Carolina Lorge, Wittenberg, visited with Santa and Mrs. Claus on Nov. 30 at the Caroline Legion. The Breakfast with Santa event was sponsored by Down with Mylestones, a nonprofit organization building a playground in Clintonville to accommodate children with disabilities. As for Carolina, she had earlier told her parents she wanted a baby brother for Christmas. Marcus and Kelly Lorge are expecting a son, to be named, Colten, around Dec. 11. Olsen marks 62 years of fire service

By NEW MEDIA STAFF

Honors and accolades – and some good ribbing – flowed throughout a festive night in November when Wittenberg Fire Department’s Richard “Dick” Olsen was celebrated for 62 years of service.

Olsen was joined by members of the village of Wittenberg, Town of Wittenberg, Wittenberg Fire Department, family and friends.

After a catered meal and celebratory cake, Olsen was presented with an engraved golden axe.

Fire department staff recognized Olsen for his dedication, sacrifice and humility.

“Today, we celebrated over 60 years of service for one of our own,” the department posted on its Facebook page.

“His knowledge, history, stories and patience (are) still brought to our meeting tables today. We cherish every moment he shares with us. We thank Dicky Olsen for his many years of service, and we thank his family for allowing him to serve the greater Wittenberg service area.”

Those in attendance shared stories about Olsen – one of the secrets for Olsen being the first to respond to fire calls was that he laid out his clothes and fire boots every night.

Leeder trial could reach early resolution

Attorney says negotiations with state ongoing

By LEE PULASKI
City Editor

The trial for Wittenberg resident Mindy S. Leeder is still on, but there are indications that a settlement could be closer to reality.

During a hearing Nov. 26, Joseph Kaupie, Leeder’s attorney, said that he and Shawano-Menominee County District Attorney Greg Parker are continuing to negotiate and working toward a resolution in the case that would call off the jury trial planned for January.

In spite of the hope for a resolution, Kaupie and Parker submitted motions and jury instructions to be considered. Circuit Court Judge William Kussel warned both sides that any changes in the case need to occur no later than two days before the trial begins.

Another pre-trial hearing was scheduled for 1:15 p.m. Dec. 20 in Branch II of the Shawano County Courthouse.

Leeder is currently charged with one count of first-degree recklessly endangering safety and one misdemeanor count of disorderly conduct.

According to the criminal complaint, deputies were dispatched May 9, 2023, to Wittenberg for a report of a weapons offense. The caller claimed a woman was at Pond Park and pointing a firearm at multiple children. When arriving on scene, a deputy was shown a video of Leeder as she allegedly pulled a gun from her waistband and pointed it at one of the children, who was recording the video.

The deputies were informed of the house that Leeder entered. When officers pulled up to the residence, Leeder walked out of the house with her hands in the air, complying with law enforcement officials’ orders. The gun that Leeder had allegedly pointed at the children was found inside the residence.

Wittenberg youth performs in 'Seussical the Musical'

Halley Innes, of Wittenberg, was among those taking to the stage to perform in "Seussical the Musical" Nov. 29-30 at the Veningat Theater inside the UW Center for Civic Engagement, 625 Stewart Ave., Wausau. Performances were put on by Central Wisconsin Children's Theatre. Innes played the part of the Young Kangaroo. The family friendly production featured beloved characters like Horton the Elephant, Gertrude McFuzz and the Cat in the Hat, in a song-filled adventure that combined elements from several of Dr. Seuss' most famous stories. "Seussical the Musical" is a celebration of imagination and the power of believing in the impossible," said director Cindi Strobel. "It's a wonderful opportunity for our talented young performers to showcase their skills and for families to come together for a heartwarming experience."

the park at the time told law enforcement that Leeder came to the park to yell at them because they were allegedly bullying her children. The children said that they were not bullying. They stated that Leeder was pointing the gun at them and waving it around in the air. The children reportedly told Leeder that they were going to call the police. From there, the criminal complaint states that Leeder put the gun in her pocket and went to the Front Street residence, where law enforcement arrested her. In an interview with Leeder, deputies claim she stated that she could hear her daughter yelling when the daughter was at Pond Park. Upon hearing the yelling, Leeder stated that she wanted to walk over to the park to see what was going on. She also stated that it is common for her to take a concealed firearm with her when leaving the residence, as she has a valid concealed carry permit. She claimed the firearm was loaded. Leeder told deputies that when she was leaving her residence, her daughter came home and reported the bullying, but did not specify what the bullying was, according to the criminal complaint. Leeder told law enforcement that her children have experienced bullying at Pond Park in the past. When addressing the group of children at Pond Park, Leeder said that the children became argumentative and began to form a semi-circle around her, according to the complaint. She allegedly told the children that she had a firearm and, when asked if it was real, she allegedly pulled the gun out of her pocket. Leeder reportedly pointed the gun in the air without putting her finger on the trigger, according to the complaint, saying that she did not point the gun at any of the children and was being situationally aware of her surroundings. She said that the children got scared and that she put the gun back into her pocket after holding it in the air. When questioned by law enforcement whether presenting the firearm was necessary, Leeder reportedly said: "It probably wasn't; I was probably just nervous and scared. I don't like confrontation, to be honest."

Church events offer support for those grieving

The holiday season, often filled with joy and celebration, can be a challenging time for those grieving a loss or navigating personal hardships such as job transitions, relationship changes or other life struggles. To offer comfort and support during this difficult time, a Blue Christmas Service and Navigating the Holidays After Loss support group will be held Dec. 15 at Zion Lutheran Church, 1254 S. Union St., Shawano.

The Blue Christmas Service, beginning at 10:30 a.m., is a contemplative worship experience designed for those who may find the season overwhelming. This gentle and reflective service provides a space to pause, honor complex emotions and seek hope and healing. A light lunch will follow, leading into the afternoon support group session.

The Navigating the Holidays After Loss support group, held from noon to 1:30 p.m., offers a safe and supportive environment for participants to share their experiences, learn practical tools for managing holiday traditions and discover ways to honor their grief while engaging with the season in meaningful ways.

"This event is for anyone who finds themselves struggling during the holidays," said Nancy Schultz, event coordinator. "Whether you're grieving the loss of a loved one, a job, a relationship or simply feel overwhelmed by life's changes, this day offers a chance to pause, reflect and connect with others who understand. It's about finding hope and peace, even in the midst of sorrow."

Advance registration is required for the lunch and support group. To reserve your spot, contact Schultz at 715-390-4540 or email health@shawanozion.org.

Breakfast with Santa ... and more

Lisa Hill flips some pancakes at the Caroline Legion on Nov. 30. Her nonprofit organization, Down with Mylestones, organized the Breakfast with Santa to raise funds for an all-inclusive playground in Clintonville. The entire project is expected to cost $240,000, and about $175,000 has been raised so far. The website www.downwithmylestones.com and its Facebook page show where the Hills' journey is documented and events are shared.

Ameliyah Buettner, of Shawano, deposits her letter to Santa in a mailbox at the Caroline Legion. With the help of her father, she drew up her wish list for Christmas, which is fewer than three weeks away.

Benjamin Zuehl, of Clintonville, concentrates and carefully paints his wooden car at the craft table at the Caroline Legion on Nov. 30. In addition to crafts, there was breakfast, a chance to write to Santa, a visit with Santa and Mrs. Claus, and prizes.

Dayna Conratt straightens up the table with prizes at the Breakfast with Santa event in Caroline on Nov. 30. Within the first hour, more than 80 people were served, including the 50 who had pre-registered. Proceeds will be used to build an all-inclusive playground.

Malachi Tessmer, of Clintonville, enjoys his breakfast at the Caroline Legion on Nov. 30. The breakfast event was also a fundraiser for Down with Mylestones, a nonprofit organization working to building an all-inclusive playground at a park in Clintonville. FARM LIFE FROM A FARM WIFE

Everyone has something unique to offer

The text came in and, brightening up, I noticed it was from my sister-in-law whom I love as a sister. While I usually smile or even laugh out loud, this text had me knit my brows in consternation.

“Wanna come to a Christmas craft party?”

Walking into any craft store has me breaking out in hives. It makes me anxious and frozen and overwhelmed, and my eyes glaze over. It's like I develop a serious case of brain fog. Do I select the curly-ques? Colored glitter or neutral? (Is neutral glitter even a thing?) Studs, spikes, buttons, flowers, symbols? I mean, the choices are endless. Then when/if I do decide, what on earth goes where and how?

I'd much rather sit in a quiet house in front of my computer with a blank Word Doc open.

Reconcile a checkbook.

Clean a calf pen.

Seriously.

So when my sister-in-law invited me, my first instinct was a knee-jerk reaction to say no, but thank you for thinking of me. I always have a place at her table, always, and I know that.

Pondering the invite, I began to consider a thought: “In order to have a friend, you must be a friend” and say yes to some things that I might have a propensity to decline. It could be a matter of blessing God or it may not matter one way or the other to God, but it's a conviction of the heart — not a condemnation, but a gentle nudge.

Now I know that my dear sis is also my dear friend, so I don't have to really work at this relationship. She'd love me whatever my answer, but I felt deep in my heart, to respect this precious woman, I should say yes.

Walking into her craft shed, she and her daughters had tables fashioned together, making a large square, so that all the guests were facing each other, very conducive to conversation (and help). The tables were laid with fresh plastic tablecloths to handle any paint or glue drippings. At each place was a rounded-top, flat-bottomed slab of raw, pre-cut pine board — the hat. This was our project.

There were paint brushes and paint, Mod Podge, yarn for brim and tassel, custom-made stickers (thanks to a vinyl-cutting machine), and a variety of other embellishments which made my head spin. There were miscellaneous books of cardstock in a variety of holiday prints and patterns. A crafter would have thought they'd died and went to heaven. I just thought I'd died.

I was wide-eyed lost. Turning to a niece at my left, we made eye contact and started giggling. She and I are the ones in our family who didn't get the creative gene. Oh, she's surely more adept than me, but I was relieved I had a sort of comrade to commiserate with.

There were instructions from the niece in charge (who, like her mama, happens to be stunningly creative) that left me baffled. It was like she was speaking Swahili.

We started in. Putting on my big girl pants, I rolled up my figurative sleeves and began to make decisions. I actually started to have some fun.

Glancing around the room, the thought occurred to me that there was a lovely diversity of females present. We each added our own expertise to the whole of creation.

One was a nurse, another a stay-at-home mom who homeschools her two active children. One was an office manager, another a counselor, one a farmer, another one a social worker, one a teacher — almost all were mothers with young children, many with more than one.

I am blessed to have the opportunity to write feature stories. The people I've interviewed have been innovators; visionaries who've forged ahead by grit and strength and a belief that with their unique talents and abilities, they are able to offer a product or service that few others can.

I've had the privilege of interviewing a homesteader, a gal who owns a mobile food truck, an alpaca farmer, a nonprofit that finds homes for stray cats, a tree cutter, a mom with a special-needs child who launched a nonprofit to establish a playground where children of any ability

Garden pests can wreak havoc on plants in winter

Depending on the severity of the winter, rodents, such as rabbits and voles, can pose problems for certain plants, notably woody trees and shrubs.

Hungry rodents, depending on food availability, may begin to nibble away at the fresh, tender bark of trees and shrubs, creating a girdling effect that, eventually, could kill the plant.

For this reason, many gardeners choose to protect trees and shrubs over the winter season in a number of different ways.

Tree and shrub guards can be purchased at many garden centers and home and garden stores. These may be plastic, metal, wire or other material. You can also make your own by simply coiling chicken wire or mesh around the tree trunk or base, anything to prevent hungry rodents from accessing that thin outer layer of bark.

There are sprays and repellents available, but these are not trustworthy enough to work for the entire winter keeping pests away from your precious plants. They may require repeated application. A physical barrier is a much better option.

There are also plant tapes and wraps that are available, but, again, these aren't reliable. They peel off and, in some cases, can even damage the plant.

For larger shrubs, wire barriers are best. You can purchase pre-made shrub barriers out of mesh or wire, or simply unroll the material to create your own. For awkward or large shrubs, you may wish to drive some stakes into the ground first around the plant, then unroll your chicken wire or mesh around that border.

As for how high the barrier should go, the general guideline is about 18 inches over the highest snow line you can estimate. So, for example, if you have experienced about a foot of snow in your backyard, the barrier should reach that height, height, plus an additional 18 inches, or a 30-inch high barrier. This ensures that your shrub stems should be protected.

Whether you use ready-made tree guards and barriers or create your own, now is the time to get to work protecting any trees and shrubs, especially young ones, from hungry rabbits, voles and other critters.

Protecting marginally hardy plants from winter is cold is another garden chore best done now in late November or early December.

Many varieties of evergreens or conifers are susceptible to winter burn, caused by drying winds and the harsh winter sun reflecting from the snow. Normally, this happens on south-facing garden beds and borders. Simply wrapping these conifers in burlap or loose canvas shielding is usually all that is needed to protect these plants from the drying effects of winter burn. Keeping plants well watered into late November and early December also helps control the effects of the wind and sun.

Plants such as certain hydrangeas, roses, butterfly bush and Japanese maples can be protected by applying a layer of mulch over the base of the plant, or a chicken wire cage stuffed with fallen leaves. The important thing is not to do this too early. If we apply a thick layer of mulch or leaves too soon, the plants may bake beneath this layer, causing more harm than good.

Some varieties of Japanese maples and other ornamental woody plants that are marginally hardy in our area benefit from some extra protection during the winter season.

It is usually not necessary to apply mulch layers or leaves until mid- to late December, whenever we see our first subzero temperatures. The most common mistake gardeners make is completely covering these plants with mulch or leaves much too early, causing them to literally bake if we reach temperatures in the 40s and 50s in December and January, like we did last year. Be patient and wait for the cold.

can play like any little kid should be able to play, a young woman who owns a head spa salon, and a restaurateur adding a Puerto Rican flair to a Midwestern establishment. All fascinating people.

These examples, along with all those gals at the craft party, left me with a sweet optimism that this world holds so many wonderful people who care and want to bring their own beauty and vision to God's good earth, making it a better place for all.

To quote Leo Buscagila: "Your talent is God's gift to you. What you do with it is your gift back to God." Thomas A. Edison once said, "If we did all the things we are capable of, we would literally astound ourselves."

Everyone has something unique to offer. Find your niche.

Kay Reminger was born and raised on a dairy farm, and she married her high school sweetheart, who happened to farm for a living in Leopolis. Writing for quite a few years, she remains focused on the blessings of living the ups and downs of rural life from a farm wife's perspective.

NEW Media is looking for a reporter to work out of our Oconto Falls office. Most of the work would involve covering municipal, county board, school and community stories, as well as features on some of the people and groups that call Oconto County home.

We seek talented journalists who can seize someone's attention by being a talented wordsmith and photographer in a fast-paced news environment where digital comes first. While the office is a base of operations, we want someone who'll be out in the community gathering the news.

All are welcome to apply, including recent or pending college graduates. Preference is for the candidate to live in Oconto County or be willing to relocate there to be nearby when news takes places. Photography and copy editing skills are a must.

Send a resume, cover letter, and four to six samples of your work to Editor Kevin Passon at kpasson@newmedia-wi.com. Put "Reporter — Oconto Falls" in the subject header.

Holiday decorating fun but should also be safe

Decorating for the holidays is a fun activity many people take part in during the season. Decking the halls can help us connect to family traditions, create beauty for others to enjoy and light up the chilly, dark, wintry nights.

While folks string lights and hang ornaments this year, they should make sure to also keep safety top of mind. While the addition of candles, a Christmas tree and decorations spread cheer, they can also bring some hazards.

“As a dedicated holiday decorating enthusiast, I always keep safety first,” said Dr. Cynthia Fisher, ThedaCare family medicine physician. “I encourage everyone to do the same as they embrace the fun and joy of this tradition.”

Fire risks ramp up during the holiday season for multiple reasons. These can include increased use of candles, flammable seasonal decorations, frayed cords and unsafe cooking practices.

According to the National Fire Protection Association, nearly one in five Christmas tree fires start due to lamps or bulbs, and 8% result from use of candles. Fires also increase during the season due to increased fireplace use and spending more time in the kitchen.

Follow these tips to keep your home safe from fires:

- Inspect holiday lights before you put them up. Replace light sets with broken or cracked sockets, frayed or bare wires or loose connections.
- Turn off holiday lights before going to bed or when you leave the house.
- Don’t use indoor lights outdoors and vice versa.
- Never nail, tack or stress wiring when hanging lights. Keep plugs off the ground, away from puddles and snow.
- Don’t overload extension cords.
- Keep candles away from flammable materials. Place candles at least 12 inches away from anything that burns to ensure children or pets cannot reach them. Never leave candles unattended.
- If using a live tree, cut off about two inches of the trunk to expose fresh wood for better water absorption. Water it daily, and remove it from your home when it’s dry.

- Place your tree at least 3 feet away from fireplaces, radiators and other heat sources. Ensure doorways are not blocked.
- When cooking or baking, don’t leave the stove unattended. Periodically check the oven to ensure nothing has spilled.

“It’s also important to make sure your home has working smoking detectors, especially near sleeping areas,” Fisher said.

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission reports 160 people are injured daily during the holiday season, with most incidents involving falls.

“Falls can increase this time of year for lots of reasons,” Fisher said. “In addition to inclement weather, people may work with equipment they might not normally use, such as ladders.”

When using a ladder, make sure it has stable placement, and wear shoes that allow for good traction. Losing your balance on a ladder can cause you to jump versus fall. This could lead to serious orthopedic injuries. If using a ladder at a high height, consider placing crash pads or mats alongside the ladder. Ladders should extend at least 3 feet above your roof or the surface to which you’re attaching lights.

Don’t stand on your toes or the top rung of the ladder. The second rung from the top is as high as you should climb on a step ladder. If you’re at increased risk for falls, consider skipping climbing ladders. Instead, opt for other types of decorating.

Don’t stand on tables or chairs when decorating. Clear pathways of trip hazards, such as clutter, power cords or extra furniture. Fix uneven walkways and steps inside and outside the home.

It’s wonderful to experience the holidays through the eyes of a child. As they take in the joy, ensure young ones stay safe. Risks can include trips and falls around cords, choking hazards with small decorations, cuts from breakable objects and burns.

Holiday toy tips: Consider safety and avoid scams

Shopping for gifts this holiday season? There are many factors to consider when searching for the perfect present, especially when the recipient is a child. The Wisconsin Department of Agriculture, Trade and Consumer Protection (DATCP) encourages shoppers to keep safety in mind while searching for the best holiday deals.

When buying for a young child either in-person or online, always check for potential hazards. Look on the packaging or for information posted online about product warnings and age grading. Taking a few moments to review labels might reveal:

- Small parts, sharp edges, magnets and other choking or suffocation hazards.
- Flame resistance (especially important for toys with fabrics).
- Safety verification from ASTM International, including art materials with ASTM D4236 labeling or toys that meet ASTM F963 safety standards.

Don't rely on labeling alone. Examine products before purchasing to identify any potential unlabeled hazards such as projectiles, small batteries and the risk of breaking or splintering. Toys can sometimes present unexpected danger. Even if your gift will be given to an older child, ask yourself whether a younger child who also lives in the household might access it.

Lastly, consider including safety gear with your gift, like a helmet with a bike or scooter.

Every year, many consumers face the common struggle of finding the year's most popular toys still in stock. If your search takes you online, be aware that scammers may take advantage of your gift-giving spirit.

Be cautious of unfamiliar websites and sellers, and verify familiar websites are really the platform they appear to be – especially if they advertise popular products at uncommonly low prices. Fake and imposter websites use these tactics to trick you into “buying” an out-of-stock product, but chances are you won't receive anything and will just send money and your payment information to a scammer.

Never enter your payment information before confirming a website is legitimate, and be skeptical of third-party sellers of otherwise out-of-stock items.

Shawano/Bonduel boys hockey opens season with wins over Chequamegon, Rhinelander

Shawano/Bonduel 8,
Chequamegon/Phillips/
Butternut 2

Seven players found the net as Shawano/Bonduel scored four goals in each of the first two periods to defeat Chequamegon/Phillips/Butternut 8-2 at the Crawford Center.

Gavin Hundt, the only player with more than one goal, got both of his in the first period. He opened the scoring just 31 seconds into the game with an assist from Jeremy Helmuth. Chequamegon tied the score just 28 seconds later.

Hundt and Helmuth then assisted on a goal by Blake Swedberg at 8:45 to put Shawano back in the lead, a portion they never relinquished again. Waylon Snider scored at 12:10 with help from Wyatt Schroeder, and Hundt had his second goal at 14:55 with help from Max Huntington and Swedberg to put Shawano up 4-1.

The second period was all Shawano.

Lung cancer possible for non-smokers

While most non-smokers might think they are not at risk for lung cancer, that is not always accurate. While it's true that most cases of the disease are linked to smoking, an estimated 10% to 20% of people with lung cancer have never picked up a cigarette. Nearly 250,000 Americans receive a lung cancer diagnosis each year. Lung cancer is the third-most common cancer in the United States, and it remains the leading cause of cancer death. It's especially important for people with a history of smoking to get screened for lung cancer. At the same time, everyone should know the signs and symptoms of lung cancer. "If something feels amiss or you're experiencing a new symptom such as cough, shortness of breath or fatigue for a sustained period of time, it's always a good idea to check in with your primary care provider," said Dr. Shaneli Fernando, radiation oncologist with ThedaCare Cancer Care. Each year, approximately 20,000 to 40,000 non-smokers throughout the United States are diagnosed with lung cancer, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC). A non-smoker is defined as people who have never smoked or smoked fewer than 100 cigarettes in their lifetime. While some non-smokers develop lung cancer for no clear reason, researchers attribute many cases to two main culprits: second-hand smoke and radon. Secondhand smoke is defined as exposure to tobacco products. It can cause disease and premature death among people who do not smoke. There's no safe level of exposure to secondhand smoke. Even brief exposure can cause immediate harm, the CDC states. Radon is a naturally occurring gas that can leak into homes and is common in Wisconsin. An estimated one in 10 homes in Wisconsin has high radon levels, according to the Wisconsin Department of Health Services. The agency recommends people have their home's radon level tested. If the result comes back high, homeowners can consider installing a radon mitigation system. Factors including air pollution and a family history of lung cancer also can contribute to an increased risk for developing the disease. "Lung cancer symptoms are the same regardless of whether you're a smoker or not," Fernando said. "While the disease often doesn't have symptoms in its early stages, some people will develop signs." Symptoms include the following: • Coughing: Lung cancer can cause a cough that doesn't go away or gets worse. It also may lead to coughing up bloody or rust-colored phlegm. • Wheezing and shortness of breath: You may develop wheezing — a high-pitched whistle when you breathe, or difficulty drawing a breath. • Infections that don't resolve: This could be a case of bronchitis or pneumonia that doesn't go away or keeps coming back, despite treatment. • Chest pain: The discomfort often worsens with deep breathing, coughing or laughing. • Hoarseness: Your voice may become quiet or raspy. • Poor appetite and weight loss: You may experience loss of appetite or lose weight without trying. • Feeling tired or weak: You may feel fatigued, even with adequate rest. It can be tricky to pinpoint lung cancer symptoms because many can occur with common illnesses and ailments such as colds, viruses and allergies, Fernando said. "We hope everyone will be aware of their bodies and get medical care for symptoms that are concerning," she said. "Seeing your doctor will help you get the treatment you need."

Advisory forecast should be viewed before spreading manure

The Wisconsin Department of Agriculture, Trade and Consumer Protection (DATCP) is reminding farmers and manure applicators to check the runoff risk advisory forecast before spreading manure on fields.

The tool helps determine the potential for manure runoff from a field, depending on weather conditions and soil temperature. Users can access it at <http://www.manureadvisorysystem.wi.gov/runoffrisk/index>.

The runoff risk advisory forecast includes maps showing short-term runoff risk for manure application. The maps account for soil saturation, temperature and precipitation on a scale of 1.5 square-mile grids. The risk maps are updated four times daily with the latest information from the National Weather Service.

“When applying manure, it is important to have a nutrient management plan that accurately identifies appropriate application rates and locations for spreading,” said Mark Witecha, DATCP soil and watershed conservation section manager. “The runoff risk advisory forecast can help farmers make more informed decisions and mitigate runoff potential by helping determine when the best time to spread is based on both current field conditions and short-term weather forecasts.”

For information about nutrient management planning, visit https://datcp.wi.gov/Pages/Programs_Services/Nutrient-Management.aspx.

Farmers should contact their crop consultant or county land conservation office for help identifying alternatives to high-risk spreading. Larger farms with a permit can also reach out to the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources. These professionals can help identify fields where the risk is lower as well as alternative practices, such as stacking manure in a safe location.

DATCP reminds manure haulers and drivers to put safety first when traveling on roadways in order to avoid spilling manure, prevent injuries and protect the health of people and the environment.

“Operator error accounts for a large share of the manure spills and incidents that occur between the farm and the field where manure is being applied,” said Kevin Erb, University of Wisconsin-Madison Division of Extension conservation professional training program manager. “Taking the time to be safe and maintaining your equipment are two ways to reduce the risk of an accidental manure spill. An accidental spill is not illegal, but failing to properly report and clean it up is.”

All agriculture and livestock operations must report spills or runoff that have the potential to impact surface or groundwater to the DNR’s 24-hour emergency spills hotline at 800-943-0003. Information about planning and prevention is available at <http://dnr.wi.gov/topic/agbusiness/manurespills.html>.

After not getting a turkey leg despite a Thanksgiving Day win in 2023, Green Bay Packers quarterback Jordan Love, left, made sure he got his in 2024 following the Packers 30-17 win over the Miami Dolphins. Joining Love in the celebration are Josh Jacobs (8) and Isaiah McDuffie (58).

A DELICIOUS THANKSGIVING STUFFING

Packers win on Thanksgiving Day in back-to-back years

BY LUKE REIMER
Green & Gold Express

After a year-long wait, Green Bay Packers quarterback Jordan Love finally received a turkey leg after beating the Miami Dolphins on Thanksgiving Day, 30-17.

Love was neglected of receiving the traditional cooked bird after Green Bay's dominant victory over the Detroit Lions last Thanksgiving. In Thursday's game against the Miami Dolphins, it looked as though Love really wanted a redo on the tradition.

He did so by completing 21-of-28 passes for 274 yards and two touchdowns. For the third straight week, Love did not throw an interception, after starting the season with 10 straight games throwing one.

"It was special," said Love with a smile, talking about receiving the turkey leg. "Obviously the joke is not getting a turkey leg last year. So to be able to come in here, get the win and get the turkey leg after – it was very delicious and it is something to celebrate."

Not only was Love looking for the turkey, but his teammates were seemingly playing for him to win it as well. Tight end Tucker Kraft, who finished the game with 78 yards on six recep-

The 2023 post-Thanksgiving Day cover of Green & Gold highlights the a Fox Sports mistake in not having a turkey leg for Packers QB Jordan Love. NBC made sure Love had a turkey leg after the Packers win over the Dolphins this year.

tions, said it was nice to see Love receive what he deserved after missing out on it last season.

"That was the one thing that was the most important to me was making sure that Jordan got his leg," said Kraft.

Jayden Reed was the recipient of both of Love's touchdown passes, as he finished the game with 24 yards on three receptions. Christian Watson registered 67 yards on two receptions, while Dontayvion Wicks recorded 30 yards on four receptions.

As for the run game, Josh Jacobs continued his stellar first season in Green Bay, as the former Las Vegas Raider totaled 43 rushing yards and one touchdown. Chris Brooks ran for 28 yards, while Emanuel Wilson added 20 yards on the ground to help round out Green Bay's three-headed rushing attack.

Miami Dolphins rookie Malik Washington muffed a punt early in the first quarter that was recovered by Green Bay inside the Dolphins' 10-yard line and led to a quick Packers touchdown.

"We have so many weapons on this team," said Jacobs. "We are so deep at every position, and on any given play, it can be something special if we all can do the right thing. It has been fun; it has been fun playing for a team like that."

On top of Green Bay's strong offensive performance, the defense registered yet another solid showing. With Miami's explosive offense looking strong and healthy over the past few weeks, Green Bay held its opponent to just 17 points. This comes after the Dolphins scored 34 points in each of the last two games.

Forced to pass for the majority of the game, Dolphins quarterback Tua Tagovailoa completed 37-of-46 passes for 365 yards and two touchdowns. Defenders Quay Walker, King-sley Enagbare, Lukas Van Ness, Brenton Cox Jr. and Kenny Clark each recorded a sack.

KEYS TO THE GAME

Win needed to break Lions' lock on division

By JACOB WESTENDORF
Green & Gold Express

The calendar has turned to December, and the Green Bay Packers are coming off a strong month of November.

After starting with a loss to the Detroit Lions, the Packers won their next two games against Chicago and San Francisco.

They finished off with a win over the Miami Dolphins, leading them into what is a massive game at Ford Field against Detroit.

The last time these two teams met, the Lions won in dominant fashion.

Jordan Love threw an interception to Kerby Joseph, which was returned to a touchdown just before halftime.

The Lions led by as many as 21 points, and the Packers were largely not competitive.

There has been no hangover from last year's loss in the NFC Championship Game. The Lions look like the most dominant team in the NFL.

They're 11-1 and have not lost since September.

The Packers are going to need to play their best game to knock them off, and have any chance at winning the NFC North.

Here are the keys to doing just that.

Packers' run defense vs. Lions' backfield

Jahmyr Gibbs and David Montgomery form one of the best thunder and lightning backfield combinations in all of football.

Gibbs is the lightning version of that and certainly lives up to the phrasing of lightning in a bottle.

Montgomery is the workhorse. His numbers may not be gaudy, but he's been a perfect fit for Detroit's physical offensive identity.

Those two, however, have been given a different nickname for their backfield. Gibbs is referred to as Sonic, while Montgomery goes by Knuckles.

It makes sense, given their identity running through these two men.

The first time these two teams faced off, Montgomery and Gibbs each scored a touchdown. Gibbs looked like he was moving at a different speed than most of the players on the field. He is as dynamic as it gets out of the backfield.

Green Bay's run defense has been up and down for most of the year.

They did, however, slow down Christian McCaffery and a powerful 49er run game that has typically tormented them in year's past.

Whether that was a by-product of Brandon Allen starting or not is up to you to decide, but that has not mattered in years past.

Detroit is able to stay balanced. Jared Goff is efficient and able to make plays with his arm. He's not simply a game manager for this Lions offense. They do, however, run everything through their run game.

The Packers need to slow that down.

Turnovers

One of the biggest reasons Green Bay was blown out by the Lions in early November was that they were sloppy.

That included six drops, but most importantly, a big turnover from Love.

Love has taken better care of the ball coming out of the bye week.

He did not throw an interception against Chicago, San Francisco or Miami. The Packers, perhaps not coincidentally, won all three games.

Love's interception by Joseph was returned for a touchdown and gave the Lions a commanding lead at halftime.

With the conditions, and overall health of Love's knee at the time, the Packers were all but buried at that point.

The Lions did recently overcome a game where Goff threw five interceptions. That's proof of how good the Lions are but also proof that there is a crack in that armor.

You can take the ball away from Goff and this Lions' offense.

Green Bay has not taken the ball away as often since the calendar turned to November.

They'll need to make sure that they take care of the ball on offense, while being opportunistic on the other side of the ball.

Packers vs Lions' second half defense

Aaron Glenn and the Detroit defensive staff have done an excellent job at making adjustments at halftime to slow down their opponents.

Green Bay's offense scored 21 points against San Francisco in their first game after the bye.

They have their moments where they are incredibly effective.

They also do a good job of getting in their own way at times.

Limiting mistakes is crucial, as every point matters in these big games against divisional opponents.

Green Bay Packers coach Matt LaFleur said having check-down options in the passing game opens up a lot for the team. He specifically pointed to Josh Jacobs (8) and Tucker Kraft (85). "Both those guys are so physical and they're tough to bring down, and when you do bring them down you feel them," he said. "Tuck (Tucker Kraft) is an animal and I think we all, I think you'd all agree with that. Both him and Josh (Jacobs), and it's not just those two guys. I think really, I just love the mentality of our football team. Our guys, they strain for one another. They fight. They block. They try to inflict pain, which, as a coach, you love to see."

Linebacker Quay Walker (7) posted two tackles for a loss for the second straight game, the first time in his career that he has posted multiple tackles for a loss in back-to-back games. Coach Matt LaFleur said Walker has been playing his best ball the last two games. "Collectively, our linebackers are playing pretty well right now, and you saw not only in the run game with Quay, but we're bringing him on blitzes, and he's extremely effective at setting some picks and then getting some pressure on the quarterback himself," LaFleur said. "He's a really talented football player and I think his best ball is in front of him."

THE MOMENT

PACKERS 30 vs. MIAMI 17

Green Bay Packers quarterback Jordan Love enjoys a turkey leg after the team's 30-17 win over the Miami Dolphins on Thanksgiving Day on NBC. In 2023, Love asked Fox Sports' Erin Andrews about his turkey leg after the Packers defeated the Detroit Lions 29-22. Traditionally, the player or players of the game get a turkey leg or a hunk of turducken after winning an NFL game played on Thanksgiving. John Madden started it in 1989 when he gave the first turkey leg to defensive end Reggie White after the Philadelphia Eagles beat the Dallas Cowboys. In 1997, Madden added turducken (a chicken stuffed into a deboned duck stuffed into a deboned turkey) to the tradition. When Love asked about the turkey, he was told there was no turkey to eat because the only turkey had been torn apart earlier by announcer Greg Olsen. That was not the case. Fox is always prepared for two turkeys on Thanksgiving - one in the booth and one postgame on the field. As it turns out, the turkey they saved for after the game had a Lions logo seared into the turkey as Fox expected Detroit to win, so Fox just dumped the tradition.
