this fall. Each welcomes “Indigenous language learners of all levels to participate in a one-day Indigenous language and poetry workshop with the guidance of Indigenous language experts, community members and poets.”

In Keshena, Richard Oshkeshequoam (Menominee Indian Tribe of Wisconsin) and Brock Schreiber (Stockbridge-Munsee Band of Mohican Indians) will provide guidance to the poets in attendance using their respective languages.

Oshkeshequoam says, “Any chance we have to use our language offers a chance to grow in our knowledge of what it means to be Menominee. The words contain many lessons, and I’m honored to be a part of this project creating art centered around them.”

Schreiber adds, “Most of us are immersed in English every day, from schools to media to our workplaces and social spaces. The more spaces where the Mahican language is present, the quicker it becomes a normalized part of everyday life, creating more opportunities to inspire and engage future speakers.”

Throughout the day, participants at the In-Na-Po event will have the opportunity to take part in Indigenous language lessons, delve into the world of Indigenous poetics and discuss how language and poetry intersect, as well as write their own poems inspired by those teachings in CMN’s newly renovated Shirley Daly Hall.

Filmmakers Dusan Harmic and Overpass Light Brigade founder Lane Hall will be on hand to capture participants partaking in activities, as well as conduct interviews for a larger film project. The inclusion of the filmmakers means that poets will have the opportunity to appear on camera reading and discussing their work. In-Na-Po produced a similar film for a 2023 event in Door County.

The day will conclude with a community dinner and a reading in which participants will have the chance to discuss and celebrate new language knowledge and the work they created. All meals throughout the day will be provided, and poets will receive gifts that help keep the day’s inspiration vivid long after the gathering concludes.

“We hope participants will have fun creating work in their tribal languages and be inspired to continue,” says Blaese. “I will edit an issue of ‘Yellow Medicine Review’ in the spring, devote a segment to Indigenous language writing and hope to include poetry from workshop participants. Through the film and publication, we will share participants’ writing with a larger audience.”

Indigenous poets can register for the free event on either CMN or In-Na-Po’s websites or various social media accounts. The event will begin at 9:15 a.m. and conclude after the 5:30 p.m. reading and meal.

Considering the passion of the teachers and the power of Indigenous languages, In-Na-Po’s visit to CMN will be further proof of poetry’s ability to both affective and effective right here in Northeast Wisconsin.

thing that made sense for him and wasn’t just cooked up for no sensible reason.

“I wanted it to still be me,” Larry said.

Larry has two albums out with a third in the works. His first, “Smooches Gracias,” came into existence as he was partying one night with friends and, at the end of the night, instead of saying “muchas gracias,” the Spanish expression for “many thanks,” it came out “smooches gracias.”

“They’re all like, ‘What?’” Larry said. “I was like, ‘Yeah, that’s dumb,’ but I never forgot it, and for some reason, I was compelled to use that title, and I’ve had nothing but positive affirmations about it. Everybody thought it was funny.”

AT A GLANCE

WHO: Ledfoot Larry
WHEN: 8 p.m. Nov. 15-16
WHERE: Menominee Casino Resort, Spirit Island Lounge, N277 State Highway 47-55, Keshena
ADMISSION: Free

The first song on the album is called “Sunday Morning Light” and was done as a tribute to Kristoferson, according to Larry.

“After I wrote that song, it was really something that kicked me off,” he said. “I said, ‘I want to do country music, but I also want to write country music, too.’”

“Smooches Gracias” is, in Larry’s view, more Americana than straight up country or rock. Larry veered over to the country side of

“There was really more honky-tonk influenced style of tunes but still showing my nod to ‘50s and ‘60s pop and country of that era,” Larry said. “I was definitely influenced by Elvis.”

Larry said the album he’s currently working on will definitely have more of a balance between rock and country. He noted that performing and creating music is a natural instinct for him.

“To me, a wolf must hunt, and a musician must music,” Larry said. “I also feel like, when you play often, it also works as practice. Practice never makes perfect, but practice always makes it sound better.”

Hair today, gone tomorrow with head follicles

My great-grandson we nicknamed CEO got his first haircut last week during a family trip to Disney World. He will be a year old in December and is one of the most adorable toddlers on earth. Lest you think I am biased on agenerational basis, he is my bonus great-grandson, so genetics don't factor into the equation. As the fourth child in the family, he might have been treated like an after-thought by his older siblings, but they dote on him so he gets into their business with impunity.

Aside from a happy-go-lucky personality that's usually on full display on his smiling face, one of CEO's most noticeable features is his hair. He was born with a full head of it, thick, black hair that has turned light brown as he's racing through his first year on earth. Until last week, it was long and curly and shiny, causing him to be routinely mistaken for a girl. Au contraire, he is all boy, as people of my generation like to say. He's now sporting a mullet, a 1970s hairstyle coming back into popularity. Apparently, everything old is new again, whether we liked it or not.

Seeing the photos of that first haircut on Facebook, I started thinking about my hair. It's always been fine and thin; statins and age haven't helped. My stylist, Barb, does the best she can, but there's literally just so little to work with. Judicious use of hair products does help a bit, but I love wearing hats, which are really the best solution for this vexing problem.

According to Wikipedia, hair is a protein filament that grows from follicles found in skin. It is one of the most defining characteristics of mammals, often used by people to indicate personal belief, social position, age or gender. Since time immemorial, humans have been obsessed with these strands of fibrous filament that cover our bodies, especially the ones that grow on our heads.

Proof is that hair has long been the subject of literature and legend. Eve used her long tresses as clothing in the Garden of Eden. Cleopatra shaved her head but donned a black wig to seduce Mark Antony. Leah fooled Jacob into marrying her by covering her face and tricking him into consummating their marriage when he mistook her hair for that of his beloved Rachel. Delilah did in Sampson by cutting off his long curls. Lady Godiva, seated upon her horse, strategically arranged her locks to cover her modesty.

There are so many more examples. May I suggest you bring up this topic at your next coffee klatch or dinner party? It could be hours before your guests come up for hair, I mean air.

Wikipedia lists over 40 songs about hair: "Cookie Cookie, Lend Me Your Comb," "San Francisco: Be Sure to Wear Flowers in Your Hair," "Silver Haired Daddy of Mine," "Black is the Color of My True Love's Hair" and "Lady Godiva" are a few I recognize. Not at all familiar are these gems: "I Think I'm Going Bald," "Pull My Hair," "Ain't Got No Hair," and one I absolutely must check out on YouTube: "Who Found Whose Hair in Whose Bed?"

Nowhere do we see the topic of hair appear more often than in dramatic productions. Mary Martin really started something with "I'm Gonna Wash that Man Right Outa My Hair: in "South Pacific." Practically everyone reading this must remember the 1960 nudie musical "Hair."

I myself enjoyed the film version of the 2002 Tony Best Musical "Hairspray," and "Barbershop" took in $77 million at the box office that year. It was so successful it spawned a sequel and female version "Hair Show" two years later. "Hair Show" was a dud, but "Beauty Shop" earned $40 million in 2005.

Four years later, Chris's Rock's "Good Hair" wasn't all that good. I haven't seen the Disney attempt to cash in on the hair theme "Bad Hair Day," but I have to wonder. Is Disney trying to give every kid over 3 an inferiority complex, or is it to sell overpriced haircuts to tourists?

All right. I admit hair is an issue here at Otter Run. My spouse is in his 80s, with a full head of hair and full beard. That means his gray fibers clog our bathroom drains on a regular basis; my longer dark brown (OK, tinted) strands, not so much. Still, I'm envious, not angry. No matter how much product I apply or how deftly I use my curling iron, I'm not happy with my hair. Maybe it's time to take a page from Cleopatra's playbook.

Up challenge, fun with handguns for deer hunt

America's favorite game animal has a keen nose, ever-vigilant ears, eyes that detect the slightest movement and natural camouflage that seems to work better than the latest man-made patterns.

For most of us, using a centerfire rifle, high-tech compound bow or high-speed crossbow is the proper weapon for outfoxing the white-tailed deer. But some of us like doing things the hard way, or at least increasing the challenge for even more satisfaction when that fat doe or savvy buck finally drops.

I've shot deer with centerfire rifles, muzzleloaders, compound bows and crossbows, but one of my favorites is using a handgun. Before you decide to try this satisfying method, let's look at the pros and cons.

If you only care about putting venison in the freezer every season, then you probably should skip the pistol or revolver. Although you can get pretty good with either out to about 75 yards, even with open sights, it's much more difficult to connect at longer distances, when compared to your trusty rifle.

If your eyesight is so-so, or you are getting up there in years (like me), you may want to add a scope or red dot to your handgun. Shooting with open sights gets to be a challenge as we age, but these optical additions make it easier to focus on one spot.

Because of a handgun's shorter barrel and the lack of a stock, it is much more difficult to hold steady than a rifle. While a bipod or other shooting stick is handy for rifle usage, it's almost a must for handgun hunters. You can buy a fancy one for $100 or more, or make your own with either wooden dowels or fiberglass driveway marker poles and a piece of inner tube or other connecting material.

One of the biggest disadvantages of a handgun is the tremendous sound level blasting close to your ears. While all hunters should use ear plugs or earmuffs every time they fire any firearm, most hunters don't bother when using a rifle because they also want to hear approaching deer, other shots and the sounds of nature. Just a few centerfire handgun shots, however, can cause permanent damage to your ears and may leave your ears ringing for hours or even days.

Exposure to gunfire has a cumulative effect on hearing, meaning the more you ignore ear protection, the sooner you will have profound hearing loss. The best solution for all hunters is to buy a pair of electronic earmuffs, which allows normal sounds to be heard but electronically "clips" noises at a higher volume. You can get them as cheaply as $40. I normally use Walker's Game Ears for my handgun hunts, but Caldwell makes a dandy model with a light indicator to prevent leaving it on for less than half the price of the Game Ears.

A handgun is lighter and more compact for carrying in the woods, and with a holster, you can carry it hands-free. If you carry a lot of gear like most deer hunters, your treks to and from your stand are easier with a handgun.

Almost anyone can learn to shoot a deer rifle out to 100 yards and beyond in an hour or two, and put virtually every bullet in a 3-inch circle with a rest. But doing it with a handgun takes more practice. Yet this is also a good thing, because success is that much sweeter. Those poses with your thick-necked buck or chunky doe will draw more attention when you're holding a stainless steel revolver or blued steel pistol. And you will remember those deer for a lifetime.

There are many handgun calibers that will work well for deer hunting, but the bare minimum is a .357 Magnum revolver. Many recommend the .44 Magnum, which provides more energy and a bigger hole, as well as insurance in the event of a marginal hit. The .460 and .500 lead the pack in handgun cartridges, and should bring short blood trails.

The other option is to use a Thompson-Center Contender or Encore, single-shot pistols bored for many rifle calibers as well as handgun cartridges. Barrels are interchangeable, so you can buy one frame and as many different barrels as you want. Although Thompson-Center officially closed, there are many of these guns available on the used market. I have Contenders in 7-30 Waters (.30-30 necked to 7mm), .45-70 and 7mm-08, and they are all great deer calibers.

Choose a caliber and bullet weight combination that will efficiently kill the deer. I recommend a minimum 6-inch barrel for revolvers (the longer, the better) and 10 inches for single-shots like the Contender.

Remember that unless you have a concealed carry permit, you must leave the handgun visible to others (regardless of weather). Those with a CCW permit can carry under a jacket or inside a backpack legally.

President apologizes for boarding schools

Menominee chairwoman joins Biden on Air Force One

BY KEVIN PASSON
Editor-in-Chief

Menominee Indian Tribe of Wisconsin Chairwoman Gena Kakkak accompanied President Joe Biden on Air Force One on Oct. 24, one day ahead of an event in the Gila River Indian Community in Arizona where the president issued a formal apology on behalf of the United States for the failed assimilation policy of Indian boarding schools.

Six tribal leaders joined the president on his flight to Arizona, during which Kakkak spoke to Biden about tribal sovereignty, trust and treaty obligations, as well as the importance of language and culture investment in helping indigenous communities heal from the painful impacts brought on by the boarding school era.

“Joining the president aboard Air Force One was not something I ever envisioned doing, but I was honored to join other strong tribal leaders on this flight, where we got to speak with President Biden directly about our government-to-government relationship, the impacts of boarding schools, and highlight areas in need of support,” Kakkak said.

Menominee Indian Tribe of Wisconsin Chairwoman Gena Kakkak accompanies President Joe Biden on Air Force One on Oct. 24, one day ahead of an event at which the president issued a formal apology on behalf of the United States for the failed assimilation policy of Indian boarding schools. At these schools, children as young as age 4 endured years of physical, mental and emotional abuse, with thousands never returning home.

MENOMINEE INDIAN TRIBE OF WISCONSIN

On the day after the flight, Biden joined Secretary of the Interior Deb Haaland in Gila River Indian Community where he delivered a formal apology, acknowledging the pain and suffering inflicted on Native American children and their communities as a result of the boarding schools.

There were 11 Indian boarding schools in Wisconsin, most beginning in the 1800s. These included: the Wittenberg Indian School, which boarded children from several tribes, mostly from the Ho-Chunk and Oneida nations; St. Joseph’s Indian Industrial School, a Catholic mission school in Keshena; and the Menominee Boarding School, also in Keshena but operated by the federal government.

“Tens of thousands of Native children entered the system,” Biden said. “Nearly 1,000 documented Native child deaths, though the real number is likely to be much, much higher; lost generations, culture and language; lost trust.

wrong. It’s a sin on our soul.”

The legacy of the boarding school era was one of forced assimilation and culture erasure, when hundreds of thousands of Native American children were taken from their homes between 1869 through the 1960s. At these schools, children as young as age 4 endured years of physical, mental and emotional abuse, with thousands never returning home.

“One of the most horrific chapters in American history,” Biden said. “Children would arrive at schools. Their clothes taken off. Their hair that they were told was sacred was chopped off. Their names literally erased and replaced by a number or an English name.”

He said America should be ashamed.

“The president’s apology is an important step that acknowledges the voices of our survivors, the spirits of those who did not make it home, and the strength and resiliency of our communities who have had to deal with decades of intergenerational trauma that resulted from this shameful and dark chapter in American history,” Kakkak said. “Our communities, and particularly our elders who survived these schools, have waited a long time for this, and while this formal apology matters deeply, we also look forward to what comes next.”

Biden acknowledged that no words can make up for what happened decades ago.

“I know no apology can or will make up for what was lost during the darkness of the federal boarding school policy,” he said. “But today, we’re finally moving forward into the light.”

Kakkak hopes the acknowledgement and apology leads to greater support for things such as language and culture revitalization, as well as more mental health resources that help create space for continued healing in indigenous communities.

“While it was an historic and important day, this is just part of the reparative journey and paves the way for much needed work ahead,” she said. “The impact of intergenerational trauma this era caused cannot be overstated. This requires purposeful investment in the very things taken from us, and I have great hope we are taking a step forward.”

The Associated Press reported the U.S. government has offered apologies for other historic injustices, including to Japanese families it imprisoned during World War II.

In 1993, President Bill Clinton signed a law apologizing to Native Hawaiians for the overthrow of the Hawaiian monarchy a century earlier.

The House and Senate passed resolutions in 2008 and 2009 apologizing for slavery and Jim Crow segregation.

In Canada, a country with a similar history of subjugating First Nations and forcing their children into boarding schools for assimilation, former Prime Minister Stephen Harper made a formal apology in 2008.

Pope Francis issued a historic apology in 2022 for the Catholic Church’s cooperation with Canada’s policy of Indigenous residential schools, saying the forced assimilation of Native people into Christian society destroyed their cultures, severed families and marginalized generations.

Murder, madness and aliens spur sci-fi mystery

This week I read M.G. Herron’s “Culture Shock.” It is the first in the Gunn Files science fiction series featuring bounty hunter Anderson Gunn.

It is said that if it is weird, you can probably find it in Austin, Texas, and Anderson couldn’t agree more. The last year has been rough. Just when his Gunn Bounties was taking off, his personal life went haywire.

The money he’d borrowed to expand went toward his mother’s medical expenses and bounty work dried up. Now Gunn is deeply in debt with no idea how to proceed. The sweltering heat of summer only deepens his malaise.

He is relieved when his friend and regular employer, Alec Ludwig, arrives with a high dollar recovery. Cameron Kovak didn’t show up for his DWI hearing. Bringing him in will net Gunn 10% of the bond money.

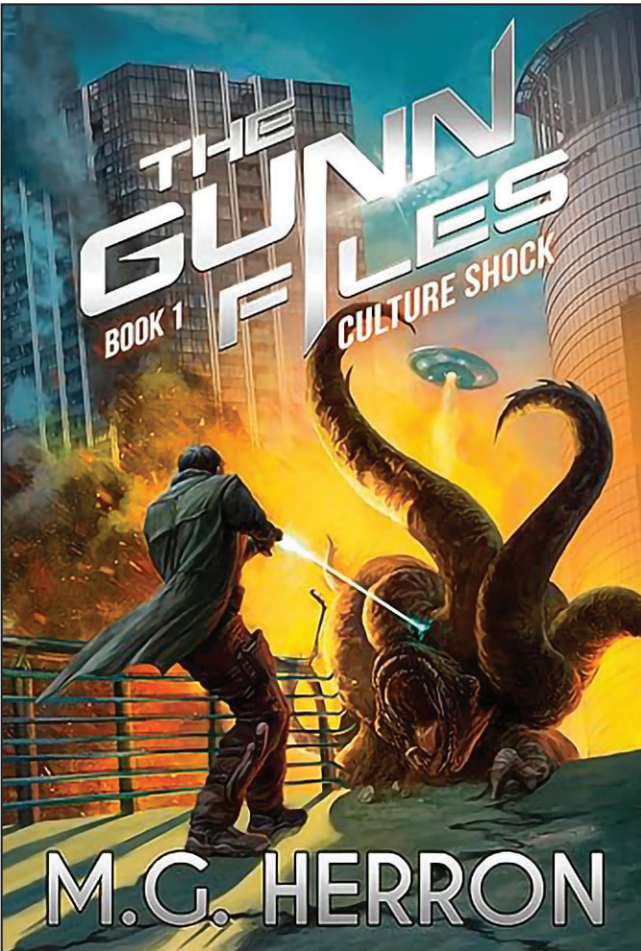

Before he can get started, he learns that Kovak’s power and light co-worker, Dale Edwards, was found dead. Now Kovak is wanted for murder. That means the Austin police will be searching for him, too. Could the death be related to the sudden fluctuation in the power grid?

When Gunn arrives at the murder scene, he notes that the ditch is closer to being a crater gouged deep in the soil. Gunn is shocked to see Detective Sheila Gonzales in charge. The two have a long history, but she’s not happy to see him.

After some cajoling, she shares that Dale Edwards’ death wasn’t normal. It looked like everything has been sucked out of his skin. How could that happen? While talking with Gonzales, Gunn notices a man and woman near the “ditch.” He assumes that they are FBI but can’t shake the feeling that there is something odd about the pair. Seconds later they disappear.

Gunn is determined to find Kovak and get to the truth and the bounty money. He returns to his office and finds Alec’s accountant, Annabelle Summers, going through his pile of overdue bills.

During the conversation, Gunn notices that the computer screen is on a blog called Weirder than Weird written by Marsha Marshall. It is a site dedicated to the unexplained and paranormal. This one features the Kovaks/Edwards case with surprising detail.

During the next power outage, Gunn sees what looks like Kovak’s body moving up the street. Gunn grabs his high-powered rifle and takes off. He manages to shoot it in the leg before something knocks him cold. He wakes up to find he’s with the man and woman he saw at the crime scene.

After a bit of arguing, they explain that they are “bounty hunters” Dyna and Kilos from the planet Lodi. They are on Earth to retrieve a dangerous creature called a pharsei, which is pulling energy from the electrical grid. It appears that Gunn is one of the very few who can see them, and they want his help.

Suddenly Gunn is entangled in capturing the pharsei without involving the police and surviving to collect the money he’s been promised. Along the way he makes a questionable deal with a creature called The Gatekeeper. Not surprisingly, Gunn is now in the middle of the weirdest stuff Austin has ever seen. I look forward to his adventures in book two.

Wittenberg Legion memorial wall dedicated

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

American Legion Post 502 in Wittenberg dedicated its memorial wall Sept. 14 with more than 200 people present to check out the big addition to the village's Washington Park.

Three slabs of marble boast the names of hundreds of people who fought and died defending freedom in World War I and every war after that up to the present day. However, the wall isn't quite done as two more slabs are on order and will be added next spring.

Besides the marble walls, the area also boasts two eagle sculptures that look like they're watching the hallowed area where residents can come to see their loved ones' names and remember what they did to ensure that they can live free today.

All told, the wall pieces and the eagle sculptures cost the Legion $85,000, with contributions of $20,000 each from the Wittenberg Village Board and Wittenberg Town Board, as well as a $25,000 donation from an anonymous donor. Also, each veteran's family had to pay for their individual plaques, and so many expressed interest that the three original walls were not enough to bear the names.

The memorial has been a project 10 years in the making for the Legion, and no one was happier to see the walls go up than Post 502's adjutant, Steve Passehl.

Passehl noted that Schneider Monument in Shawano helped the Legion to get the stones all the way from Greece. He said that the stones are similar to the ones memorializing members of the military in Washington, D.C. He pointed out that the two additional slabs on order are due to the heavy participation by communities in western Shawano County and beyond.

Work on the project began in earnest in 2023, according to Passehl.

More than 200 people came out for the dedication ceremony Sept. 14 for the Wittenberg American Legion's memorial wall. Three marble slabs, including the one shown, came all the way from Greece, and two more slabs will be installed next spring due to the high interest of local families to add their loved ones' names.

"It makes me so proud," he said. "It's actually a lot of work to do this project, and I'm glad that we got most of it done."

Passehl added that the two additional stones won't arrive until next year, because they can only be installed when frost isn't in the ground.

Dale Fandry, Post 502's commander, was pleased with the turnout, and he believes it shows the support the community has for those who serve in the military.

"There's a minimum amount of people in the service that are protecting most people in this country, and they serve for honor, courage and democracy," he said.

Honor Flight serves veterans of all eras

The Never Forgotten Honor Flight is a Wausau-based organization formed in November 2009. Its goal is to fly area veterans who served during World War II, the Korean War or the Vietnam era to Washington, D.C., to visit the memorials built in their honor.

The Never Forgotten Honor Flight is an affiliate of the national group Honor Flight Network, which began this activity in 2005, and began flying with commercial charter aircraft in 2006 from Dayton, Ohio.

The only qualification for a veteran to take an honor flight trip is to have served in the United States military, in any capacity anywhere, and received an honorable discharge before May 7, 1975.

There are now 128 "hubs," or cities in 44 states from which flights originate. As of Dec. 31, 2023, these hubs have collectively flown 295,787 veterans since 2005.

The Never Forgotten Honor Flight Hub has flown, as of Oct. 28, 4,814 veterans including 106 sets of brothers, 13 husbands and wives, 71 female veterans. There have been 1,048 World War II veterans; 1,267 Korean War veterans; 2,499 Vietnam era veterans; and 2,976 guardians.

This is a one day trip, with veterans spending most of the time at the World War II, Korean and Vietnam memorials. Veterans also visit the Lincoln Memorial, Air Force Memorial, Iwo Jima Memorial (Marine Corps War Memorial), Arlington National Cemetery and the Changing of the Guard at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. A city tour is also part of the day, viewing Washington's prominent buildings and other memorials.

Priority is given to those veterans who served during the World War II era, then the Korea era and lastly the Vietnam era. If a veteran is certified terminally ill by a doctor but able to travel, he or she moves up the priority list no matter what their era of service.

The Never Forgotten Honor Flight is supported by private and commercial donors and many veterans and civic organizations, schools, churches, employees of corporations, foundations and individuals. There is no paid staff; the operation is entirely run by volunteers.

Donations are tax deductible to the fullest extent of the law. Make checks out to Never Forgotten Honor Flight and mail to 225780 Rib Mountain Drive #234, Wausau, WI 54401. Donations can also be made at <https://neverforgottenhonorflight.com>.

A $500 gift fully funds one veteran to go on his or her trip.

Among the monuments visited during an Honor Flight to Washington, D.C., is the Vietnam Veterans Memorial. It stands as a symbol of America's honor and recognition of the men and women who served and sacrificed their lives in the Vietnam War. Inscribed on the black granite walls are the names of more than 58,000 men and women who gave their lives or remain missing.

Story of Veterans Day goes back to World War I

Veterans Day is intended to thank and honor all those who served honorably in the military — living and dead — whether in wartime or peace.

In fact, Veterans Day is largely intended to thank living veterans for their service, to acknowledge that their contributions to our national security are appreciated, and to underscore the fact that all those who serve have sacrificed and done their duty.

While Veterans Day is often confused with Memorial Day, the two observances serve different purposes and have different histories. Memorial Day, which has its roots in the post-Civil War effort to “memorialize” all those who died in that war, has become a modern holiday to remember those from all wars and conflicts who gave their lives in service to the country.

To ensure the sacrifices of America’s fallen heroes are never forgotten, in December 2000 the U.S. Congress passed and the President signed into law “The National Moment of Remembrance Act” to “encourage the people of the United States to give something back to their country, which provides them so much freedom and opportunity” by encouraging and coordinating commemorations of Memorial Day and the National Moment of Remembrance. The National Moment of Remembrance encourages all Americans to pause wherever they are at 3 p.m. local time on Memorial Day for two minutes of silence to remember and honor those who have died in service to the nation.

Veterans Day, however, was first known as Armistice Day as a celebration of the resolution of World War I, a peace recognized historically on the date and time of that event, Nov. 11, 1918, at 11 a.m., and salutes surviving service members as well as those who have passed away since their service.

In 1954, President Dwight D. Eisenhower signed a bill proclaiming Nov. 11 as Veterans Day and called upon Americans everywhere to rededicate themselves to the cause of peace.

He issued a presidential order directing the head of the Veterans Administration (now the Department of Veterans Affairs) to form a Veterans Day National Committee to organize and oversee the national observance of Veterans Day.

In 1968, in keeping with the Monday Holiday Bill, Congress briefly moved Veterans Day to the fourth Monday in October, but it became quickly apparent that the American public held fast to the historical significance of the First World War armistice on Nov. 11, and in 1978, Veterans Day was returned permanently to its traditional date.

Hence, the Veterans Day National Ceremony is held each year on Nov. 11 at Arlington National Cemetery. At 11 a.m. Eastern Standard Time, a color guard made up of members from each branch of the military renders honors to America’s deceased veterans during a tradition-rich ceremony at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. The President or his representative places a wreath at the Tomb and a bugler sounds “Taps.” The balance of the ceremony, including a Parade of Flags by Veterans Service Organizations, takes place inside the Memorial Amphitheater, adjacent to the tomb.

On Oct. 7, 2016, President Barack Obama signed the Veterans Day Moment of Silence Act. The law requires that the president issue a proclamation calling on the people of the United States to observe a two-minute national moment of silence on Veterans Day at 2:11 p.m. Eastern Standard Time.

HONORING ALL WHO SERVED VETERANS DAY

As Veterans Day approaches, take a moment, if even in your own thoughts, to consider the sacrifice of our military men and women, and their families. If you see a veteran (lots of vets wear their 'Vietnam Veteran' hats proudly, all year round!) stop them and say 'Hey, thanks for your service.' Proudly fly your American flag at home (and take it down at night, unless you've got a light shining on it!). Consider adopting a soldier. Fumbled snaps and a disastrous pick six marked Jordan Love's day against the Detroit Lions on Sunday. He finished the matchup completing 23-of-39 passes for 273 yards and no touchdowns.

Rainy conditions Sunday at Lambeau Field made it hard on the coaching staff as well as the players. Lions coach Dan Campbell went through several towels keeping their play cards dry enough to read.

Packers win streak snapped at 4 as Lions dominate NFC North showdown

BY LUKE REIMER
Green & Gold Express

Through the rain, the Green Bay Packers out-gained the Detroit Lions in yardage, 411-261, but dropped the NFC North matchup on Nov. 3 at Lambeau Field.

Packers quarterback Jordan Love, who was dealing with a groin injury from the week prior, was able to start the game. He finished the matchup completing 23-of-39 passes for 273 yards and no touchdowns.

Running Back Josh Jacobs registered an efficient day on the ground, running for 95 yards on 13 carries. To add to the run game, Emanuel Wilson chipped in 28 yards on four carries, including a late 2-yard touchdown.

Jayden Reed led all Green Bay pass catchers with 113 yards on five catches. Christian Watson, Tucker Kraft and Romeo Doubs added another 37 yards, 34 yards and 28 yards, respectively.

On the Lions' side, quarterback Jared Goff continued his blazing hot start to the season completing 18-of-22 passes for 145 yards and one touchdown. The Lions continued to ride its two-headed rushing attack in this game as well, as David Montgomery finished the game with 73 yards on 17 carries and Jahmyr Gibbs finished with 65 yards on 11 carries, adding a touchdown.

As for the receiving game, Amon-Ra St. Brown registered 56 yards and a touchdown on seven receptions. Tight end Sam LaPorta added another 28 yards on two receptions.

In total, Green Bay almost doubled Detroit's total yardage, but mental mistakes and penalties doomed the home team. The biggest of those instances came in the middle of the second quarter, when Detroit defensive back Brian Branch was penalized 15 yards and subsequently ejected for a hit to the head of Packers receiver Bo Melton. After being ejected, Branch shouted at the refs and gestured inappropriately to the home crowd, which was followed up by another 15-yard unsportsmanlike conduct penalty.

Taking over at the Lions

Running back Jahmyr Gibbs rushed for a 15-yard touchdown on a fourth down in the fourth quarter.

GREG MELLIS | GREEN & GOLD EXPRESS

32-yard line, Green Bay was charged with a false start penalty and after three plays found itself with a fourth-and-six. Kicker Brandon McManus missed the 46-yard attempt, meaning Green Bay came away with nothing on the prime opportunity.

The biggest blunder of the game for Green Bay came as when it was down 10-3 late in the second quarter, Love dropped back, and after no one was able to get open, he tried to dump it off to Jacobs on a checkdown. Lions defensive back Kirby Joseph jumped the pass, intercepted the ball and returned it 27-yards for a touchdown.

"On the interception, I was moving out of the pocket, obviously (Jacobs) was blocking with protection, I saw him get out and I was trying to dump it down to him on a checkdown," said Love. "The ball did not go where I wanted it to, and they made a good play on it."

The interception from Love marks his 10th on the season. He had 11 all of last season.

For Joseph, it marks his sixth interception of the season, which ties Packers defensive back Xavier McKinney for the most in the NFL this season.

"Every pick is going to be a little bit different," said Packers head coach Matt LaFleur, on what the difference has been for Love between the end of last year and the start of this year. "I feel like we can get better, we can learn from it and I think that we will be better moving forward."

Penalties were also a major hindrance for Green Bay in this game, as the Packers were called for 10 infractions, which resulted in 67 yards for the Lions. One of those penalties came early in the game, as the Lions were faced with a fourth-and-goal from the Packers 5-yard line. Goff caught Green Bay with a hard count and Packers defensive lineman T.J. Slaton was called with an encroachment penalty. St. Brown scored on the very next play.

"I was disappointed with the number of penalties and just self-inflicted wounds that we had," said LaFleur.

The Packers now have the sixth most penalties in the NFL called against the team, which has resulted in 480 yards for opposing teams.

Overall with the division lead on the line, Green Bay's loss pushes the Packers to a 6-3 record, as the team looks to regroup next week during its bye.

Coming out of the bye, Green Bay will look to get back on track against its old rival, the Chicago Bears.

Detroit wide receivers Amon-Ra St. Brown (14) and Tim Patrick (17) celebrate a touchdown on a fourth down play early in the Lions 24-14 win over the Packers. Twice, the Lions scored on a fourth down play, as Green Bay played a sometimes sloppy game and not always because of the weather.

Rehab, refresh and regroup during bye week

Packers enter Week 10 as one of the top teams in the NFC

By JACOB WESTENDORF
Green & Gold Express

Through nine weeks in the NFL season, the Green Bay Packers have shown they are one of the better teams in the NFC with a 6-3 record.

Even though Green Bay has come away with six wins, it feels like this team is capable of so much more. The team needs to wait though for two weeks, as the Packers' Week 10 bye may be arriving at the perfect time.

After getting beat up at home by the Detroit Lions, there seems to be some cracks in the armor for Green Bay. Coming into the game against the Lions, the Packers had a laundry list of injuries throughout practice — most notably, quarterback Jordan Love, who has missed time this season with both knee and groin injuries.

On top of Love being injured, defensive backs Evan Williams and Jaire Alexander have been banged up, as well as line-backer Quay Walker and offensive lineman Elgton Jenkins. With the bye week here, it makes sense that the Packers should have more time to refresh before entering a gauntlet of a schedule with Chicago, San Francisco, Miami and Detroit coming in the four weeks after.

"The attitude is just come back and get into the film room," said Love, on the attitude of the team heading into the bye week. "(It's) the same mindset as every week — look at the tape, figure out what we did good and figure out what we did bad. We have a lot of football ahead of us when we come back from the bye week, so just hit the ground running when we get back."

Even though the loss to the Lions exposed some weaknesses for Green Bay, the previous eight weeks, for better or worse, have shown that the Packers are one of the better teams in not only the NFC, but the NFL as a whole.

Four of Green Bay's six wins have come against all four teams in the AFC South and two against the Los Angeles Rams and the Arizona Cardinals. While on the field, fans and spectators of the game are seeing Love play the way that he did last season. There is a lot of good (15 touch-down passes) and some bad (10 interceptions). As we saw last season, if Love can control that and not make those major mistakes, Green Bay has a chance to make another deep run to the playoffs.

Above, Elgton Jenkins (74), playing center in place of the injured Josh Myers, signals to a teammate prior to snapping the ball to quarterback Jordan Love. At right, Love points to the scoreboard instant replay while talking to a referee after the Packers failed to convert a fourth down in the fourth quarter.

What is encouraging is how well the Packers' defense has been playing this season.

Through nine games, Green Bay has given up 194 points, giving up 30 or more points just twice this season. On top of that, the defense has also forced 19 turnovers, which ranks first in the entire NFL.

Add into the equation that new kicker Brandon McManus has brought about great results, compared to his two predecessors, and it becomes clear that Green Bay certainly has the pieces to contend.

The big question remains, however: When will it all come together?

The game against the Arizona Cardinals was probably the closest the Packers have come to this, but fans of the Packers are still waiting to see a three-phased complete game against one of the top teams in the NFL.

Once again, that all starts with Love taking care of the football. Even though Green Bay leads the NFL with 19 forced turnovers, the team has turned the ball over 13 times, with 10 coming from interceptions thrown by Love.

If Love is able to recapture that magic that was seen to end the season in 2023-24, there may be just a handful of teams that can beat the Packers.

With Josh Jacobs continuing to play well in the run game, having a reliable dual threat offense should compliment a really good defense well.

"It just comes back to focusing on the things that we aren't doing well and as we go through the week of practice, just cleaning up those details and if we do have mistakes, just not letting those things slide," said Love. "Just staying true to the details and the fundamentals and just staying focused about the things we need to clean up. I know that we are a really good football team, and like I said, it is just too many mistakes that are self-inflicted that we haven't been able to overcome." The Packers now have a chance to regroup with the bye week to, as Love said, watch film and figure out the good and the bad to be able to carry the weight in the second half of the season.

PACKERS BYE WEEK

Packers 0-2 against divisional opponents

Two of Green Bay's three losses this year have come against NFC North opponents, not what you want to see in a team competing for a divisional title. In addition to the 24-14 loss at the hands of the division-leading Detroit Lions on Sunday, the Packers lost 31-29 to the Minnesota Vikings at the end of September.

"It's disappointing when you have a big game like this against one of the best teams in the league," Packers coach Matt LaFleur said. "There was just too many mistakes (and) you can't overcome those against a good football team. And that's exactly what Detroit is,"

Detroit has only lost to Tampa Bay. With Sunday's win over the Packers, they are 2-0 in the NFC North. The Lions defeated Minnesota in Week 7.

"We knew it was going to be critical to get two wins in this division against two really good teams - Minnesota and then this one, Green Bay, at their place. So to be able to do that was big," Detroit head coach Dan Campbell said. "We had a number of guys step up, I thought, defensively. When we needed it most, it really showed up. We limited points. We held them in the red zone; we got off the field on third down. Just a lot of guys making critical plays."

Campbell singled out several players for their performances against Green Bay.

"Kerby's (Joseph) pick six was huge. It was a massive play right before halftime," Campbell said. "Offensively, our offensive line did an outstanding job. We were able to run it. We were pretty efficient. David Montgomery and Gibby

Green Bay's offense ran up the stats against the Lions even though they came up short on the scoreboard. Chris Brooks, left, is tackled by cornerback Carlton Davis III. Christian Watson, right, had three catches for 37 yards. GREG MELLIS | GREEN & GOLD EXPRESS

Kicker Brandon McManus missed a 46-yard field goal wide right. It was his first missed field goal since signing with the Packers in October. GREG MELLIS | GREEN & GOLD EXPRESS (Jahmyr Gibbs) got it going. I thought (Amon-Ra) St. Brown had a big game for us in the pass game. (Jared) Goff played clean football, man. He got us in the right play. He was very efficient. I just have a lot of trust in him, in what he is doing and how he is playing.

"We flipped the field. Jack Fox flipped the field. We knew that was going to be a big thing for us, just field position. So a number of guys played well. It is a great win and that gets us to seven."

LaFleur said the Lions played a clean game and didn't put the ball in jeopardy.

"That's a good offensive line, and I think defensively, they do some things that gives a little bit of problems, and I thought they did a good job just keeping us a little off balance," he said. "I was probably anticipating a little bit more man coverage, and they were just jumping in and out of it. So, they did a good job of keeping us a little bit off balance, I would say, offensively."

Coming out of the bye, the Packers will play the final team in their division, the Chicago Bears (4-4), which will close out the first round of divisional games.

If the Packers intend to truly compete for that divisional title, they will need to play better in the second half of the season.

The second round of divisional games includes the Packers vs. Lions in Detroit on Dec. 5 (a Thursday night game). The final two games of the regular season will be against the Vikings on Dec. 29 in Minnesota and Week 18 at home against the Bears, with the exact time and date yet to be announced.

WEEK 9 / DEFENSE

THE MOMENT

PACKERS 14 VS LIONS 24

Detroit wide receiver Kalif Raymond (11) is tackled by Packers defensive lineman Kingsley Enagbare for a 12-yard loss. Raymond caught one ball for 12 yards but also lost those same 12 yards on his rushing attempt. The Packers defense held the Lions to 137 passing yards and 124 rushing yards, but penalties and miscues led to a 24-14 loss to division leading Detroit.

Van Ness is team's nominee for Salute to Service Award

BY JACOB WESTENDORF
Green & Gold Express

Green Bay Packers linebacker Lukas Van Ness is the team's nominee for the NFL's Salute to Service Award.

The award recognizes NFL players, coaches, staff and alumni who demonstrate an exemplary commitment to honoring and supporting the military community.

Several Van Ness family members served in the military, including his grandfather, who retired as a lieutenant colonel after a 27-year career in the U.S. Army.

What did it mean for you to be nominated for the Salute to Service Award?

My grandpa, Donald Van Ness, served as a lieutenant colonel for 27 years. I've always believed that this platform we have, there's a lot of brave men and women who are currently serving or who have served, and they put their lives on the line. They do a lot for us to enjoy and play this beautiful game. So, it's an honor for me to have the ability to be nominated for this and really just a cool opportunity.

Have you talked to

your grandfather about being nominated and what did he say?

I told him about it actually the other night, and he was tearing up about it, because the military means a lot to him. I think it's cool, me being the oldest grandson in the family, showing my support. I think it means a lot to him that I care as much about it as I do.

I understand the family ties, but why is this so important to you? You're busy. I'm sure he would understand if you didn't have the time.

I think it also stems from I've been a part of three programs from high school to college and, obviously, now in the NFL, but coach (Kirk) Ferentz at Iowa was a big advocate and supporter of the military. We had a lot of speakers, and we also had a military appreciation game. It always brought a lot of awareness.

And also, I was just super interested in it. When I was going into college, some of my biggest offers were from the service academies. It was a route that I almost ended up going before I committed to Iowa. So, from a young age, I've always had a massive appreciation and interest in the military. And then as I kind of grow my platform and have the ability to get here in the NFL, I've wanted to continue that.

Army, Navy, Air Force, what would you have chosen?

I was looking at the Navy just because there was a guy a couple years older than me named Jackson Perkins, who had a pipeline to the naval academy. So, I was kind of leaning that route, but, obviously, happy that I ended up going to Iowa. But I always thought it would be a super cool thing if that didn't work out.
