County, Bertram partner for grant

Funding could bring fiber optic service to thousands across Shawano County

By KEVIN PASSON
Editor-in-chief

Shawano County will team up with Bertram Communication LLC to hopefully provide underground fiber internet service to several thousand homes and businesses in the county.

With support from the county board, Bertram will submit an application for grant funding from the Wisconsin Public Service Commission (PSC).

Shawano County recognizes internet access as an essential utility for modern life and economic development for residents and businesses, according to Matt Hietpas, the county's technology services director. However, due to budget limitations, it has been difficult to attract internet service providers without grant funding.

"This project aligns with Shawano County's goals to expand and enhance connectivity of fiber-to-the-premises broadband access to all residents and businesses and supports Shawano County's choice to partner with Bertram Communications to serve their municipality with broadband access," Hietpas wrote in a letter to the PSC.

The national Bipartisan Infrastructure Law allocated $42 billion under the Broadband Equity, Access and Deployment (BEAD) Program for broadband infrastructure deployment. Wisconsin was awarded $1.056 billion for broadband infrastructure that will produce high-quality, reliable, affordable internet in unserved and underserved households and businesses.

There are 4,777 broadband serviceable locations spread across Shawano County that are eligible for BEAD funding.

It is expected grants will be awarded in 2025, but Hietpas said completing the project will take about five years because of the number of projects that will be funded across the state all at the same time.

Bertram's proposal was recommended by the county's BEAD Committee and the

ORV issues come back to council's attention

Alderman wants tighter restrictions; resident cries discrimination

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

Off-road vehicles could be back on the Shawano Common Council's agenda in the future for a full discussion as backlash has arisen regarding their sharing the road with motor vehicles.

The vehicles were brought up during the council's Nov. 13 meeting, but for two very different reasons.

JIM HAUER

Because the topic wasn't on the agenda, the issue could not be fully discussed, but Alderman Jim Hauer wants the vehicles put on a future agenda.

Hauer, who also works as a sheriff's deputy for Shawano County, commented along the same lines as his boss, Sheriff George Lenzner, about the need for stricter guidelines about who can operate all-terrain vehicles and utility-terrain vehicles on paved roads. However, Wisconsin Department of Natural Resource guidelines are fairly loose, and it might be difficult to approve restrictions that don't reflect state rules.

The issue is not new,

Shirley Hinze, a Shawano resident who recently ran for the 6th Assembly District, holds up an article she found online regarding off-road vehicles as she tells the Shawano Common Council that the wheel tax approved in September should apply to those vehicles, as well.

LEE PULASKI | NEW MEDIA

as the matter of the rules came up when the Shawano County Board of Supervisors approved its measure in February 2021 and the council gave the green light in April 2021. The city recently expanded where off-road vehicles can go to include primary roads like Main and Green Bay streets.

Currently, off-road vehicles can be operated by anyone ages 12 and up, with younger operators required to have an adult in the vehicle, and there are no insurance requirements like there are with motor vehicles. Also, the DNR rules do not forbid ORVs from having open intoxicants inside the vehicle, whereas having them in a motor vehicle is against the law.

"I propose that we modify our statute that you have a valid license to drive on the roadways," Hauer said. "Also, under that statute, it says that you can't operate under the influence of an intoxicant to operate a UTV, but there's no mention of open intox. So I'm going to propose we include in that municipal code, no operating with an open intoxicant inside of the vehicle. You can't be driving around with a beer in your ATV."

Hauer also said he wants to see insurance requirements on all ORVs operating in the city.

The proposal got some pushback at the meeting, despite not being on the agenda for discussion.

Mayor Bruce Milavitz said he was open to discussing the concerns but questioned the wisdom of having stricter rules than the state.

"The reason we have what the state was doing is because they've already vetted the program," Milavitz said. "I think the reason we didn't put further restraints is because, when people come into the community, now you've got to look at all the different rules and regulations for each community you're driving through."

Hauer acknowledged that the city or the county having stricter ORV regulations could be controversial, and he said it would be better if the state were to take action on its rules so that municipalities could follow suit.

"I'd treat it like a motorcycle, in my opinion," Hauer said.

He noted that one of his neighbors told him about someone whose driver's license has been revoked using his UTV to travel around the city.

"If he drives a car, he's committing a crime," Hauer said. "Because he's driving a UTV in the city of Shawano, he's able to, and he can have a beer while he's doing it."

Alderman Brad Keuschel also expressed reservations about stricter ORV guidelines, especially since he also uses one.

"As a UTV driver, I don't research every city or county that I drive through, so if I have my son driving, and we get pulled over, he gets in trouble for it," Keuschel said.

Milavitz said that the current policy was vetted through the city's field committee over three years ago, and that it took a lot of time getting input from law enforcement about whether it should be allowed in Shawano.

City Attorney Keith Steckbauer halted further debate on the matter, reminding the council that there was no agenda item for the issue.

Earlier in the meeting, former Assembly candidate Shirley Hinze brought up off-road vehicles for an entirely different reason, as she continued to protest the wheel tax implemented in September. Motor vehicles under 8,000 pounds will be required to pay a $40 registration fee on top of what the state assesses, but the tax is not assessed on ORVs.

"They're just as big (as motor vehicles). They don't have any of the safety equipment. They aren't licensed by the state as far as a license plate and don't require a 16-year-old driver, and they most certainly don't have any insurance on it," Hinze said.

Hinze recommended that, if the city needs revenue, it should charge the same $40 fee for ORVs. She said that she's seen six to eight of them in a caravan go through her neighborhood in western Shawano.

"Now, we've got vehicles that are a hazard to the public in a high-traffic situation in the city, and the city has put a $40 wheel fee on vehicles — automobiles, like my neighbor who has smaller cars and electric vehicles, fully licensed, insured, air bags, the whole nine yards," Hinze said. "He's paying a $40 wheel fee, and yet the guy in the big side-by-side ... is now not. You want to generate revenue? You're going to have to make it equal across the board for every citizen in this city."

Dean positions restored after coach resignation

Decision allows more consistent behavioral handling at schools

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

The Shawano School District has reversed a decision that eliminated the dean of students positions for Hillcrest Primary School and Olga Brener Intermediate School in 2022, following the resignation of a behavioral coach.

Two years ago, the dean positions were eliminated after the district made moves to cut staff and more to plug up what was called at the time a $2 million deficit for the 2022-23 school year. As it turned out, the district ended that year with a $2.6 million surplus; later, the district decided to bring back a single dean position alternating days between Hillcrest and Olga Brener.

Superintendent Kurt Krizan said he has met with Brandie Genske, special education coordinator, about how best to refill the behavioral coach position, which was also labeled a student success coordinator who worked among all four schools. Krizan said they figured the best approach would be to bring back the second dean of students position instead, reducing the need for the principals to spend so much time dealing with disciplinary issues.

"As Brandie and I have looked at some of the different services that we provide for our students and our buildings, there are needs that continue to come up, and having a more consistent person would help our pupil services staff and also our administrative staff be able to do things that are parts of their jobs," Krizan said in a presentation Nov. 11 to the Shawano School Board. "Having a full-time person there who would be able to support behaviors is one of the other pieces we looked at."

Krizan noted that behavioral issues are already being handled at the middle and high schools by the associate principals, so having a behavioral coach geared toward all four schools is less necessary. He added that the behavioral coach position was never well defined.

Genske said it was important to have behavioral support at the "local level," meaning at specific schools.

"This will be supporting students where they need it at that moment," Genske said.

Board member Christine McKinnies heralded the measure but noted it would not be necessary if the positions had not been eliminated in the first place.

"This makes me sad, because four or five years ago, we did have two dean of students — one in each building — and the district at that time decided that they were not needed," McKinnies said. "Now we know that they were needed. I'm all for this, because there's not really a financial impact necessarily, but we know the need was there when they were eliminated. We know the need is there still."

Board member Tim Renard expressed concern when he heard the behavioral coach position was funded through a grant, but Krizan and Genske assured him that the grant was flexible in what position it funded.

"I support what you are moving towards, but if we already have a position that was based upon a grant, that typically means there was an application process and that we need this person for this reason," Renard said. "Now we're backtracking. I just want to make sure we're not stumbling over something that gets us in trouble."

Krizan said there would be no financial impact to altering the position. He hopes to have the position filled by the time schools reopen from their Christmas break, but added that if the district hires from within, it will require looking for external candidates for other positions.

Early Decker-Lazarus mystery gripping read

I was surprised to realize I hadn't read Faye Kellerman's "Justice." It is one of her early Peter Decker and Rina Lazarus books. The complicated story centers on students at Central Valley High School. Teresa McLaughlin narrates it.

I can only give a thumb-nail sketch but it is a gripping read. Foremost is Peter Decker's commitment to justice.

Terry's mother died when she was born, and she now lives with her father, stepmom and little step-sister. She earns cash by tutoring. The quiet teen is nervous when the hottest guy in school offers a ride home.

Chris Whitman is tall, blond, handsome and plays the cello like a pro. His only negative is the way his eyes can go from warm to cold and dead in an instant. Instead of being part of the "in" crowd, he hangs with wilder kids. He tells her that he misses a lot of school due to playing out of town gigs, and he wants to hire Terry to help him catch up, but he's actually in love with her.

Chris has his own apartment, has plenty of money and treats her like a princess, so it is no surprise that quiet, shy Teresa would easily fall in love with him. Chris often opens up to her. He says his father was murdered, his mother died of breast cancer and he was raised by his uncle, a vicious mob boss, and he's engaged to marry the daughter of a rival mob boss. Chris is also a talented artist and convinces Terry to pose nude by promising to keep the sketches hidden.

When Chris' mood swings frighten her, Terry decides to take a break in the relationship. Chris then ignores her completely and dates one of the wild girls, Cheryl Diggs.

Things take a terrible turn after the prom. Cheryl has traded sexual favors for rooms for the group. They drink, dope, and have sex with abandon. The next morning Cheryl Diggs is dead. She's bound to the bed with a tuxedo tie. Since Chris was the last person with her and his DNA is on condoms found with her, they assumed he strangled her, too.

Decker's boss, Lt. Davidson, insists on arresting Chris. Decker knows the coroner found pubic hairs from another man, but Lt. Davidson refused to allow testing and focused on convicting Chris. Once Chris realized that his sketches of Terry would become public, he protects her by quickly confessing to killing Cheryl.

The case was closed, but it still bothered Decker and he digs on his own time and looks into the murder of a young woman. The DNA from that case matches the DNA found in Cheryl Diggs. With the help of local police, he finds the real killer.

Things get even more complicated after that.

County to invest $1.7M in jail HVAC

By KEVIN PASSON
Editor-in-Chief

A bid of slightly more than $1.7 million to replace the HVAC system at the Shawano County Sheriff's Department and its jail was accepted by county officials earlier this month.

"The original piping and duct work will remain but will be cleaned; all other equipment and systems will be replaced with new," said Steve Dreher, director of facilities and grounds. "This will include new controls."

Bids were opened at the Nov. 7 public property committee meeting, and the low bid of $1,713,860 from J.F. Ahren Co. was accepted, and then agreed to by the executive committee Nov. 13.

Two other bids were also submitted.

Mechanical Technologies Inc. bid $1,997,768, and August Winter and Sons Inc. bid $2.3 million.

The project will be paid for with the remaining American Rescue Plan Act (ARPA) funds.

One of the concerns noted was whether the county wanted to invest the funds into a facility that may be demolished in a few years if officials decide to build new.

Supervisor Tom Kautza said the public property committee wasn't sure if the project should be completed.

"They didn't formally vote on it, but they think it should be done," Kautza told the executive committee.

Sheriff George Lenzner said there were earlier concerns the bids would be much higher than the county had funds.

"Do you invest in something when you have an ad hoc committee out there that still hasn't given their recommendation?" he said.

"We don't know what's going to happen in the future. How long does this system last? Do we invest $2 million in something for all we know could be demolished in 10 years?"

Kautza said that's the same question about most of the county buildings, including the courthouse and library.

Supervisor Randy Young said he was told the existing unit is on its last legs and needs to be replaced.

"I hate to spend that kind of money, but whatever happens, you guys are going to be in that building for at least five years," Kautza told Lenzner.

By KEVIN PASSON
Editor-in-Chief

Area law enforcement agencies are the recipients of $135,000 in grants for extra traffic enforcement in their quest to deter seat belt, speeding and operating while intoxicated violations.

Three highway safety grants were awarded by the Wisconsin Department of Transportation. The money will be used to pay deputies and officers, including overtime pay as necessary, to provide additional traffic enforcement for OWI, speed and seat belt special enforcement operations.

Shawano County, Menominee County and the city of Shawano were jointly awarded a total of $50,000 for seat belt enforcement, $35,000 for OWI enforcement and $50,000 for speed enforcement to be used from Jan. 1 through Sept. 30, 2025.

No matching dollars are required from any of the law enforcement agencies.

US House seat may be out of reach for Dems

Wied won district by nearly 15 points in a race expected to be competitive

BY PETER CAMERON
The Badger Project

The dominoes seemed in place for, if not a Democratic win, at least a close race.

The 8th Congressional District was open after the popular incumbent retired. The Republican candidate was a political novice who struggled to fundraise. The Democrat was riding a powerful issue that many thought would lift her party to victory.

The end result was the same as it has been for years — the Republican won in a near landslide.

Tony Wied, the Donald Trump-endorsed, former owner of a Green Bay-area chain of dinosaur-themed gas stations, easily defeated De Pere physician Kristin Lyerly by nearly 15 points.

Wied, also of De Pere, got 240,214 votes, or 57.4% of the total, to Lyerly's 178,621 votes, or 42.6% of the total.

"That is certainly not a good sign if you are the Democratic Party and thinking about trying to win that district in the future," Aaron Weinschenk, a political science professor at UW-Green Bay, wrote in an email. "Most political scientists would characterize (anything around) a 15-percentage-point margin as a landslide victory."

Like many political watchers of the district, Weinschenk said while he thought the Republican would win the right-leaning district, he believed the race would be closer. He guessed maybe 5-10 points.

The district has been mostly Republican-dominated for decades, and several reasonable Democratic challengers have lost there over the years, Ed Miller, a political science professor emeritus at UW-Stevens Point, wrote in an email.

Lyerly also did not have much political experience and had hoped that the abortion issue would be more effective for her than it was, Miller said.

"Apparently it paralleled the national vote," Miller said. "(Vice President Kamala) Harris didn't get as much mileage out of the abortion issue that some had expected."

Wied was somewhat politically fortunate. He won the Republican primary with about 42% of the vote after two experienced state legislators split the remaining vote against him. One of those politicians, former state Sen. Roger Roth, was directly targeted by Donald Trump, who apparently believed Roth to be insufficiently loyal, publicly calling him a "RINO," a common insult hurled within the GOP that stands for "Republican In Name Only."

Wied also struggled to fundraise, bringing in only about $1 million by mid-October, not including a contribution of $500,000 he gave to his own campaign. Lyerly raised $2.4 million in the same time frame.

The former holder of the seat, Mike Gallagher, regularly won reelection with huge margins. The last time Democrats challenged the seat was 2020, when Gallagher won with more than 64% of the vote.

By that measure, Democrats did much better this time, but knocking out a veteran in future elections could be even harder, Weinschenk noted.

The Badger Project is a nonpartisan, citizen-supported journalism nonprofit in Wisconsin.

county board's executive committee.

Four providers were interviewed.

"We felt Bertram fit us best," Hietpas said about the BEAD Committee's recommendation.

Bertram Communications has partnered with the county in the past. It has also previously been awarded grant funding to increase internet connectivity in rural areas that had very poor connectivity.

Most recently, they completed a project that brought fiber optic internet to 1,000 customers in Baileys Harbor in Door County and nearly as many in Oconto County.

"We have a buried fiber network that by the end of November, they will have 980 customers near Mountain," said Sarah Lawrenz, strategic partnerships manager with Bertram Communications.

The company, headquartered in Random Lake in Sheboygan County, has 30 locations in Wisconsin, including one in Shawano.

Bertram's family of companies includes Powercode, a software company they created for their own data management.

"We didn't really plan on selling it, but we do," owner Jim Bertram said.

Today, that software can be found across the world in places like Australia, Italy, Africa and Canada. Thousands of ISPs use it as their back end system.

"We built that," Bertram said. "We run that right out of Random Lake. We have our network, but we also run thousands of networks around the world."

Bertram also builds its own hardware in Wisconsin, and products are used by NASA and the History Channel's "Ice Road Truckers."

Specific details for the Shawano County project were presented in closed session per PSC regulations, said Peter Thillman, Shawano County Economic Progress Inc. chief economic development officer. Proprietary information was shared during that time.

Wisconsin establishing electric vehicle tax

A new excise tax effective Jan. 1, 2025, establishes an electric vehicle (EV) charging tax and requires certain persons to register for the new tax.

As stipulated by 2023 Wisconsin Act 121, an excise tax of 3 cents per kilowatt-hour is due on the electricity delivered or placed into the battery or other energy storage device of an EV by a Level 3 charger, or a Level 1 or Level 2 charger installed on or after March 22, 2024, of an EV charging station.

An owner, operator, manager, or lessee of an EV charging station must register with the Wisconsin Department of Revenue using the Online Business Tax Registration prior to delivery or placement of electricity from an EV charging station that is subject to the excise tax.

The registration and excise tax applies regardless of whether the charging station is available for public use and whether there is a charge to the consumer for the electricity from the EV charging station. Excise tax does not apply and registration is not required for residential EV charging stations, except for hotels.

"The excise tax represents a crucial source of revenue for maintaining Wisconsin's roadways and infrastructure," said Department of Revenue Secretary Designee David Casey. "It will help ensure continued funding for road repairs and construction as Wisconsin drivers increasingly make the switch to electric vehicles, while creating a more equitable system in which all drivers contribute to road maintenance costs."

Buffalo herd continues to grow in Middle Village

Medicine Fish, Nature Conservancy partner to restore cultural, ecological relationships

By WARREN BLUHM
News Editor

About 200 people came from as far away as California, Atlanta and New York, and as near as Keshena and Gresham, to welcome a dozen young bison to a herd that lives near the Menominee Nation community of Middle Village. Spectators stood along a fence and cheered Nov. 9 as the young animals sprang from a trailer and raced into the prairie sanctuary maintained by Medicine Fish along County Road G.

The yearling bison, who were born in the Nachusa Grasslands in Illinois, a Nature Conservancy preserve, joined 17 others that have called the local preserve home since November 2022.

The effort is an initiative of Medicine Fish, an Indigenous-led nonprofit organization that works with local youth, to restore the Menominee's relationship with the buffalo that once roamed the area by the millions.

"The buffalo being introduced has built a movement across the nations," said Bryant Waupoose, executive director of Medicine Fish. "It's about restoring and cultivating relationships that remove cultural barriers with tribal and non-tribal members to work together taking care of Mother Earth."

The Nature Conservancy has been working with tribal nations to restore the relationship with the buffalo, which Waupoose described as "a cultural keystone species and an ecological keystone species" for the Menominee and other nations.

"We are always working to restore relationships and connections to bring healing to our culture and the land," he said. "That's what brought these people from all over to witness this."

Ten buffalo were brought to Menominee Tribal land and released Nov. 12, 2022, through the efforts of Medicine Fish, Menominee Nation, Nature Conservancy and the Inter-Tribal Buffalo Council. In 2023, an additional five yearlings were brought and celebrated as well. Earlier this year, two calves were born, bringing the herd to 17.

During the ceremony that took place before the 12 new buffalo were introduced, tribal elder and preservationist Dave Grignon said a Menominee prayer for "our buffalo relatives," asking the Creator to look to their well-being on this new land and welcoming them to their new home.

He explained that historically, there was a connection between the Menominee and the buffalo, which in their language are called pesaehkiw or "prairie animal."

Grignon praised Waupoose and his brother, Donovan Waupoose, director of buffalo restoration for Medicine Fish, for their work in restoring the buffalo to their historic home.

Family starts foundation after giving birth to child with Down syndrome

By KAY REMINGER
Correspondent

Lisa and Robbie Hill are the parents of three boys — the youngest of whom, Myles, happens to have a form of Down syndrome.

Myles has Trisomy 21, which is caused when there is an extra copy of chromosome 21. According to Lisa Hill, it is a very individualized condition.

"Every child with Down syndrome is different," Hill said. "There's no two alike. It doesn't mean they're going to be doing the same things or have the same health concerns. You don't know until you know. The journey can feel impossible to some; it did for me. But the second he was born and we locked eyes, I knew he would lead me through this."

When Myles was just eight months old, Lisa Hill took her boys to a park to play, and her older boys wanted to put their little brother in a swing. Myles was just sitting up on his own and just started to have head control, Hill recalled, so he was unable to use the swing, as this equipment had no support for his head and neck. If Myles were to sit in a typical swing, he could hurt his neck; he wouldn't be able to sit upright and his little body needed extra support.

The boys had asked, "Is there any park he could play in?" and Hill had to say no. This was the first time her boys saw Down syndrome as a bad thing. They felt it wasn't fair and didn't understand why God would do this to their brother. Barely holding back tears of frustration, Hill gathered her boys and headed home.

Thanksgiving important time to cherish family

Thanksgiving has always been my favorite holiday because it's about appreciating, not accumulating. The fourth Thursday of November is the perfect combination of joyful human activities — family, feasting and taking time to count our blessings. I like that there's a holiday to express that without sounding churchy. It also doesn't hurt that I enjoy the special foods connected with it.

Thanksgiving was a big deal when I was growing up on Hilrose Dairy Farm. With at least 16-20 people to feed, Mom had to roast a huge turkey. Funny, it seemed about the same year after year, but Dad always said it was her best one ever. No one disagreed; you wouldn't be so bold as to argue with my father over something that serious. Mom's stuffing and gravy — if I live to be 100, I'll never be able to duplicate that.

After I started my own family, I continued to carry on familiar traditions such as going around the table with each participant sharing what they were thankful for. I remember so many of those moments. One of my favorite ites happened when my son was 8. He said he was thankful that his father "didn't tell Mom I drove the Jeep down the lane and hit a tree, not hard, just kinda bumped it," or when my tweener daughter said she was grateful her mom was an English teacher because "reading books is the most fun you can have in this house."

As the years passed, I hosted Thanksgivings for our blended family.

That tradition continued when Jon and I retired in Townsend, but then we started celebrating at my sister Carol's in Mequon after her husband, Dave, was diagnosed with multiple sclerosis. Our sister, Sharon, her husband, their daughters and special friends joined us. My daughter and granddaughter usually came, too. It was always a day filled with laughter and love.

Carol, a home economics major in college, worked overtime to make every detail perfect. Their condo was decorated as if it was being featured in House Beautiful Magazine. Seriously, it was like we were on the set of a Hallmark holiday movie. Her turkey melted in your mouth, and her stuffing was incredible. Each of us brought a side dish; my contribution was always homemade dinner rolls and cranberries. Instead of pumpkin pie, Sharon brought pumpkin cheesecake. Now I do not often do dessert. But that cheesecake? It was divine.

COVID interrupted our visits, and Dave's illness progressed so Carol was unable to host the past few years. In September, we discussed resuming the tradition, albeit on a scaled-back version. Then, out of the blue, she called on Oct. 2 to tell me she had been diagnosed with cancer. The oncologist told her it was incurable but treatable. She sounded upbeat, ready to fight, determined to resume caregiving for Dave.

Of my four sisters, I have always been closest to Carol. She was born 10 years after me, so she was my "living doll" for real. I fussed over her until Sharon came along to dislodge her from her lofty place. I spent time reading aloud school assignments to her, teaching her cursive, practicing my oratory for the annual 4-H Speaking Contest, showing off the latest dance steps featured on Dick Clark's "American Bandstand."

Imagine my shock Oct. 11 when I got the news that Carol had been hospitalized. The next day, I made the three-hour drive to Mequon. She was sedated, but she smiled and nodded and squeezed my hand when I showed her mementos I had brought that meant something special to both of us.

I tried to ease the pain and fear in her eyes by reading her a favorite bedtime story, but I couldn't stop choking up. So I just told her how much I loved her and what a great sister she was. The next day I held her hand as she drew her last breath, her hospice room full of family to comfort her and each other. I was heartbroken, bewildered and, yes, angry. How could this be happening? I couldn't get my head around it.

Fortunately, I had booked the next few days for a grandma-duty visit with my granddaughter. An 11-year-old is truly a balm for a broken heart. When I got home, I wrote Carol's obituary, the most difficult series of sentences I've ever put on paper. I wanted it to be perfect, like her Thanksgiving décor and dinner. It ends with her favorite Irish blessing: "Death invites a heartache no one can heal; love leaves a memory no one can steal."

So, this Thanksgiving, hug those you hold dear; tell them how much you love them. Don't squander the time you have together on petty disagreements. Make a memory no one can take away. Happy Thanksgiving.

That night, Hill approached her husband with a mandate, "We are going to build a playground." The sadness and disappointment of the afternoon at a park that could not accommodate her special needs child was the impetus needed to begin a project that would take the Hills on the intricate journey to secure the right of every little boy or girl: to play on a playground, no matter their ability.

"Down with Mylestones is a nonprofit my husband and I established," Hill said. "Our heart's desire is to help educate others about Trisomy 21 and other disabilities as well as bring resources and opportunities into our community. A lot of Myles' care is located in Appleton or Green Bay, such as occupational, speech and physical therapies, so we need to travel anytime he needs therapy."

Myles Hill, 3, smiles recently as he holds on to the couch for support in the family home. Because he has Down syndrome, he's not able to play in public parks the same way as other children, but his parents are working to develop a park in Clintonville that would include playground equipment for children of all abilities.

KAY REMINGER

Approaching Clintonville's city administrator and mayor, the Hills explained the idea of a playground, and to their great delight, the officials were more than happy to help make this happen. The area they felt best to accommodate the playground was to add onto Olen Park in Clintonville, which isn't as busy. They wanted to make it convenient for the surrounding areas, including but not limited to New London, Marion and Shawano.

The Hills touched base with physical therapists who work with Myles and other children with special needs, getting ideas on what equipment would be safe but universal, such as a five-point harness swing for more stabilization and a Jenn swing with a headrest. The merry-go-round would have three sections with one wide enough for a wheelchair, one section for someone to sit and a third section to stand, so it can accommodate any child and any level of ability.

The ideal is to have a big playset in which all wheelchairs can fit through the whole playset, according to Hill. An innovative wheelchair swing was discussed, one that can go back-and-forth and side-to-side to give the rider the motion of swinging. There would be a bay of swings that offer more support than a typical swing. Also incorporated would be a climber in a ninja-warrior-type style. Poured-in-place rubber would be used for the foundation. Unlike mulch and/or pea gravel, using this as the foundation is easier for wheelchairs and strollers.

"We want to stress how important it was to have something for all kids, not only for kids with disabilities," Hill said. "This park is to be inclusive. This equipment doesn't mean that typical kids can't go on it; it means that kids with special needs can."

AT A GLANCE

WHAT: Breakfast and Photos with Santa and Mrs. Claus, a benefit for Down With Mylestones
WHEN: 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Nov. 30
WHERE: Blue 52, W12850 County Road M, Caroline
ADMISSION: $20 adults, $5 children. Price includes breakfast, professional photo and kids' craft.

Hill noted there are challenges to having a Down syndrome child, as Myles is 3 but unable to talk or do other things. He has to do much more work than a typical child does, she said, which often generates questions from his brothers on "why."

"The benefits outweigh the challenges," Hill said. "He's given us a whole new way to look at the world. He's been working for six months on how to jump, and he doesn't give up. Myles takes perseverance to a whole new level. Something as simple as a leaf falling on his face makes him smile. He has such an appreciation for the smallest things."

The nonprofit was officially established a year ago in April with a board of directors in place.

"The nonprofit is founded on faith; that is our foundation," Hill said. "Second to that is if a community needs a park, it should be a park for all abilities, all kids. The gift of play needs to be available for all. Kids are wired to play; it's not just a fun time. It's all parts put together — cognitive, mental, physical and emotional — it's all those pieces together and helps build the character of the child."

cine Fish are bringing these back home to us, and I want to say these words today to thank the Creator for bringing the buffalo home to us," Grignon said.

After the prayer, a group of about a dozen young men sang a song in honor of the buffalo and thanked the Creator for protecting them on their journey. Then, the trailer gates were opened and the huge animals galloped onto the prairie toward their new family.

Elizabeth Bach, a research assistant for Nature Conservancy, said the Nachusa Grasslands preserve covers 4,000 acres in north central Illinois.

"The buffalo have access to 1,500 of those acres. They were reintroduced to Nachusa Grasslands in 2014, so they've been on our land now for about 10 years," Bach said.

The bison have become an integral part of the ecosystem, she said.

"They're shaping the native plant and animal community in our neighborhood," Bach said. "We have to keep the herd at a certain size so that that grazing is in balance with the other parts of the ecosystem. After several years, it got to the point where we needed to transfer some of these young ones."

That was the beginning of the collaboration with Medicine Fish and the Menominee Buffalo Initiative, Bach said.

"For the past three years, we've been able to take some of these yearlings who've been born at the Nachusa Grasslands Preserve and bring them to this amazing landscape up here and share," she said.

Medicine Fish plans to replicate the work done at Nachusa Grasslands as prairie restoration contributes to carbon sequestration, something the Menominee Nation has done since time immemorial and is exemplified through their world renowned forestry practices, Bryant Waupoose said.

"In addition to the ecological and environmental impact, Medicine Fish's vision is holistic wellness for the community," he said. "Buffalo rematriation provides incredible opportunities to bring people together to restore native plants through seed collection, community harvest, and events that inspire purpose and represent healing."

DNR proposes pre-2014 deer management units

Deer management boundaries may return to a pre-2014 habitat-based system rather than the current county boundaries in an effort to improve hunting and management. Although this system is only being considered in the Northern Forest Zone tier of counties, it seems likely it will be used in the rest of the state if the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources' Natural Resources Board approves the proposal in February, according to DNR deer program specialist Jeff Pritzl.

The DNR hosted a series of informational meetings this month in Woodruff, Cable, Adams and virtually to explain the plan and the timeline for its implementation. Pritzl noted that the proposed system likely would have fewer management units than the somewhat "micromanaged" units used prior to 2014 in a form of hybrid management used in other states.

The state switched to management of deer by counties in 2014 in response to hunters, forestry interests, tourism leaders, wildlife lovers and other stakeholders, as well as suggestions offered by nationally noted biologist James Kroll, better known as "Dr. Deer." County Deer Advisory Councils (CDACs) made up of various stakeholders have since guided the number and distribution of antlerless hunting permits in an effort to manage the deer population. The CDACs are led by representatives of the Wisconsin Conservation Congress.

The largest problem revealed with a decade of county management units is that there are different kinds of habitat and distribution of deer within each county, Pritzl explained. Northern hunters have faced the most difficulties with this system, because some areas of vast forests may have few deer, but permits may be issued based on the overall county population, which could have sections where deer are plentiful.

"Deer are creatures of the edge of habitat," Pritzl said.

Deer thrive in areas of mixed woods and croplands or recently harvested timber with fresh plant growth. In thicker woods, deer gravitate toward dwellings and towns, often where hunters can't access them.

Counties like Ashland and Iron, the only two counties in the 2024 gun season to allow only buck hunting, routinely see the fewest buck harvests in the state, he noted. Northern Forest Zone hunters have faced the problems of a "one-size-fits-all" county management system and expressed their concerns at the County Deer Advisory Council meetings as well as special hearings called by state legislators, Pritzl noted.

The DNR routinely reviews the management units every three years. Although the county management units offer little flexibility, a few counties, such as Oconto County, are split into the Northern Forest and Central Farmland zones because of their habitat diversity and varied deer distribution.

The proposed 26 DMUs in 19 counties use the same boundaries as they were prior to 2014. Pritzl said the DNR consulted with biologists and looked at changes in the habitat landscape, and all agreed that the earlier boundaries were still appropriate.

Another advantage of using the old boundaries is that comparisons of harvests, bear and wolf predation, winter kill and severity indexes can be made more easily.

Boundaries could change, based on public comments during a formal virtual hearing in January and consulting with members of the ceded territory of the Ojibwe (Chippewa) tribes, he noted.

The proposal will officially go to the Natural

This map shows the proposed numbered deer management units (DMUs) in the Northern Forest Zone that the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources plans to present to the Natural Resources Board in February. If approved, this would mark a return to habitat-based management units, used prior to 2014, rather than county-based units. The goal is to offer more flexibility in antlerless tag numbers within county boundaries, as requested by many hunters.

WISCONSIN DNR

Resources Board at its Feb. 25-26 meeting. In order for the new system to be implemented in next year's hunting season, the plan would need to be approved in the spring of 2025 so the process of CDAC review could be done, he said.

If the new habitat-based management unit system is approved, it probably would be applied to other portions of the state but possibly in a hybrid format that could combine county and habitat-based zones.

Issues with public versus private antlerless harvest authorizations (permits) also could be addressed in later years.

Lena/StAA falls 50-36 in state title game

Owen-Withee (12-0) completed an undefeated season by capturing the state 8-player football championship with a 50-36 victory over Lena/St. Thomas Aquinas (10-2) at South Wood County Stadium in Wisconsin Rapids on Nov. 16.

The Blackhawks scored touchdowns on their first four drives of the game. Gaining possession of the ball with only five seconds remaining in the first half may have kept them from scoring on every possession until their final drive of the game.

Statistically, the game was remarkably even. Owen-Withee gained 417 yards of total offense to Lena/St. Thomas Aquinas' 412 yards. The Titans actually had more than a four-minute advantage in possession time in the game.

After forcing a Titans' punt on their first possession to begin the game, Owen-Withee marched 86 yards on 10 plays to go ahead 8-0 after the successful two-point attempt. Mason Gay, who set the 8-player state record with six touchdowns in the game, capped the drive with a 3-yard run.

The Titans tied the score at 8-8 on the ensuing kickoff on a 95-yard return by Lucas Heimke and the successful two-point try. Just eight seconds later, the Blackhawks regained the lead at 16-8 with a 46-yard run by Gay on the first play from scrimmage following a failed onside kick. Lena/St. Thomas Aquinas scored on its next possession, going 80 yards in 12 plays to tie the game at 16-16 with a 27-yard pass from Calvin Peters to Ty Shallow at the 9:11 mark of the second quarter.

The Blackhawks would add two more Gay scoring runs of 5 and 34 yards to open a 30-16 halftime advantage. They took control of the game with a five-play, 55-yard drive on the first possession of the second half when Gay raced 37 yards to give Owen-Withee a 36-16 lead.

Peters plunged into the end zone on a 1-yard run to cap an 11-play, 64-yard drive to cut the Titans' deficit to 36-22 with 4:52 remaining in the third quarter. The Blackhawks responded with a touchdown on its next drive on a 44-yard pass from Dominic Sherwood to Tim Stock, who was alone behind the Titans' secondary to double-up the score at 44-22.

Shallow scored a rushing touchdown from a yard out to bring the Titans' back to within two scores at 44-30 with 9:58 to play in the fourth quarter. However, the Blackhawks answered with its final score of the game on an 11-yard Gay scamper, capping an eight-play, 54-yard drive with 5:47 remaining in the game. The Titans scored on the game's final play with a 12-yard pass from Peters to Shallow as time expired to account for the final score.

Gay accounted for most of the Blackhawks' offense, rushing for 321 yards and six scores. His rushing yardage total ranks second-most in championship game history. Sully Poehler ran for 35 yards on nine carries. Sherwood completed his one pass attempt for 44 yards and a touchdown. The Owen-Withee defense was led by Colin Fritz with 17 tackles, including 10 solos and a sack, and Sherwood contributed with 12 tackles.

Peters rushed 30 times for 178 yards and a score to lead the Lena/St. Thomas Aquinas offense. He also completed 10-of-16 passes for 122 yards and a pair of scores.

Max Peterson and Shallow each carried the ball eight times for 42 and 37 yards, respectively.

Shallow caught five passes for 74 yards and two touchdowns, and Max Peterson made four receptions for 51 yards. Peterson led the Titans' defense with 11 tackles.

Owen-Withee wins its first 8-player football title in the Blackhawks' first appearance in the championship game, and Lena/St. Thomas Aquinas finishes runner-up in its first experience in the state final.

Tyler Shallow is in the end zone following a touchdown in the state title game Nov. 16. Lena/St. Thomas Aquinas Academy lost 50-36 to Owen-Withee. ROSS PATTERMANN

Kapla takes over as Pulaski girls wrestling coach

Ashton Kapla and Cole Motiff will coach the Pulaski High School girls wrestling team this season.

Kapla replaces long-time PHS boys and girls wrestling coach Terry Manning, who started the girls program two years ago, as head coach. Motiff will continue his role as assistant coach.

Both are graduates of Pulaski High School and have been involved in Pulaski wrestling as athletes and coaches for many years. They both have served as assistant coaches for the girls program the past two years.

"We are excited to have Ashton Kapla and Cole Motiff back guiding our girls wrestling program at Pulaski High," said Janel Batten, PHS athletic and activities coordinator. "Their Pulaski wrestling backgrounds will be helpful moving forward, and we are thankful that they are back with us."

Kapla graduated from PHS in 2022. He is on pace to graduate from the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay in May 2025 with a degree in accounting. He is a credit analyst at Premier Community Bank.

Kapla, who began wrestling in first grade and in high school wrestled on varsity all four years and was a team captain, is excited about the opportunity.

"It allows me to give back to the sport that gave so much to me," he said.

Motiff, assistant girls wrestling coach, is a 2012 PHS graduate. He earned a degree in forest administration and utilization

He wrestled in the Pulaski wrestling program from kindergarten through his senior year of high school. He has been a volunteer youth wrestling coach since 2017, mainly working with third through fifth grade wrestlers.

"Coach Manning was also my head coach in high school. Over the last two seasons, I was very fortunate in being able to coach with him as the Red Raider girls wrestling team took shape," Motiff said. "I can't thank him enough for all he has done for Pulaski wrestling and for all he has done for me as an individual as well. Coach Kapla and I are both very excited for another season and for another opportunity to grow as a program."

Kapla urges PHS students to join in.

"Girls wrestling is the fastest-growing sport in the country, and I encourage anyone to come out and try it," he said.

Testing updates better reflect student learning

As a parent of two Wisconsin public school students, I pay close attention to how my kids are doing at school. We talk about how they are doing academically, as well as emotionally and socially. Like many caregivers, their well-being at school is a topic of conversation at my dinner table each night.

Despite my best efforts to stay informed, I often found myself confused by my kids' results on our state's required test, the Forward Exam, and what testing data actually means.

I've heard this same reaction from many families and educators over the years. What I learned was that our statewide assessment cut scores — the data markers that label a student "proficient" or not — were aligned to an entirely different test.

In recent years, Wisconsin's standards in various subjects were updated to better reflect what students should know and be able to do in the classroom at a given point in time. This meant the Forward Exam needed to be updated to accurately assess students on those learning goals, and that a standard setting was required to take place. That allowed us, for the first time, to also create a distinct year-over-year comparable student score for the subject of reading — a big step forward in supporting our bipartisan work on early literacy.

As state superintendent, I wanted to be sure experts and professionals — specifically classroom teachers — helped us address these alignment challenges. So, this past summer, my agency, the Wisconsin Department of Public Instruction, convened a group of 88 Wisconsin educators representing communities across the state, and different perspectives from various education sectors, to review and update our measures.

Their goal was to make sure we more accurately reflect where students perform academically and to align the standards to what's tested on our Wisconsin assessment. These changes make test results clearer and easier to understand for families like yours and mine.

I also want to offer some historical context. To fully understand how we got here, we need to go back more than a decade to when Wisconsin joined several states in aligning our test cut scores to the National Assessment of Educational Progress (NAEP) exam. Proficiency levels on this national test are considered an extremely high standard to meet, beyond grade-level knowledge. Overnight, NAEP's cut scores made it falsely appear as if the number of students proficient in reading and math decreased by 30%. This misalignment is exactly what we needed to change.

If standards are the units of measurement, the test is our tape measure. Until last year, we were teaching in pounds and measuring in miles. Our Wisconsin standards are grade level, so our Forward Exam performance levels should reflect where kids are on Wisconsin standards.

So let me be blunt — we are not lowering our standards; rather, we are reflecting actual student results using Wisconsin's strong academic standards.

I am proud of the work our state's educators did to align our test with Wisconsin's Academic Standards and provide families with results that better reflect what our students should know at each grade. In the coming years, these updates will provide our schools with better data as we work collectively to improve outcomes among students across our state.

In the end, it is not solely about numbers on a test. It's about giving our kids a clear path to success. By realigning proficiency levels to our state standards, we're not only improving the clarity of test results, but also reaffirming our commitment to educational excellence.

As parents, we deserve to understand how our kids are doing and what they need to thrive. With these updates, we can have more meaningful assessment conversations around the dinner table — ones rooted in honesty and transparency.

Jill Underly is the state superintendent of public instruction for Wisconsin.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Internet phishing labels leading to censorship

To the editor:

On Oct. 11, Fortiguard released a major update. Since then, I have experienced several blocked links in my emails when using the library's public wi-fi.

At casual glance, they appear to be legitimate blocking of shady sites, but these are sites I know and have been subscribing to for years, plus, I've recently gotten home internet, and these same sites are not getting blocked on my home connection.

The difference is that the public wi-fi is being filtered Fortiguard (aka Fortinet), and the blocked links are being labeled "Phishing" and/or "Newly Registered Domain" (which describes almost every political campaign site). The "phishing" label, in particular, seems to be levied only against domains with subject matter unfavorable to the Biden-Harris administration.

Unlike YouTube and Facebook, which, ultimately, are only single sites, this sort of shenanigans can cut people off from dozens of sites, simply by putting the domains on a list called "phishing" or other filter that many system administrators commonly block.

I tried to file a complaint with the Federal Communications Commission about this, since wi-fi would logically fall under "communication," but the FCC washed its hands of it and said that politically-motivated interference with election-related communications was an Federal Trade Commission issue.

The librarians seemed concerned when I told them about it, but nothing's been done. This is the same sort of censorship I experienced during the COVID lockdowns. How many people aren't getting access (or getting extremely limited access) to both sides because they depend on public internet access?

Wendy Goerl, Shawano

Be careful what you wish for in American elections

To the editor:

I am completely unknown to probably about 99.9% of you. I am a 78-year-old white woman (about to be 79) who has written no books. Nor ever been interviewed by anyone.

I am ashamed to be an American. I am disgusted and embarrassed. I cannot believe that millions of you voted for a convicted felon, a convicted rapist, a misogynist, a racist, an anti-Semite and, oh, by the way, a liar and cheat. Obviously, you see something positive in him that I do not.

Oh, you say he is a great businessman. Really? His father gave him $400 million, which he squandered after six bankruptcies. He has been convicted of fraudulent business practices and fined $450 million.

You say he is good for the economy. He promises to make bread and rent cheaper.

Also, he said he will be a "dictator," admires Hitler and other tyrants. Well, of course. Who doesn't want cheaper bread and rent? He will fix it. That's what the Germans said about Hitler in 1939.

Let's talk about all the people he wants to deport. Sound familiar, again, to Hitler, who "deported," killed, millions of Jews, gypsies, "homosexuals," "cripples" and others, well, because he could?

Just for the record, I have voted in every election since I was 18 years old. I have knocked on doors, handed out literature, talked to potential voters and championed the cause for a just, fair and equitable America. I will continue to do that. Despite the election results.

The upshot is that more than half of America voted for him. Now deal with him. He is your "hero."

Plus, your bread will not be cheaper.

Katie Bally, Shawano

I know of something amazing that should be in the newspaper! I should drop them a line at news@newmedia-wi.com

Leading up to Sunday6s game against Chicago, the Packers’ special teams coordinator Rich Bisaccia saw a potential gap in the Bears’ field goal protection on film and relayed that to Karl Brooks and the rest of Green Bay’s blocking unit. With the game on the line, Brooks charged, raised his left hand and got his middle finger on Cairo Santos’ attempt at a game-winning 46-yard field goal to preserve a 20-19 Packers victory as time expired. According to the Elias Sports Bureau, it was the second time the Packers blocked a field goal on the final play of a game. The other was nearly 85 years ago during a 7-6 win over the Cleveland Rams on Nov. 26, 1939. Brooks also blocked a field goal against Minnesota last year.

DIFFERENT KEY, BUT SAME HAPPY TUNE

Jordan Love ran for a go-ahead score in the closing minutes, and Green Bay hung on to beat Chicago 20-19 on Sunday. It helped make up for a play earlier in the quarter, when Love scrambled on a fourth down play, headed toward the end zone but was pulled down shy of the goal line as the Packers turned the ball over on downs.

Brooks blocks Bears game-winning field goal attempt to give Pack victory

BY LUKE REIMER
Green & Gold Express

Another chapter was added in the legendary Green Bay Packers and Chicago Bears rivalry this past Sunday. With three seconds left in the game, the Bears were set up to kick a game-winning field goal. As the kick went up, Packers defensive lineman Karl Brooks got his hand up to block the attempt giving Green Bay a 20-19 victory in Chicago.

“I just got penetration – I just wanted it more and I got a hand up,” said Brooks. The field goal attempt was set up after Green Bay took a one-point lead on a Jordan Love 1-yard touchdown rush with 2:59 left in the game. On the ensuing possession, Chicago quarterback Caleb Williams was sacked twice on the first two plays, setting up a third-and-19. On third down, Williams rolled to his right and fired a dart to wide receiver Rome Odunze to bring up fourth-and-3. Williams then connected with Odunze again to pick up the first down. From there, Chicago milked the clock, eventually finding itself with a second-and-8 to set up the game-winning attempt.

Love finished the game completing 13-of-17 passes for 261 yards, one touch-

Christian Watson set a career high with 150 yards on just four catches, including a 60-yarder that set up Jordan Love’s touchdown run, and the Packers (7-3) avoided falling further behind Detroit and Minnesota in the NFC North.

GREG MELLIS | GREEN & GOLD EXPRESS

down and one interception. Christian Watson was the main benefactor through the air, as he compiled 150 yards on four receptions. The 150-yard game for Watson is his highest yardage total as a pro. Josh Jacobs added 58 yards on four receptions, while Jayden Reed recorded 23 yards and a touchdown on two receptions. As for the ground game, Jacobs was the leader for Green Bay, as the Alabama alum totaled 76 yards and touchdown on 18 carries. Love added another 18 yards and a touchdown on four carries. On Chicago’s side of the ball, Williams completed 23-of-31 passes for 231 yards and no touchdowns. Odunze led the Bears in receiving, as he caught six passes for 65 yards. DJ Moore and Keenan Allen added 62 yards on seven catches and 41 yards on four catches, respectfully. D’Andre Swift found success on the ground in this one, as he totaled 71 yards on 14 carries, scoring a touchdown. Roschon Johnson added the second touchdown on the ground for the Bears, while Williams used his legs nine times to pick up 70 rushing yards. In a hard fought divisional matchup, Green Bay’s best drive of the game came immediately after the opening kickoff. Jacobs picked up 25 yards on the ground on four rushes, while Romeo Doubs hauled in a 17-yard reception. After Emmanuel Wilson broke free for a 13-yard rush, Love connected with Reed for a 15-yard touchdown.

KEYS TO THE GAME

Big names could mean big trouble for Packers

By JACOB WESTENDORF
Green & Gold Express

The Green Bay Packers' second half of the season is off and running.

Their game against Chicago on Sunday was their first of three in a span of 11 days.

The middle game of that stretch is against what feels like a perennial thorn in their side.

The San Francisco 49ers will be coming to Lambeau Field. It's their first trip to Lambeau since what turned out to be Aaron Rodgers' last play-off game as a Packer.

The 49ers won 13-10 that night.

They ended the Packers' season last year with a 24-21 win over Jordan Love and company.

This year, the roles are slightly reversed. The 49ers have been ravaged by injuries but have rebounded like the strong team that they usually have been under Kyle Shanahan.

They've lost Brandon Aiyuk for the season but will have Christian McCaffery back, after an ominous injury cycle that plagued him early in the season.

The Packers need more wins against NFC opponents, as this game could help decide another tiebreaking scenario in a competitive NFC. The Packers do not have many of those advantages at this point with losses to Philadelphia, Minnesota and Detroit already on their resume.

Here are the keys to finally getting the monkey off their back, and beating their arch nemesis.

Christian McCaffery

Running backs do not matter is the saying that goes around social media. Apparently Christian McCaffery did not get the memo. The 49ers win more than 80% of the time when McCaffery has been active since they traded for him.

They are around .500 when he does not play.

McCaffery is as dual threat as it comes in the NFL. He's productive in the backfield as a runner but also dangerous as a receiver. He caught six Josh Jacobs (8) celebrates with Jordan Love (10) as Tucker Kraft (85) looks on during the Packers 20-19 victory over the Chicago Bears on Nov. 17. It was the 11th straight win for the Packers in the longtime rivalry.

GREG MELLIS | GREEN & GOLD EXPRESS

passes in his first game back in the lineup. He's still finding his way in the run game, but he's someone the Packers have seen plenty of.

McCaffery scored twice the last time these two teams met in January. He's one of the best players in all of football.

On a star-studded team like the 49ers, McCaffery is the star that shines the brightest. Keeping him under control needs to be priority number one for Jeff Hafley and his defensive staff.

Special Teams

The last time these two teams met at Lambeau Field, the Packers' special teams' unit was historically bad.

It was a trend that was noticeable all season long. It reared its ugly head at the worst possible time, as a blocked punt that was returned for a touchdown was a big reason San

The Packers' defense generated back-to-back sacks of Caleb Williams on the Bears' last drive of the game. Facing third-and-19, Williams regrouped and hit fellow rookie Rome Odunze with passes on back-to-back plays to put the ball in Packers territory.

GREG MELLIS | GREEN & GOLD EXPRESS

Francisco was able to pull off the upset on that cold January night.

This time around, the roles are reversed. The 49ers special teams unit is horrendous, ranked 31st in the NFL by FTM Fantasy's DVOA stat.

Their kicker, Jake Moody, has struggled mightily since being drafted out of Michigan.

Their coverage units have struggled, and their return game is not particularly explosive unless they put Deebo Samuel back as a returner.

This could be a big week for Keisean Nixon as the temperatures are supposed to drop, potentially leading to more opportunities for the two-time first-team All-Pro return man.

It's rare that the Packers have an advantage in the third phase of the game, but this week they should. A few big plays in this phase could swing the game in Green Bay's favor.

Packers tackles vs. Nick Bosa

Bosa is one of the premier rushers in all of football. It's rare that a player qualifies as a game-wrecker, but Bosa certainly is one.

He's one of, if not the best player in football at his position.

Putting pressure on Jordan Love, or any quarterback, can make them prone to more mistakes.

Love has been prone to those this season, and could be more affected if Bosa has his way.

He lines up on both sides of the line of scrimmage, which will pit him against both of Green Bay's tackles.

They'll need to protect Love. If they can, there is room in this secondary for Green Bay's talented pass catching group to roam.

If they don't, this game could look like a re-run of so many matchups between these two teams in the past five years.

HISTORY: The 49ers and Packers have been a tale of two eras. In the 1990s, and early 2000s, Brett Favre and the Packers dominated the 49ers, beating them in three separate playoff games.

Since the days of Jim Harbaugh stalking the sidelines for San Francisco, the 49ers have owned the Packers, especially in the playoffs.

They bludgeoned Aaron Rodgers four times and continued their dominance in last year's 24-21 victory in the Divisional Round.

Overall the Packers lead the series 38-34-1.

The last time the two teams met at Lambeau Field was the Divisional Round in January 2022, where the 49ers won on the strength of a blocked punt that was returned for a touchdown.

The last time the two teams played at Lambeau Field in the regular season was a Monday night classic in October 2018.

Aaron Rodgers led a late drive that culminated in a short Mason Crosby field goal to give the Packers a 33-30 victory.

COACHES: Packers - Matt LaFleur fifth season, 63-30. 49ers - Kyle Shanahan, eighth season 69-55.

While Green Bay came away with the victory, the team struggled again when it came to the red zone. The most notable occurrence came in the second quarter after Green Bay dove down to the Bears 15-yard line. On the ensuing play, Love dropped back and threw a pass intended for tight end Tucker Kraft. The ball sailed over Kraft's head and was intercepted by Chicago defensive back Terrell Smith.

In total, Green Bay came away with points on three of its five red zone trips. While 60% isn't horrible, Jacobs knows the offense is capable of so much more.

"We just have to execute, you know," said Jacobs, on Green Bay scoring just 20 points in the game. "When we get in the red zone, you know, we have to execute. We have to make plays when it is time, and it is really just as simple as that. We were moving the ball, we didn't really feel like we had a problem with that ... we just have to be better when it is time."

The Packers have now won each of the past 11 games against its NFC North rival. More important though, the win pushes the Packers to a 7-3 record. With the Washington Commanders losing to the Philadelphia Eagles, the Packers jumped up to the sixth seed in the NFC playoff picture. At four games over .500, Green Bay now has an 85% chance to make the playoffs according to the New York Times NFL Playoff Predictor.

The Packers will look to improve those playoff odds, as it takes on the San Francisco 49ers this week.

The last time the two teams met at Lambeau Field was the Divisional Round in January 2022, where the 49ers won on the strength of a blocked punt that was returned for a touchdown.
